Applicant and Security Interest Holder	a. Secures previous owner's assignment on back of Title Certificate and Tag Registration.
	b. Completes (TYPES) application for Title and Tag Transfer in name of new owner and shows name and complete address of security interest as appears on old Title Certificate.
	c. Applicant (new owner) signs application and pays title fee ($1.00) and Tag Transfer fee ($1.00)
Security Interest Holder	d. Transmits fees, application, old Title Certificate, and Tag Registration to Motor Vehicle Unit Title Section.
Motor Vehicle Unit	e. Processes application and forwards new Title Certificate to Security Interest holder.

NOTE: Substitution of Collateral should be handled in the same way as a Transfer of Equity with respect to title procedures.

D. VEHICLES PREVIOUSLY TITLED IN GEORGIA WITH NO CHANGE IN OWNERSHIP

1. Security Interest Created

Responsibility	Action
Security Interest Holder	a. Completes (TYPES) application showing name and complete address of Security Interest holder, date security interest created, and type of security interest.
	b. Application must show exact name and address of owner as recorded on outstanding Title Certificate - if not, form MV-18 must be submitted.
Owner	c. Signs application; (signature must be notarized).

NEW BULLETIN:

	d. Supplies outstanding Title Certificate and release of any security interest which may appear on outstanding Title Certificate.
	e. Pays title fee of $1.00
Security Interest Holder	f. Mails all documents and fee to Motor Vehicle Unit Title Section.
Motor Vehicle Unit	g. Processes application and forwards new Title Certificate to Security Interest Holder.

NOTE: When a loan application is made after title has been applied for but before it has been issued, check the owner's copy of the Title Application to see that no lien or security interest holder is shown. Arrange for the customer to surrender the Title Certificate when he receives it. Have him complete and sign a new Title Application. If any of the above steps cannot be completed, do not disburse proceeds until the Title Certificate has been issued and surrendered to you.

2. Reworking Existing Loans

Security Interest Holder	a. If previous security interest appears on the Title Certificate and original instrument is not released, no change in Title is necessary.
	b. If original instrument is released, complete application for new Title Certificate (follow procedures in D1) showing date of reworked loan.

E. VEHICLES PREVIOUSLY TITLED IN ANOTHER STATE

Responsibility	Action
Applicant (owner)	1. Completes (TYPES) application for Tag and Title, signs application, and has signature notarized. (Name must be identical to the name which appears on the out of state title).
	2. Supplies original out of state Title Certificate properly assigned.
	2a. If all spaces provided for assignment on the Title Certificate are filled, a notarized Bill of Sale is required to show complete chain of ownership.
	3. Supplies Release of Lien or Security Interest if reflected on outstanding Title Certificate.
	4. Pays title fee and tag fee.

NEW BULLETIN:

Tag Agent	5. Receives application, fees and supporting documents. 6. Issues license tag and gives owner's copy of application to applicant for his records. 7. Forwards original application, fee, and supporting documents to Motor Vehicle Unit Title Section.
Motor Vehicle Unit	8. Processes application and forwards Title Certificate to owner.

NOTE: If the bank creates a security interest in the vehicle before application for a Georgia Tag and Title is made, an application should be completed showing the bank as security interest holder. The owner of the vehicle should then present this application to the Tag Agent, purchase a tag for the vehicle, and return the validated owner's copy of the application to the loan officer before the loan proceeds are disbursed. If a Georgia title has already been issued for the vehicle, proceed as outlined in Step D-1.

F. TITLE FOR REPOSSESSION

Responsibility	Action
Repossessor	1. Completes (TYPES) application in the name of the new owner. 2. Supplies the outstanding Title Certificate. 3. Completes Release of Lien or Security Interest on back of Title Certificate, or on T-4 form if space not provided on Title Certificate. (This releases lien or security interest held against person from whom vehicle was repossessed. 4. Completes form T-16 (Affidavit of Repossession). 5. Supplies notarized Bill of Sale from Repossessor to party to whom vehicle is sold when sold to an individual. 5a. If assigned to a dealer for disposition, Bill of Sale is not required. 6. Supplies a copy of the original contract between the Repossessor and the person from whom the vehicle was repossessed.
Applicant (New Owner)	7. Signs completed application (signature must be notarized) and pays fee of $1.00. 8. Transmits application, fees, and supporting documents to Tag Agent.
Tag Agent	9. Receives application, fees, and supporting documents from applicant. 10. Gives owner's copy of application to applicant for his records.

NEW BULLETIN:

	11. Forwards original of application, fee, and supporting documents to Title Section, Motor Vehicle Unit.
Motor Vehicle Unit	12. Processes application and forwards new Title Certificate to owner.

G. TITLE ALTERATIONS AND EXCEPTIONS

1. Title Corrections

Responsibility	Action
Applicant	a. Completes a form MV-18 for all corrections required on title or tag registration except name of Manufacturer's I. D. Number and lienholder. NOTE: This form is only available at the Motor Vehicle Unit, State Office Building, Atlanta, Ga (1) If a name or lienholder change is required, you must follow the procedure for a new title. (2) If a Manufacturer's I. D. Number change is required and the I. D. Number is other than that reflected on the Statement of Origin or notarized Bill of Sale, a pencil tracing is required. For details, contact Motor Vehicle Unit, Atlanta, Georgia. If the correction is reflected on the Statement of Origin or notarized Bill of Sale, Form MV-18 is used.

2. Change of Name on Title

Responsibility	Action
Applicant	Follows procedures outlined in Section C-1, omitting steps c and e.
Applicant	a. Obtains a court order giving the complete description of the vehicle and a certified copy of the court proceedings. b. Completes application form reflecting the necessary information and has signature notarized. (The date of purchase is the date of the Court Order.)

c. Submits the above documents, with a fee of $1.00 to the County Tax Commissioner.

4. Duplicate Titles

Responsibility	Action

In the absence of the above documents, submits the current Title, with an affidavit of Inheritance (T-20 form) and a copy of the Death Certificate, and a completed application for Title, to the Motor Vehicle Unit.

OPERATING BULLETIN

SECTION LENDING GENERAL

SUBJECT TRANSFER OF EQUITY

TOPIC

Replaces Bulletin: LENDING GENERAL - TRANSFER OF EQUITY - Dated 7-9-69

The Transfer of Equity form (38-904) is a 6-part snap-out carbonized form, and replaces the older version. The terminology is that required by the Georgia Retail Installment Sales and Home Solicitation Act and Regulation Z, but it is intended that this form be used by both Sales Finance (including the C&S Financial Corporation) and Over-The-Counter operations. Z requires creditors to disclose certain information before the new customer (transferee) obligates himself by signing the transfer form. This form must be used where the original purchaser or borrower is selling pledged property under the condition that the new party assume the indebtedness. Certain commercial transactions are not subject to Z, but this form can be used, as applicable, for those transactions.

CREDIT REQUIREMENTS

From a credit standpoint, transfers should be examined closely. Be certain you are not merely deferring a repossession or other positive collection action. Very often the new party is merely assuming the indebtedness with no equity being paid to the original owner. The new party should have adequate equity by one or a combination of the following:

1. Paying loan up to date if past due.
2. Paying one or more payments in advance if loan is current.
3. Payment for equity to original owner.

Credit investigation and approval routines are the same as on any other new transaction.

INSURANCE ELIGIBILITY

Special care must be taken with respect to insurance election. In fact, you should determine what insurance the customer wants before going on to complete the Transfer of Equity form. We can make a Transfer of Equity ONLY where the new customer's eligibility and election are the same as the old customer's insurance status.

PROCEDURE

Complete the Statement of Transaction down through the Annual Percentage Rate based on the original transaction. (Over-The-Counter starts at line 7 (Consolidated Unpaid Balance), where "Amount of Loan" is the figure to be entered). Business consummated prior to the effective date of Regulation Z, July 1, 1969, will not have the insurance coverage separately itemized nor will the Annual Percentage Rate be shown. In these instances, show the total Interest and Discount amount which previously included insurance coverages as the Finance Charge and leave the Annual Percentage Rate blank. However, contracts or loans made July 1, 1969 and after, on which Transfer of Equity occurs, must show all of the Statement of Transaction information given on the original loan including a breakdown of insurance coverages, any other charges, and the Annual Percentage Rate.

Replaces Bulletin: LENDING GENERAL - TRANSFER OF EQUITY - Dated 7-9-69

When the paper has been endorsed to you by a dealer or other party, the consent of that other party should be obtained in the space provided at the bottom of the form. The new customer and the old customer must be given copies. The original is to be retained in the note file until paid out or for 2 years as specified by Z, whichever is longer. Enough copies are provided to include one in both the old and new customer's file, and to give one to the dealer, if it is a Sales Finance transaction. After conclusion of the transfer, get the original note, and

(1) Cross out old number.

(2) Assign new number.

(3) Attach original of the transfer.

(4) File again in note file in new number's place.

A. Date of Transfer
B. Original customer
C. New Customer
D. Bank of _____, National Bank, or Financial Corporation.
E. Present balance owed, which equals the Total of Payments in the Remaining Payment Schedule box. DO NOT INCLUDE LATE CHARGES. This would cause Regulation Z complications. You should, of course, collect them from the old customer.
F. Date of the original note or conditional sale contract.
G. Sales Finance transactions require completion of all this bracketed area.
H. Over-The-Counter transactions require completion of this bracketed area.
I. Must all be collected at time of transfer. DO NOT ADD TO TOTAL INSTALLMENTS DUE.
J. Sales Finance dealership name and address.
K. Sales Finance dealership authorized signature.

Customer is indebted to Holder in the amount of $ _____ secured and evidenced by a Security Agreement dated _____ 19____, under the terms of which the Statement of Transaction is as set forth hereon, and a security interest is granted to Holder on the following Property:

1. Customer hereby sells, transfers and assigns to Transferee all of Customer's rights, equity and interest in the Property and, with the consent of Holder, delivers the Property to Transferee. Transferee hereby assumes and agrees to fully and perform all obligations and covenants, contained in the Security Agreement which is incorporated herein by reference and refers to the Holder as the Secured Party, including (a) Payment of all remaining installments of $ _____ each and any deferred installments and (b) the due performance of all the terms of the Security Agreement. Customer represents that the Property (and any other Property at times used or security as part of another or this transaction) has or will have at the time of delivery to Transferee a fair market value of not less than the unpaid balance due Holder as the amount of the purchase price financed, otherwise FINANCE CHARGE will be based on the basis of the Rights assigned, after first deducting an equitable charge of $18.00 ($22.00 if Property is a motor vehicle) from the FINANCE CHARGE.

2. The consent of Holder to the transfer by Customer to Transferee of all the former's equity and interest in the Property and the delivery of possession thereof to Transferee shall not operate to vary, alter, or affect Customer's obligations under the Security Agreement, and Customer shall remain as fully and completely bound thereby as though the transfer and delivery to Transferee had never taken place, or Holder consent thereto been given.

3. It is agreed that the liability of Customer under the Security Agreement or hereunder shall not be affected by any release, subsidence, compromise, settlement, extension, hope, time to time (whether or not longer than original period), or variation of terms effected by or with Transferee or any other person.

4. Customer does hereby authorize Holder or Transferee to have in force insurance on Transferee with fire, theft or other insurance as may be in force, so that the loss payable clause in policies or certificates of this insurance shall run in favor of Transferee and Holder as their interests may appear. Transferee assumes full responsibility for such transfer and agrees to maintain insurance on property as provided in the Security Agreement.

5. Transferee acknowledges receipt of a completed copy of this agreement.

TRANSFER FEE

The transfer fee should be paid at the time of transfer, by either party. A charge of $25.00 should be adequate to cover your cost of investigation of the new party and the details of handling on contracts covering automobiles, airplanes, farm
N equipment, and property improvement. Credit the fee on Over The Counter transactions to Miscellaneous Expense General - Other Income. On Sales Finance transactions, the fee should be deposited to the Financial Corporation's checking account in your city. Then, Financial Corporation General Ledger entries should be prepared debiting "Due From C&S - Operating Account" and crediting "Other Income." The original entries should be sent to the Financial Corporation bookkeeper in Atlanta. On other types of transactions, a $15.00 charge should suffice. This charge may be increased if you encounter unusual expenses in handling. Show "Transfer Fee" collected in the space on the form just below the Transferee signature block. (Regulation Z does not require that the Annual Percentage Rate be recalculated on the new transaction. It does require us to show any additional charge made to the new customer as the result of the transfer).

This form may be used whether the original instrument was recorded or not. The same procedure of perfecting our security interest should be followed on a transfer as on the original transaction.

PHYSICAL DAMAGE INSURANCE

Followup procedures for securing an insurance policy covering our interests will be the same as for an original transaction.

COMPLETING DISCOUNT SHEET

This is a major change from past procedure. A discount sheet should be prepared just as if this is a new loan. It should be treated as a new loan in all respects, with the exception of variations shown later in this section. This will assure that proper credit information is always given on either the old or the new customer. It is a simple wash-out transaction, with "proceeds" of the new loan going to pay off the net balance on the old account. This procedure also gets an up-to-date payment book to the new customer, and in his name.

The following example shows how to fill in those portions of the discount sheet that differ somewhat from the normal new loan or contract.

20 monthly payments of $50.00 remaining. Next payment due 6/1/70.

BALANCE REMAINING IS	$1000.00
Interest Rebate is	75.00
Dlr. Reserve Rebate is	25.00
Net Payoff is	$ 900.00

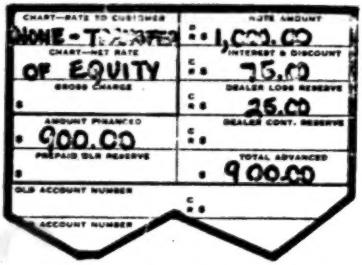
2. Enter Balance in Note amount blank, enter Interest Rebate and Dealer Reserve Rebate Due In Interest & Discount and Dealer Loss Reserve blanks.

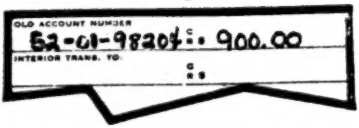
3. Enter the Net Payoff amount in both the Amount Financed and Total Advanced blanks.



4. Enter the remaining number of months that the loan has to run in the "No. of Mos." blank.

5. Enter today's date in the Date of Loan blank.

6. Close out old transaction by entering the old account number and amount of net payoff.



7. Prepare the necessary rebate tickets and interiors or cashiers check, as applicable. Normal loan procedure follows from this point on.

OPERATING BULLETIN

SECTION LENDING GENERAL

SUBJECT UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE

TOPIC GENERAL

 Date 8-15-64

New Bulletin

This bulletin does not attempt to cover all of the ramifications of the Code, but only discusses the major areas which affect Installment Lending and our methods of operation. Do not construe this bulletin as C&S Policy in every respect. Policy will at times deviate from procedures and provisions set forth here. These will be made after consideration of the probable and possible exposure, cost of handling and expenses involved in various approaches, and convenience to ourselves and our customers. Bulletins such as "Lending General - Perfecting Security Interests" and other bulletins to be written in the future dealing with specific areas of consumer lending supercede this bulletin. In the absence of policy decisions to the contrary the provisions of this bulletin should be followed to obtain reasonable protection for the Bank under the Code.

Situations are bound to arise which are not covered in this bulletin, and in such instances which involve legal questions, consult with your local attorney or with System Consumer Credit for clarification from our attorneys. Operational or policy questions should be discussed with System Consumer Credit.

All forms used in our installment lending on which the Code has a bearing have been revised by our attorneys. All such forms should carry a 1-64 or subsequent revision date.

1. Purpose - The primary purposes of the Code are to clarify and simplify the many and varied laws and interpretations now governing commercial transactions and to standardize the laws of the various states. To both of these ends we will benefit by knowing more specifically our position in any commercial transaction, not only in the State of Georgia, but in other states now under or as they adopt the Code.

2. Effective Date - The Code became effective in Georgia on January 1, 1964. Any transaction entered into prior to the effective date of the Code will be governed under the laws in effect at the time the transaction originated. Future advances, extensions, renewals, taking additional collateral, or other events or transactions occurring after January 1, 1964, under an agreement executed prior to the effective date will be governed by the Code. All transactions entered into after January 1, 1964, will be governed by the Code.

3. General Routine and Procedures - Have not been greatly changed because of the Code and except where specifically prohibited we are allowed to contract with our customers as we see fit. However, there are certain clearly defined rights, duties, and procedures with which we must comply if we are to take advantage of the privileges provided and prevent incurring penalties for failure to perform as prescribed.

ARTICLE 9 - SCOPE - EXCLUSIONS Article 9 of the Code deals with secured transactions and with few exceptions this bulletin is related to this part of the Code.

New Bulletin

1. Scope - Generally, Article 9 applies to all secured transactions within the jurisdiction of Georgia except those listed under "Exclusions" below.

   A. Property located in other states is governed under the laws of such other states, except where it is intended, at the time of the transaction, that the property is to be brought into Georgia and is actually brought into Georgia within 30 days.

2. Exclusions - This article does not apply to any: (a) right of set-off, (b) transfer of or interest in any policy of insurance, (c) savings accounts or other forms of deposits, (d) real estate mortgages, or (e) security interests subject to a statute of the United States such as the Ship Mortgage Act.

DEFINITIONS Some new terminology has been introduced by the Code, and while the meaning of most of the terms is clear, it is necessary that each be understood as they are now a matter of common usage and without an understanding of these terms, it will be impossible to gain any understanding of the Code itself. The best method of gaining a clear understanding of these terms is by considering:

1. THE PEOPLE OR PARTIES INVOLVED

   A. Debtor - This is the direct borrower or buyer. He is the person receiving the primary benefit of the advance or other consideration.

   B. Secured Party - This is the bank when we give value and take an interest in some collateral to protect ourselves. It also includes others such as a merchant who takes a conditional sales contract. The merchant is a secured party and the buyer is a debtor.

   C. Account Debtor - Under certain circumstances a "Debtor" becomes an "Account Debtor" This occurs when the Debtor's obligation is sold or discounted to a third party. In this case, the original debtor becomes the "Account Debtor"; the original secured party becomes the debtor (he is considered a borrower and receives direct benefit of the advance or other consideration); and, the new or third party becomes the secured party; i.e. - an individual buys a TV from a dealer and signs a conditional sales contract - he is the debtor and the dealer is the secured party. The dealer then discounts the conditional sales contract with his bank. The bank now becomes the secured party, the dealer, the debtor; and the buyer, the "Account Debtor".

   D. Lien Creditor - This is the "attachment creditor." He is not one of the parties involved in the transaction itself but one who acquires a lien on property by attachment, levy, or the like. Note that under the Code this also includes: an assignee for the benefit of creditors from the time of assignment, a trustee in bankruptcy from the date of filing of the petition, and a receiver in equity from the time of appointment.

New Bulletin

2. THE TRANSACTION ITSELF

A. Security Agreement - Is any writing which conveys an interest in certain collateral to a secured party and includes bills of sale to secure debt, conditional sales contracts, chattel mortgages, etc.

B. Security Interest - When a security agreement is taken, this provides a security interest in the collateral described. Prior to the Code we had a security interest in an automobile or other type of collateral when the customer signed and delivered to us a bill of sale to secure debt or a conditional sales contract covering the particular property.

C. Purchase Money Security Interest - This is a specific type of transaction and is of particular importance as will be discussed later. It is a security interest as previously discussed, but in addition is an interest taken by a lender or retained by a seller when the purpose of the value given was to make it possible for the customer to acquire rights in or use of the collateral. This purchase money security interest is limited to the extent that the value given is actually used for the purchase of the merchandise. In other words, if we make a loan which the customer tells us is for the purchase of a television and he uses the money for something else, even though he may have the television, we do not have a purchase money security interest in it. Therefore, we must be able to substantiate a purchase money security interest, and the best way is by making the disbursement of proceeds jointly to the borrower and seller or directly to the seller. All conditional sales contracts are purchase money security interests.

D. Financing Statement - (19-891) - This term is not in any way related to a financial statement and should not be confused with it. It is the media we use to give notice of our interest in the collateral to protect our interest against subsequent secured parties and lien creditors. This must be in written form; it must be signed by both the debtor and the secured party and give the address of each. This is a completely new form and replaces our old "recording copy."

E. Statement of Continuation, Partial Release, Assignment - (19-892) - This term refers to the media used to extend the time of notice given in the original Financing Statement, and it is also the means by which notice is given for the partial release of collateral assignment. Its use is discussed in the subsequent paragraph "FILING TO PERFECT."

3. THE COLLATERAL

In the above sections we have discussed the parties involved and methods of granting and taking a security interest in collateral. While there are few new terms introduced in regards to collateral, there is considerable difference in the meaning, from that which we have normally applied, of some of the following terms. It is absolutely necessary that we clearly understand these new definitions in order that we recognize the proper category to which any individual piece of collateral belongs.

A. Goods - This is tangible property other than real estate. Goods include most of the collateral we take in consumer lending and more specifically include all things which are moveable at the time the security interest attaches or which are to become fixtures. This term also includes the unborn young of animals and growing crops, but would not include such things as money, documents, instruments, accounts, chattel paper, contract rights or general intangibles. Goods is a very broad classification and is subdivided into four specific groups determined by the purpose or use of the goods:

(1) Consumer Goods - This is no longer as broad as it used to be, but is specifically goods used, or bought for use primarily for personal, family or household purposes.

(2) Equipment - This is goods used, or bought for use, primarily in a business (including farming or a profession). This also includes goods owned or purchased by a debtor who is a non-profit organization or a governmental subdivision or agency; and, any other goods which do not specifically fit under the definitions of consumer goods, inventory, or farm products. It is important to recognize here the importance of usage; i.e., a refrigerator which would normally be consumer goods by character would be equipment if it were purchased by a merchant and used in his retail store. Likewise, an automobile will be consumer goods when the person owning it uses it for his own personal purposes; however, if he is a salesman and buying and using it in his business, then it is equipment.

(3) Farm Products - This is crops, livestock, or supplies used or produced in a farming operation. Note that an item such as a farm tractor does not fit under this definition, but is equipment.

(4) Inventory - This is goods held by a person for sale or lease. While this is very similar to the definition we have always applied, the Code broadens the meaning by including raw material where in process and other materials used or consumed in a business.

Extreme care must be taken to understand these divisions clearly and not to make the mistake of considering collateral as belonging to one of these groupings because of the very nature of the collateral itself rather than the usage of the collateral. For example, there is a tendency on our part to refer to a piece of road building machinery as "equipment." This may or may not be the case; when it is on the dealer's floor for sale, it is inventory.

B. Intangibles - Are such things as contract rights, accounts receivable, literary rights, etc. This has little application to our installment lending and will not be discussed in this bulletin.

C. Other Collateral - Are combinations of tangible and intangible collateral. These are written agreements which alone represent an ultimate right of some particular value.

(1) Chattel Paper - Is a written agreement(s) which evidences both the monetary obligation and the security interest in specific goods. A note and a security agreement or a combination note-security agreement is chattel paper - as is a conditional sales contract.

(2) Documents - Are bills of lading, warehouse receipts or other such written agreement which represents a specific right to certain goods held by a bailee.

(3) Instruments - Are stock certificates, notes, checks, drafts and other such written agreements which evidence a specific right to payment of money and are not themselves security agreements or leases.

OBTAINING A SECURITY INTEREST In transactions governed by the Code, there are two methods by which we obtain a security interest in collateral.

1. By Taking Possession - This is physically holding the collateral as we have always done in loans on stock certificates. There is no change in our procedures. A collateral note is obtained to evidence the debt and possession of the collateral is taken. No security agreement is needed.

2. By Taking a Security Agreement - Having the customer sign a security agreement reasonably describing the collateral.

When do we get our security interest?

Our security interest does not necessarily become effective immediately upon taking the security agreement. There are three requirements for a security interest to become effective, and these are: (a) that there be an agreement, (b) that value be given, and (c) that the debtor acquire rights in the collateral. As soon as these three events occur (no matter in what order) a security interest attaches. This phrase "attachment of security interest" is used often, and it is important to recognize the three requirements which are necessary and will determine the time of attachment. As an example, you may take a security agreement to give an interest in a specific automobile, you may advance the money to the customer for the purchase of this automobile, but your interest would not attach until the customer made the payment and acquired rights in the automobile. The important point to recognize is that the date of agreement does not necessarily indicate the date of attachment. The importance of this will be discussed later in regard to priorities.

RIGHTS TO COLLATERAL The entire purpose of our taking a security agreement or taking possession of certain collateral is to give us rights in the borrower's property for the purpose of securing his indebtedness to us. Our protection is the right of having or gaining possession of the collateral in event of default and then making recovery through its disposition. Our rights in the property are affected by two factors: (1) the contractual right given to us by the customer, and (2) conflicting rights of other parties also claiming an interest in the collateral.

Our contractual right between us and our borrower is good in all cases according to the terms of the agreement. The Code puts some limitation on secured parties to the extent that absolutely unfair (unconscionable) advantage of the borrower cannot be taken. As a practical matter we are using our own security agreements designed by our attorneys or taking possession in our normal manner and will not need to further concern ourselves with this limitation.

However, there will occasionally be two or more conflicting claims on the same collateral other than the owner or borrower's claim. As a result of the possibility of conflicting claims, it becomes necessary that we put ourselves in the best position possible. In the past we have done this by recording our bill of sale or other such evidence in order to give notice of our claim to an interest in the collateral. As previously mentioned, recording copies have been eliminated and, in fact, recording as we used to know it is eliminated on transactions governed by the Code. Getting ourselves in this best possible position is referred to as "perfecting the secured interest."

How do we perfect since recording has been done away with?

1 By Possession - We may perfect our security interest by physically taking possession of the collateral if the collateral is letters of credit, goods, instruments, negotiable documents, or chattel paper. Our interest is perfected from the time we take possession and continues just as long as we retain possession.

2 By Filing a Financing Statement - This is the most common method of perfecting a security interest, and the manner and method of doing this will be discussed in more detail later in this bulletin. Basically it will be similar to what we have done in the past by recording.

3. Some Specific Purchase Money Interest - There are a limited group of goods in which the Code provides that a purchase money security interest, once attached, will thereby be a perfected security interest without the necessity of taking possession or filing a financing statement. It is necessary to be very specific in relying on this since any goods not meeting the specific requirements set forth can be perfected only by possession or by filing the financing statement. This automatic perfection is limited to, but includes, all purchase money security interests in (a) consumer goods, with the exception of vehicles required to be licensed or fixtures, and all purchase money security interests in (b) farm equipment having a selling price of $2500 or less, with the exception of vehicles required to be licensed or fixtures.

4. Certain Other Methods of Perfecting or Gaining Temporary Perfection in Goods.

   A. Vehicles Required to be Licensed - The manner of perfecting these is specifically excluded from the Code, and perfection will be governed under the rules set forth in the Motor Vehicle Title Act.

   B. A security interest in instruments or negotiable documents may be perfected without filing or taking possession for a period of 21 days from the time it attaches and to the extent that it arises for new value given under a written security agreement. This type perfection gives very limited protection. This will seldom be encountered in consumer lending but could arise in making a loan secured by negotiable stock certificates when the loan is made and the funds advanced for the purchase of the stock. If you leave it to the customer to deliver the stock to you upon issue, you are perfected for a period of 21 days, but you would lose to an innocent third party who gained an interest in the stock and took possession of the certificates. (In such cases, it is best to arrange directly with the broker to have the certificates delivered to you.)

   C. If you have a perfected security interest in instruments (including stock certificates) or documents as a result of possession, then you can remain perfected for a period of 21 days if you release the collateral for specific purposes such as sale, exchange, collection, renewal, etc. The trust receipt lists these purposes. Limited protection is provided and you would lose to innocent third parties.

   D. Perfection by Claim of Proceeds - A security interest in specific collateral continues in the proceeds received if the collateral is sold or exchanged. If the security interest in the collateral was perfected, then the interest in the proceeds is perfected for a period of 10 days after the sale. The perfected interest in the proceeds is a continuously perfected interest if the financing statement covering the original collateral also covered proceeds: or if not, a new financing statement covering the proceeds is filed within 10 days or possession of the proceeds is taken.

E. There are two other methods of having a perfected security interest in goods which we seldom will encounter in our installment loan operation. These involve an interest in goods which are in the possession of a bailee, warehouseman, etc. If a negotiable document has been issued covering the goods, then an interest in the goods themselves is perfected by perfecting a security interest in the document (this may be done by possession or by filing). If no negotiable document has been issued, then an interest would be perfected by a document being issued in the name of the secured party, by notification being given to the bailee of the secured party's interest, or by filing as to the goods themselves.

F. All purchase money security interest, except one in inventory, is temporarily perfected for 10 days against lien creditors, bulk purchasers and conflicting security interest provided that the secured party files within 10 days after the collateral comes into the possession of the debtor. A similar interest in inventory is temporarily perfected for 10 days against lien creditors or bulk purchasers but not against conflicting security interest.

PRIORITIES We have already discussed the fact that our agreement is good as between ourselves and our customer in accordance with its terms. Secondly, we have discussed the methods or factors which will give us a perfected security interest. The following then is for the purpose of discussing how good our claim to the collateral will be as related to other secured parties; lien creditors; other buyers; and, tax claims.

1. Other Secured Parties - The following four rules can be applied to determine priority with certain specific exceptions.

A. The four rules are:

(1) If one interest is perfected and the other is not, then the perfected interest will have the superior claim.

(2) If both of the interests are perfected by filing, then the one who filed first will have a superior claim to the collateral. This is no change from the position of recorded parties in the past.

(3) If both interests are perfected and at least one of them was perfected by some means other than by filing a financing statement, then the interest which was perfected first will have a superior claim to the collateral.

(4) If neither interest is perfected, then the interest which attached first will have the superior claim.

B. Exceptions to the above rules:

(1) A security interest in chattel paper or nonnegotiable paper may be perfected by filing. Even though this is done and is the first perfected, a subsequent security interest would take priority provided that the subsequent interest: (a) is perfected by possession, and (b) was acquired in the normal course of business, and (c) was taken without actual knowledge of the prior interest. If the first interest resulted only from a claim to proceeds, then the subsequent interest would prevail even though the holder had knowledge of the original interest.

(2) When the collateral is inventory, a subsequent purchase money security interest would take priority provided that (a) prior to the time the debtor receives possession of the inventory the purchase money security interest is perfected by filing, and (b) the one taking the purchase money security interest gives notification to the party having previously filed that he has or expects to acquire the purchase money interest in the inventory and describes the inventory by item or type.

(3) A subsequent security interest in fixtures, accessions, or products may take priority over a previously perfected security interest in the whole. All of these represent specific and usually identifiable property which becomes attached to or a part of some other larger piece of property. A fixture becomes attached to or part of the real estate; an accession is property such as tires, a motor or a radio which becomes attached to an automobile; and, parts of a manufacturer's inventory become a part of the finished product when the inventory is used in the manufacture of the finished product. A security interest which attaches to goods before they are installed, affixed to, or become a part of the whole takes priority over all persons having an interest in the whole, provided the subsequent security interest is perfected before future advances are made by the prior perfected security interest holder and that any such advances were made without knowledge of a subsequent interest.

(4) A subsequent security interest in crops will take priority over a previously perfected security interest, provided the subsequent interest is acquired (a) for new value given to enable the debtor to produce the crops, (b) not more than three months before the crops become growing crops by planting or otherwise, and (c) to the extent that the earlier interest secures an obligation due more than six months before the crops became growing crops.

2. Lien Creditors - As discussed under definitions, we know that this is the levying or attachment creditor and includes an assignee for the benefit of creditors, trustee in bankruptcy, etc. In determining priorities as between their interest and that of a secured party, we can consider the lien creditor as having an interest which is perfected as of the time the judgement is entered on the general execution docket, the assignment for the benefit of creditors is made, the trustee in bankruptcy from the date of filing the petition and receiver of equity from time of his appointment. The same rules set forth to determine priority between two secured parties will apply with the following exceptions:

   A. A purchase money security interest in inventory is temporarily perfected for 10 days against a lien creditor but not against a conflicting security interest.

   B. A lien creditor will not take priority over any security interest whether or not perfected if the lien creditor had knowledge of the existing security interest at the time he became a lien creditor.

3. Other Buyers - Whether or not our security interest would be lost to other buyers would be determined by the following rules:

   A. Regardless of whether or not we are perfected we would lose our security interest to a buyer in the ordinary course of business. Note that this means a buyer from one who is normally engaged in selling that particular type of goods but does not include a buyer of farm products from a farmer or a buyer from a pawn broker.

   B. In cases involving our purchase money security interest in consumer goods or farm equipment of $2,500 or less value (except when we are "super-perfected" by filing), we would lose our interest to an individual who buys for his own personal, family, or household use, or personal farming operation provided he buys without knowledge of our security interest.

   C. If our interest is in chattel paper, whether or not we have perfected by filing, then a purchaser of that chattel paper in the normal course of business and without specific knowledge of our security interest would take priority over our claim.

D. If our security interest is in goods, instruments, documents, or chattel paper, a buyer of these goods not in the ordinary course of business would still take priority over us, provided that the buyer gave value, received delivery of the collateral and had no knowledge of our security interest and provided that our security interest is not a perfected security interest. (If such buyer is a transferee in bulk, he would not take priority over us if ours was a purchase money security interest and was then perfected by filing within the ten day period.)

E. Anyone that is not a secured party but purchases an interest in accounts, contract rights, and general intangibles as a transferee takes priority to the extent that he gives value without knowledge of the security interest and before the security interest is perfected.

4. Taxes and Other Claims

A. Property taxes duly assessed on the subject collateral take priority over all security interest in the collateral.

B. Liens for other state taxes will take priority over a security interest which is not perfected at the time execution for such taxes are entered on the execution docket. There is a conflict of opinion on certain portions of this rule; however, our attorneys feel that we can operate on this principle.

C. Liens for other unpaid taxes will take priority over security interest, but only if execution of the lien is duly recorded before we perfect our security interest; also, any purchase money security interest, whether or not perfected, will always take priority over such liens.

D. A year's support to the family duly set apart in collateral prior to the time we perfect our security interest would take priority over us.

FILING TO PERFECT The importance of perfecting a security interest has been discussed as well as those circumstances where filing is necessary to perfect. As previously mentioned, a financing statement (the paper to be filed) must be signed by both the borrower and the customer. There is an important exception to this in that a financing statement covering property brought into Georgia from another state does not have to be signed by the borrower if the security interest was perfected in the other state. One other specific provision of the Code affecting a filing is that one which is made in the proper place in this state remains effective even though the debtor's residence, place of business, or the location of the collateral is thereafter changed. Keep in mind, however, that if the residence or other change involves a move from Georgia to another state, then we must follow to perfect in the other state since the laws of that state would then likely govern.

1. What is Filing? - This is tendering or presenting to the Clerk of Superior Court a financing statement along with the established fee, or, acceptance of a financing statement by the Clerk of Court.

2. Where to File? - In Georgia, filing is to be with the Clerk of Superior Court and, of course, this applies only to transactions to be governed by Georgia law. The following rules will help in determining the county in which filing is to be made:

   A. If the goods are, or are to become, fixtures, then filing should be made with the Clerk of Superior Court in the county where a mortgage on the real estate involved would be recorded.

   B. In all cases other than when the collateral is fixtures, or vehicles to be governed by the Title Act, the proper county in which to file is:

      (1) When the debtor is a resident individual, file in the county of his residence.

      (2) When the debtor is a partnership, corporation or other business entity, or a non-resident individual, file in the county in which the principal place of business in Georgia is located. However, if there is no principal place of business in Georgia, then file in the county where the property is kept or used.

3. When to File? - Filing should always be made as soon as practical since with few exceptions priority is given to the first to file. It is important to understand that filing can be made prior to the completion of other requirements to perfect in which case perfection dates from the time of attachment of the security interest.

4. Duration of Filing - The financing statement may or may not show a maturity date; this is a matter of choice of the lender. If a maturity date is shown and is for five years or less, the filing is effective until 60 days after the maturity date. If no maturity date is shown, the filing is effective for 5 years. The perfection period can be extended by filing one or more successive continuation statements which can be filed within 6 months before or 60 days after the stated maturity date or 6 months before the expiration of a five-year effective period. A continuation statement does not have to be signed by the borrower, but it must reflect the file number of the original statement.

New Bulletin

When no maturity date is shown, filing of a continuation statement 6 months before the original statement lapses will result in perfection continuing for five additional years after the original expiration date; i.e., a financing statement showing no maturity date is filed on inventory for the purpose of a continuing lien which perfects for five years. Four and one-half years later a continuation statement is filed which continues perfection to the tenth year rather than for only five years after the date the continuation statement is filed.

5. Cost of Filing:

   A. An original or continuation statement whether or not an assignment is included or indicated. $2.50

   B. A termination statement. $1.00

   C. An assignment or statement of assignment accompanying a termination statement. $2.00

   D. A subsequent financing statement indicating an assignment of all or part of the rights. $2.00

   E. A separate statement of assignment. $2.00
   (Note that an assignment may be included in the original statement at no extra charge.)

   F. A statement of release of collateral. $2.00

   G. To obtain a copy of a filed financing statement from the Clerk of Court, it is necessary that the number of the financing statement be furnished to the filing officer. None

RIGHTS OF ACTION AND OTHER REMEDIES IN EVENT OF DEFAULT When our debtor is in default under a security agreement, we may reduce our claim to judgement, foreclose, or otherwise enforce the security interest by any available judicial procedure. Or, we may repossess the collateral if this can be done without a "breach of the peace" and, if the security agreement so provides, we can require the customer to assemble the collateral at a place reasonably convenient to both parties. Normal procedures will not vary from those we have been following in the past with the exception of the disposition of the collateral. There are rather specific provisions and requirements which we must carefully observe in disposition of any collateral. Failure to observe these can result in rather severe penalties.

1. Sale or Retention of the Collateral - The Code provides that unless a debtor waives his rights after default, repossessed collateral must be sold or specific procedures followed to permit retention of the collateral. At any time before these things are done, the customer can reclaim the collateral by satisfying the unpaid balance plus costs.

A. Sale of the Collateral - Sale of the collateral may be by judicial sale, public sale, or private sale. We must give reasonable notice to the customer and in some instances to other interest parties of the sale or intent to sell. An exception to this is if the collateral is perishable or threatens to decline speedily in value or is of a type customarily sold on a recognized market, then notice of the sale or intent to sell is not required.

Secondly, in the event of the sale of any collateral, we must account to the debtor for any surplus and are entitled to any deficiency unless the collateral is accounts, contract rights, or chattel paper, in which case we are entitled to a deficiency and have to pay any surplus only if so agreed in the security agreement. We may alter these rights in our security agreements.

(1) Judicial Sale - When handled through the Courts, notice is not our responsibility.

(2) Public Sale - This is a sale by or on behalf of the secured party held at a specified time, date, and place (all being commercially reasonable). Advertisement of the intended sale must be placed in the paper where the sheriff advertises his sales in that area at least once each week for two weeks preceding the sale. The advertisement must specify the time, date, and place and describe the property to be sold. In addition to this advertisement, a reasonable notice must be given to the debtor and if the property is anything other than consumer goods, to any other person having a security interest in the collateral who has filed a financing statement indexed in the name of the debtor in this state, or who is known to have a security interest in the collateral. At such a sale we may bid and buy.

(3) Private Sale - If the sale is to be a private sale, that is a negotiated sale, reasonable notice must be sent to the debtor and to other interested parties qualifying under the conditions set out under (2) above. The notice must describe the collateral and state the date and time after which a private sale is to be held. A private sale must be commercially reasonable and we as a secured party cannot buy.

(4) In addition to the requirement to sell, a special requirement applies to the situation where the collateral is consumer goods and the debtor has paid 60% of the cash price in a purchase money security interest or 60% of the loan in any other security interest and has not specifically renounced his rights under this article after default, then the secured party must dispose of the collateral by sale within 90 days.

B. In all cases except where the collateral is consumer goods in which the customer has paid 60% of the cash price or 60% of the amount of the loan, we may, after default, propose to retain the collateral in satisfaction of the obligation. Written notice of such a proposal can be sent to the debtor and except in the case of consumer goods to other interested parties, and unless the debtor or other interested parties object in writing within 30 days then the collateral can be retained but the debtor's obligation is completely satisfied. In the event objection is received in writing, then the collateral must be disposed of by sale.

C. If we release the collateral to our dealer or to any endorser, guarantor, or assignee, then all of our rights and duties pass with the collateral to the new holder and must be observed by him. Such a release or delivery is not considered a sale.

OTHER GENERAL BUT SPECIFIC DUTIES REQUIRED OF A SECURED PARTY

1. If the debtor sends to us a signed statement indicating what he believes to be the aggregate amount of unpaid indebtedness as of a specified date and requests that we approve or correct his statement and return it, we must comply with his request within two weeks after receipt by sending a written correction or approval. Likewise, the debtor may request us to approve or correct a list of the collateral claimed, and we must do so within two weeks; however, if the claim is a security interest in all of a particular type collateral, we can so indicate in our reply and not approve or correct the itemized list. The debtor is entitled to such a statement once every 6 months without charge, but we may assess a charge not exceeding $10.00 for each additional statement.
Note: This does not apply to such a request from anyone other than the debtor himself and is no authority to give out confidential information on our customers.

2. If the debtor's obligation to us has been satisfied and we have no further commitment to make advances or to incur other obligations, we must on written demand by the debtor send to him a statement that we no longer claim a security interest under the financing statement which we must identify by file number. Such a termination statement must be signed by the person of record or include or be accompanied by the assignment or a statement by the secured party of record that he has assigned the security interest to the signer of the termination statement.

In the event that such a request for a termination statement is received by one who has transferred the security interest to another party such as one of our dealers transferring the conditional sales contract to us, then the one receiving the request must notify the debtor by disclosing the name and address of any successor in interest known to him, and he is liable for any loss caused by the debtor as a result of failure to do so.. A successor in the interest is not subject to this section until the request is received by him.

3. The secured party must exercise reasonable care in the custody and preservation of collateral in his possession. This is no problem to us since this has always been done; however, the Code includes in this the responsibility of taking necessary steps to preserve rights as against third parties in instruments or chattel paper. This duty cannot be waived; however, it can be modified which has been done in the revision of our notes and security agreements.

OPERATING BULLETIN

SECTION OVER-THE-COUNTER

SUBJECT APPLICATION AND INTERVIEW

TOPIC

 Date 11-10-67

NEW BULLETIN:

Consistent with our concept of personal banking, C&S considers the personal interview to be the best means of obtaining information from consumer loan customers. The interview is a vital phase in the credit decision process. This bulletin suggests guidelines to be followed in personal interviewing. It covers the purpose of an interview, qualities of interviewers, preliminary stage-setting, introduction to the customer, the step-by-step securing of information using the discount sheet, and closing the loan.

Personal interviewing provides numerous advantages over the practice of some banks which allow the customer to fill out his own application before seeing a loan interviewer. The purpose of the personal interview is:

1. To emphasize the bank's desire to be of personal service. This sales contact can result in a loan, but it can also result in selling additional bank services on the spot, and setting up a long-time customer who will use many of our services over the years.
2. To get a first-hand appraisal of the borrower, thus aiding in the credit decision.
3. To find out why the customer wants this loan, and to discuss the purpose of the loan to determine if the loan will serve his needs or accomplish his purpose.
4. To develop sufficient personal data and financial information.
5. To aid in the identification of the customer.

QUALITIES OF INTERVIEWERS

To be effective, loan interviewers should develop certain qualities:

1. The interviewer should know his product thoroughly and how to use his product knowledge to sell bank services. The interviewer must use every opportunity to sell specific bank services. The interview gives us a unique opportunity to sell because of personal facts and financial data brought out during the course of the interview. Any lack of confidence is usually imparted to the customer, so the interviewer must learn his forms, rates, and procedures, as well as his interviewing techniques. Occasional brush-up study and role-playing can be a wise investment. Nothing builds confidence better than knowledge and practice, which incidentally, is also known as experience.
2. All loan requests should be approached from the standpoint of trying to make the loan a bankable proposition.
3. The interviewer should develop the exercise of sound judgment and apply common sense to the loan request.
4. The interviewer should be well versed in public relations and human nature.
5. The interviewer should be a student of both local and national economic conditions.

NEW BULLETIN:

The interviewer must acquire skills in developing questions to bring out all the facts necessary for a proper credit decision. Many customers are unable to state their objectives clearly. Often the customer will tend to undersell his financial situation, due to failure to communicate or fear of approaching a bank for a loan. The alert interviewer will draw the favorable aspects of the loan application from the customer by careful and considerate questioning. Two areas of the interview that are most often obscured by the customer are namely, the purpose of the loan and the lists of debts the customer owes. Purpose of the loan, such as "to pay bills" is too general. Interviewers should bring out the specific names of creditors and the amount owed to each one.

Many interviewers have difficulty listening in an attentive manner without pre-evaluating the person's words according to the terms of their own frame of reference and experience. Too often, interviewers are too busy thinking of what they are going to say and drawing hasty conclusions to stop and listen to the customer intelligently. Don't jump to conclusions. Do give the customer the full benefit of undivided attention and thought. Try to see his problem from his viewpoint as well as our viewpoint.

A few customers may show resentment to an interviewer's questions. Generally, a tactful explanation of the reasons for the information requested will suffice to overcome the customer's reluctance. If the borrower realizes that his objectives are understood, and that we have a sincere desire to help him, he will usually cooperate to the extent desired.

PROCEDURE

Interviewing of loan customers should take place in an atmosphere of privacy. Without reasonable privacy, a customer will not talk freely. In addition, steps should be taken to reduce interruptions to a minimum. For example, the interviewer should answer his telephone, but tell the caller that he has a customer - then ask if he can take his number and return the call a little later. If at all possible, the receptionist should introduce the customer to the interviewer and bring the customer's credit file, if available, to the interviewer. The interviewer's desk should be stocked with supplies for all C&S services. Smoking should be at the customer's option, not the interviewer's.

Upon being introduced to the customer, the interviewer should be certain to understand the customer's name correctly, and write it down on the Discount Sheet as the interview begins. Use of the customer's name throughout the conversation is important. The first few moments of the interview are significant in establishing proper communications with the customer. The interviewer should welcome the customer, make him feel at ease, and give the impression that the customer is doing the bank a favor by applying for a loan. He should control any nervous mannerisms which might suggest a lack of confidence to the customer. Every interview should be approached with an attitude of personal interest in the borrower. The customer's request may seem insignificant, but the interviewer should never convey that impression.

NEW BULLETIN:

The Discount Sheet is the basic guide used in interviewing. The Discount Sheet is a means for billing, and also the gathering of personal and financial data to be verified by credit investigation. The following are sections of the Discount Sheet which are important to the credit decision and should be completed legibly:

1. NAME - The customer's full name is needed for billing purposes, and for proper credit investigation. Caution should always be exercised to be certain that the customer is properly identified.
2. ADDRESS - Certain areas present marginal credit risks, such as slums and transient neighborhoods. Accuracy of address is necessary for billing and also for credit verification. Four lines of 22 spaces each are available for name and address. This allows us to handle names of joint makers, and unusually long addresses, such as overseas addresses. There is no reason not to get a full address, including ZIP code. When a P. O. Box is given, you should also obtain an address sufficient for physical location of the customer.
3. AGE - Maturity of the individual is an important credit consideration. The borrower must have legal capacity to sign a note. Showing the age on the application is necessary for insurance purposes, also.
4. PREVIOUS ADDRESS - Location of the customer's previous address aids in credit investigation, particularly if the customer has moved in from out-of-town.
5. TELEPHONE NUMBER - Telephone numbers of both the customer's residence and employment are most helpful in the event of collection or other contact needed with the customer. Absence of a telephone is a red flag, requiring a closer evaluation of the customer's credit. In many cases, an unlisted telephone number is a red flag, also.
6. WIFE'S NAME - This information assists in credit verification and also in the event of skip tracing.
7. NUMBER OF DEPENDENTS - The number of dependents which a borrower supports bears directly on the customer's ability to repay. Interviewers should be aware that customers often neglect to include dependents other than children.
8. NEAREST RELATIVE - This information is vital in tracing a customer who has skipped. Be certain to obtain the name of a relative not living with the customer, and if possible the relationship, address, and a telephone number. Where we do not know the customer well, it is best to obtain the names of relatives of both the husband and the wife.
9. EMPLOYER - Employment should be verified with the employer whenever it has not been verified through our own files, or an agency report. Verification will aid in evaluating the employment skill of the customer and his permanency of employment. If the customer is employed by a large organization, his badge number or department number, and the name of his immediate supervisor should be listed on the Discount Sheet. If he is in the armed services his serial number should be on the Discount Sheet.

NEW BULLETIN:

10. INCOME - Net income after payroll deduction should be verified with the employer. If the customer states that he has other income, the reliability of the source should be determined along with some idea of the degree of regularity with which the customer receives it.
11. FORMER EMPLOYMENT - If the customer has been on his present job less than one year, his previous employment should be checked to determine length of service and reason for leaving.
12. PURPOSE AND AMOUNT - Answers in this area provide one of the keys to whether we have a bankable loan. Avoid any hesitation about careful inquiry into the purpose of the loan.
13. BANK ACCOUNTS - Knowledge of the bank accounts the customer has is important because it represents assets upon which he can rely in the event of financial difficulty. If the accounts are with another bank, or savings and loan association, we have a perfect opportunity to solicit these accounts for our bank.
14. REAL ESTATE - Ownership of property is evidence that the customer has some stability and also may own a substantial equity in the property. Interviewers should inquire whether the customer's real estate payments include taxes and insurance.
15. DEBTS - Careful interviewing is most important in this area. Interviewers must approach this portion of the interview with the assumption that the customer has debt. Questions concerning debts outstanding should include inquiries such as:
    a. Do you own an automobile?
    b. Where is it financed?
    c. Do you have any credit union debt?
    d. Do you owe any book clubs?
    e. Do you owe any oil companies?
    f. Do you owe any mail-order companies?
    g. Do you owe any finance companies?
    h. Do you owe any other debts?

    Some of these questions may bring out debt information that you would not have secured through a credit bureau report.

Check the Discount Sheet thoroughly to determine that you have sufficient information while the borrower is still present. If additional information will be needed before making a credit decision, be certain to let the customer know this, so that he will understand any delay in your decision. Be sure to get good identification from your customer, preferably a driver's license and another type of card that has a signature on it.

No loan commitments should be made before assembling all the facts and verifying them through credit investigation. Once a statement of commitment is made or implied by the interviewer, the customer is entitled to conclude that the loan will be made.

Revision of Page 5 only of Bulletin: OVER THE COUNTER - APPLICATION AND INTERVIEW - Dated 11-10-67

Basically, the Discount Sheet will suggest most of the information which should be brought out in the interview. Additional facts necessary to render a credit decision should be developed consistent with good judgment. DO NOT LEND ON THE BASIS OF YOUR IMPRESSIONS OF THE BORROWER, WITHOUT GATHERING FACTS AND VERIFYING THEM TO SUPPORT YOUR CREDIT DECISION.

CHECKLIST FOR CLOSING LOANS

Attention and follow-through on these items should result in properly closed loans.

1. DO NOT RUSH.
2. Review the terms of the loan with the customer. You can do this by recapping, in order, all of the numbered blocks on the note, plus the payment schedule and insurance selected or refused.
3. Explain how and where he is to make his payments. If he has a checking account with us, sell him on having payments charged to his account as they become due. If the customer does not bank with us, this presents a splendid opportunity to get a new account -- either Special or Regular checking account. From the customer's standpoint, convenience is the main selling point:

   a. He does not have to mail the payment or come into the bank to make the payment.
   b. Reduced cost of postage and/or checks.
   c. Money will be deducted from his checking account at a time of the month when he has just made a deposit. (No temptation to spend money before he writes us a check or comes in.)
   d. Debit ticket in his statement acts as receipt.
   e. Date of automatic charge can be changed in the case of vacations, customer to be out of town or emergency. All that is necessary is that he notify us a few days prior to the regular charge date. All that he needs to do is to tell you he wants it done - then the discount sheet is checked and filled in as shown here:

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS CODE 0 - NONE 1 - DEBIT CHECKING ACCT. FOR PAYMENTS 2 - SPECIAL COLLECTION HANDLING	TITLE OF ACCOUNT TO BE DEBITED FOR PAYMENTS	Mr. & Mrs. John R. Smith
	CHECKING ACCOUNT NUMBER	9'4 38 : 491
	DISCOUNTING AND COMPLETION OF DISCOUNT SHEET CHECKED BY:

Addition of Page 6 to Bulletin: OVER THE COUNTER - APPLICATION AND INTERVIEW - Dated 11-10-67

NOTE: Offices not yet on computer should continue handling just as in the past.

4. Always wrap up all of the details of the loan while the customer is still in the bank. Any collateral taken should be in proper order along with all necessary signed documents to perfect the bank's security interests, including any other papers incidental to the transaction. Followup cards for return of assignments, liens on title certificates and recorded financing statements should be made. Review all details of the loan so that contact with the customer for additional signatures and information is not necessary.

5. Closing the loan provides the interviewer with an excellent opportunity to sell other bank services as well as encourage the customer to return again when further borrowing is needed.

6. Give the customer your business card so that he will have someone to contact the next time he needs banking services, and thank him for the business.

OPERATING BULLETIN

SECTION OVER-THE-COUNTER

SUBJECT AUTOMOBILE LOANS

TOPIC

 Date 12-19-67

NEW BULLETIN:

Direct automobile loans represent the largest single classification, percentage-wise, of our total consumer loan outstandings, and are among the most desirable in the bank's portfolio. Comparatively large amounts and longer maturities combined with an adequate rate, low loss ratios and comparatively low collection costs result in an excellent return. In addition, the auto loan is repetitive, opening the door for future loans and providing more opportunities to cross sell other bank services. Next to the home, the automobile represents the largest investment the average consumer will make, and is an important part of providing complete "family banking." This bulletin sets forth the key points in financing an automobile.

CLASSIFICATION

1. Any loan secured solely by an automobile, regardless of the purpose of the loan, will be classified as an automobile loan.
2. If more than one type of security is carried on the loan, then the security with the greater value determines the proper classification.

CREDIT REQUIREMENTS

The value of the car being financed is an important factor in considering automobile transactions; however, any guidelines used must be tempered with judgment. The decision making factors in considering an automobile finance transaction, in order of importance are:

1. Creditworthiness of the purchaser or borrower. His credit background must show:
   a. Sufficient income - he should have enough income to pay all present expenses and obligations plus this car payment.
   b. Job and residence favorability.
   c. A marked tendency to pay obligations as agreed. A partial indication of this should be the absence of derogatory information in the credit file report.
2. Down-payment (equity).
   The use of a down-payment percentage in determining true equity in automobiles can sometimes be misleading. The use of the "list" or "sticker" price by new car dealers allows room for cash discounts and over-allowances on used cars. Where the amount of equity is a deciding factor, the following formula should be used to determine "true" equity and the advance adjusted accordingly:

   List Price as Shown by Invoice:

Cash Selling Price	$2,800
*Down-Payment (including trade in)	900 (33%)
Requested to Finance	$1,900

   *This figure will be placed in the "down-payment" space provided on the discount sheet.

E- 1472

NEW BULLETIN:

As Recomputed:

Black Book "Clean Sales Price" of Trade-in	$ 300
Cash	100
Total Down-payment	400
Requested to Finance	1,900
Adjusted Selling Price	$2,300

Actual equity based on true values is only 17% and additional down-payment may be needed, depending on the credit factors involved.

3. Collateral value of the automobile (wholesale or dealer cost). For the sake of consistency, our guidelines, for the maximum amount that should normally be advanced, are based on dealer cost of a new car or the NARC (Black Book) loan value of a used car.

Since June 1, 1967, the Black Book has been our guide in determining automobile values and for identification. It is a new service of the National Auto Research Company, Inc., Gainesville, Georgia. The Black Book is now being used by the majority of automobile dealers and lenders in our area because used car prices, based on weekly auction sales, are more realistic than NADA. New car valuations have been condensed to the major items affecting resale value, which should materially reduce the time needed to evaluate a new car transaction. To determine dealer cost, merely deduct 10% from the "dealer Whse + 10%" column on both the automobile and accessories. Also, we can predict the depreciation ratio of a particular model auto, based on actual depreciation of same model a year older.

ADVANCE AND TERMS

New Cars:

*Advance - Dealer Cost
Terms - 36 Months

Used Cars:

*Advance - Black Book Loan Value
Terms:
1 Year Old Models - 30 Months
2, 3, & 4 Year Old Models - 24 Months
5 Years Old and Older - 12-18 Months

*This amount will be placed in "NADA/Dlr.Cost/Value" space provided on the discount sheet.

Variances from these guidelines should be based on above average credits.

NEW BULLETIN:

EXTENT OF INVESTIGATION

The number and degree of apparent favorable credit and equity factors will determine extent of investigation. The first place to check is in our own credit files, or CIF, as applicable, following through to determine total bank indebtedness. This is to be done, without exception. You may be able to get a fairly current credit report from one of our own departments. Further credit investigation will be a matter of judgment. In most cases, you will want to secure a credit bureau file report, and determine then if you want further employment verification and trade reference updating.

APPRAISAL

An appraisal of a used automobile should be made whenever possible to determine the fact of existence, condition of the car in relation to loan value, and to obtain serial numbers. Certain conditions may justify waiving an appraisal, however, it is strongly recommended that appraisal be made when:

1. An over-advance is considered.
2. When purchase is being made from a dealer whose reputation is unknown to you, or questionable.
3. When we are refinancing a loan for the purpose of reducing payments.
4. When the loan is for debt consolidation and the auto is the major part of the collateral.
5. When the customer's credit background is somewhat lacking in strength.

The Appraisal Sheet (19-971 Rev. 3-55), is to be used for this purpose. See Over-The-Counter, Automobile Loans, Auto Appraisal Sheet.

RELATIONSHIPS WITH DEALERS AND SALESMEN

Most locations have valuable relationships with dealers and salesmen who refer customers to us. Such referrals in many cases come about because the car dealer was unable to get the transaction financed for the customer through his usual sources, consequently, it behooves us to be especially careful in our analysis of these situations. Although these are not sales finance dealers, they are an important continuing source of business for us. Here are some pointers that may aid in steadying such relationships.

DON'T	DO
1. Quote dealer cost to a customer, or even bring up the subject.	1. If the customer is "pushing" the subject, tell him that cost information is confidential, or "not available."
2. Tell a customer, "That's too much money to pay for that car."	2. Talk in terms of our maximum loan on that model car. Price and profits are the concern of the customer and [illegible] with the customer's credit and equity.

NEW BULLETIN:

3. Don't allow dealers and salesmen to get the customer to sign the note at the dealer's place of business.	3. Have notes signed in the bank in the presence of of the interviewer. This eliminates certain elements of fraud.

PURCHASE

Dealer: Purchase from a dealer requires three steps prior to disbursement of funds.

1. Contact dealer to ascertain trade-in and/or cash down payment and amount to be financed.
2. Since the dealer makes the application for certificate of title, you will have to inform him of the correct name and address of the lending office to be shown as lienholder.
3. Obtain description of auto and I. D. number.
4. See Disbursement section of this bulletin for payment of funds.

Individual: Purchase from an individual requires an early determination of whether a lienholder exists. If there is no lienholder - (seller has title certificate):

1. Get buyer and seller into the bank together, with all papers necessary to transfer title and registration to the new purchaser.
2. Complete the reverse of the Owner's Certificate of Registration and have the seller sign it in a notary's presence. (There is a $.50 transfer fee.) Be certain to enter C&S as new lienholder, showing amount.
3. Forward the Owner's Certificate of Registration to the Motor Vehicle Unit for issuance of a new title.
4. See Disbursement section of this bulletin for payment of funds.

If a lienholder exists:

1. Ascertain indebtedness on the auto, and to whom.
2. Obtain a net payoff. (Be sure you have enough loan proceeds to pay off lienholder.)
3. Disburse funds jointly. Check for outstanding balance on lien should be made out to lienholder, buyer, and seller. Buyer and seller should endorse.
4. Forward check to lienholder and request that title be forwarded to us, along with cancelled papers.

NEW BULLETIN:

5. Have seller sign a T-8 power of attorney form which enables us to sign in his behalf for transfer and titling purposes. This eliminates the need for the seller to return to the bank to sign a title transfer application.
6. Have buyer sign a MV-1 form in blank, which is held by us until we receive the title from the lienholder.
7. Upon receipt of title certificate from lienholder, we then sign, per the T-8 power of attorney, the seller's name (adding P.O.A.), and attach a copy of the T-8. This and the completed MV-1 form should then be sent to the Motor Vehicle Unit for issuance of a new title certificate.

REFINANCING

This will occur for three reasons - (1) to get additional money, or (2) to reduce payments, or (3) both.

If the car is already financed by C&S:

1. Determine what location has the loan.
2. Get the net payoff.
3. Disburse funds by check to the branch that holds the lien.
4. Since we are already listed as lien-holder on the title, simply request the title certificate from the branch presently holding it.

If the car is financed elsewhere:

1. Determine who has the lien.
2. Obtain net payoff.
3. Issue check jointly to customer and lien holder.
4. Have customer endorse check and forward to lienholder with letter requesting title certificate be forwarded along with cancelled papers.
5. Have customer sign a MV-1 form and hold until title certificate is received from lienholder.
6. Upon receipt of title certificate, forward it and the completed MV-1 form to the Motor Vehicle Unit for issuance of new title certificate.

DISBURSEMENT

1. The joint check is the preferred method of payment. Depending on type of purchase, payees should be - dealer and purchaser; buyer, seller, and lienholder; buyer and seller.
2. The check payable to purchaser is acceptable if we have secured a signed Borrower's Authorization (19-889 Rev. 6-55).

NEW BULLETIN:

3. Funds may be deposited to the customer's checking account.
4. A purchase draft may be issued when credit has been approved and customer has already signed a note for a specific amount of money.

DOCUMENTATION

1. Completed Discount Sheet (19-898 Rev. 5-66).
2. Completed Automobile Note-Security Agreement.
3. If funds are to be disbursed other than to borrower, secure signed Borrower's Authorization (19-889 Rev. 6-55).

PERFECTING OUR SECURITY INTEREST

1. On all 1963 and later model cars, our security interest has been perfected when we are shown as lienholder on the title certificate.
2. On 1962 and earlier models, we perfect our security interest by filing a T-3 Notice of Lien or Security Interest. The T-4 Request to Revenue Commissioner to cancel security interest is also required from a lienholder whom we are paying.
3. Except as noted above in (2), procedures for perfecting our security interest have been stated in this bulletin in each financing situation.

INSURANCE REQUIREMENTS

It is an accepted fact that automobiles that are pledged as collateral must be adequately insured against loss or damage. This is sound business practice for the borrower as well as the lender. In connection with C&S automobile loans:

1. Comprehensive and at least $100 deductible collision insurance is mandatory.
2. We require a copy of the insurance policy with our interest named in the policy.
3. Liability insurance is not a loan requirement, but our customers should be encouraged to have this coverage for their own protection.
4. The customer should be encouraged to include insurance for the full term of the loan.

It is important that we point out the customer advantage of full term insurance -- no annual or semi-annual premium coming due at a time that may not be convenient -- financing the total amount provides insurance protection without lapse for the period of the loan. The insurance premium can be financed as part of the automobile loan on a monthly basis. The total payment can be paid direct or deducted from a checking account. Additionally, the customer has the advantage of not being subject to any increase in rate during the policy period. From our own standpoint, insurance for the term of the loan decreases cost of handling and increases our profit by virtue of the additional amount financed.

NEW BULLETIN:

INSURANCE FOLLOWUP
This coverage is no longer available on loans made after 12-31-67. See Insurance - Coverage Failure, dated 12-4-67 for followup procedure.

CLOSING THE LOAN

Automobile Note and Security Agreement

1. This form should be signed by the borrower with the appropriate block indicated as to whether the automobile is to be used for personal or business purpose.
   a. Personal - If an auto is used less than 50% of the time for business purposes, this block should be checked.
   b. Business - This block should be checked if the vehicle is used more than 50% of the time for business purposes -- that is, if the vehicle is used primarily during the day in the operation of the driver's business or profession.
2. Descriptions of Automobile(s) must be exactly the same on all papers pertaining to the loan.
3. Statement of Insurance on back of note must show what coverage is used.

CHECKLIST TO USE BEFORE CLOSING AUTO LOANS

1. Use proper rate and terms.
2. Add the exact documentary fee to amount financed and compute interest on that amount. Do not show the documentary fee in amount financed on discount sheet.
3. On new cars, get serial number and motor number before you give customer money. If a draft is used, the dealer should fill in information on back.
4. Always check Black Book and indicate value of car and over-advance on discount sheet. Show purchase price, down-payment or trade-in and % down.
5. Get company name and address, and agent's name of customer's insurance company. Call agent to verify coverage. Require at least $100 Deductible and Comprehensive. Also give the agent the exact bank name and address to be shown on policy.
6. Get information from customer for Statement of Insurance.
7. On titled auto, get customer to sign all necessary forms and be sure that we can get title. If auto is being bought from reputable dealer, he will get it. If auto is purchased from individual, have customer bring title, properly assigned to him, to bank before you give him money. Be sure existing liens are released and we have all necessary documents to obtain title.

Replaces Bulletin: "AUTOMOBILE LOANS - AUTO APPRAISAL SHEET" Dated 1-11-47

The Automobile Appraisal Sheet (19-971 Rev. 3-55) was revised in 1955. This bulletin has been rewritten to include those changes, and to provide a complete illustration of the revised form.

USE OF APPRAISAL SHEET

This form should be used on all Over-The-Counter used automobile loans, and whenever any automobile is repossessed for ourselves, a dealer, or as a Foreign Claim. When used for repossessions where the vehicle is to be stored, be sure to have the completed Appraisal Sheet signed by a representative of the storage concern.

We should continue to base our used car advances on the "Loan Value" as reflected in current N.A.D.A. publications. With few exceptions cars should be inspected to determine their condition, and a combination of the N.A.D.A. "Loan Value" plus the condition of the car will help determine the proper advance.

FILING AND ORDERING OF THE APPRAISAL SHEET

After the loan has been made, the Appraisal Sheet should be filed with the other papers covering the loan in the customer's folder.

Your requirements of this form may be obtained in the usual manner from the Purchasing Department in Atlanta.

SECTION OVER THE COUNTER

SUBJECT AUTOMOBILE LOANS

TOPIC INSURANCE FOLLOWUP

NEW BULLETIN

Our customers have a continuing responsibility to us to furnish us with evidence of adequate insurance coverage on the collateral. Wording in our notes creates this insurance obligation, and empowers us to administer insurance monies and obtain insurance coverage when the customer has failed to do so. We frequently have to exercise those rights.

This bulletin covers the recommended followup routines for Over-The-Counter locations. The followup principles and methods involved here are very similar to those of our collection followup routine. Early stage followups are made by the insurance Followup Clerk. Later followups are to be made by the adjuster, who must exercise credit and collection judgment in connection with his followup. This is the "Personal Handling" stage. This procedure makes it clear that personal handling is the adjuster's responsibility - to conclusion.

USE OF FORM LETTERS

Please use no form letters other than shown or mentioned in this bulletin. Policy identification, routing, etc. will be expedited by following these standardized procedures. Use of two of these form letters, for instance, (38-1280 and 38-1285)* will (1) reduce initial insurance followup with the customer, and (2) eliminate the need for an insurance policy or copy of the policy. The properly executed form letter returned from the insurance agent can be placed in the customer's file in lieu of the policy or copy of policy.

*Stock numbers 19-1280 and 19-1285 can be used until present supplies are exhausted.

NEW TRANSACTIONS

FOLLOWUP

WHEN THE INSURANCE IS ORIGINALLY PLACED THROUGH THE C&S AGENCY, order coverage using the procedure outlined in the bulletin: INSURANCE - AUTOMOBILE PHYSICAL DAMAGE. No followup is required of the branch, unless the account requires personal handling. When this occurs, C&S Agency will refer the account to the branch with instructions.

WHEN C&S IS FINANCING BOTH THE VEHICLE AND THE INSURANCE COVERAGE, AND THE AGENT IS OTHER THAN THE C&S AGENCY, this is the procedure:

1. Pay the insurance coverage with a Cashier's check payable to agent or company, with following endorsement stamped on back:
   "By endorsing this check, the payee warrants and agrees that the coverages outlined to the payee in drawer's transmittal letter describing this check have been provided, and all conditions in that letter have been or will be met."

NEW BULLETIN

2. Prepare form letter 38-1285, Premium Transmittal and Insurance Confirmation Request in duplicate. See sample on page 3.
3. Send original to customer's insurance agent, including a return envelope. Copy goes to customer's file.
4. Prepare Insurance Followup Card #38-1060-0 (shown below) and suspense for 20 days.

   a. Check the information on the letter (or policy) for adequacy of coverage - type, amount, period, and premium paid. If a difference exists, refer immediately to the branch manager.
   b. If the policy is continuous (one that is renewed automatically upon payment of premium), write on the Insurance Followup Card in the "Expiration Date" section: "Continuous Renewal", and initial it.
   c. Staple the Insurance Followup Card to the policy or to the Premium Transmittal and Request Insurance Confirmation Request (38-1285). File in the customer's folder to make it readily apparent that the insurance is on a continuous basis.
   d. If the policy has an expiration date, keep the card in the Insurance Followup Card tray under the followup date, which should be 10 days prior to expiration date.

See "Personal Handling" later in this bulletin.

WHEN THE CUSTOMER IS FURNISHING INSURANCE COVERAGE AND THE PREMIUM IS NOT A PART OF THE LOAN TRANSACTION, the Insurance Followup Clerk should:

1. Prepare form letter 38-1280, Insurance Confirmation Request, in quadruplicate. See sample on page 5. Send the original to the customer's agent (using information on discount sheet), including a return envelope. File the other three copies in the customer's folder.
2. Prepare Insurance Followup Card #38-1060-0 and suspense for ten days.
3. When the agent's letter or policy comes in:
   a. Check the information on the letter (or policy) for adequacy of coverage - type, amount and period.
   b. If the policy is continuous (one that is renewed automatically upon payment of premium), write on the Insurance Followup Card in the "Expiration Date" section: "Continuous Renewal". Staple the Insurance Followup Card to the policy or to the Insurance Confirmation Letter (38-1280). File in the customer's folder to make it readily apparent that the insurance is on a continuous basis.
   c. If the policy has an expiration date, keep the card in the Insurance Followup Card tray under the following date, which should be 10 days prior to expiration date.
4. If we have not gotten response in ten days, take the three copies of the form letter 38-1280 from the customer file and type on the upper right hand corner in capitals "SECOND REQUEST". Send one copy to the agent and one copy to the customer along with the 3x5 card that asks the customer for help in following up his insurance agent. This is form #38-1065-0, Confirmation Assistance Request (shown below). You will then be left with one copy of the form

IMPORTANT . . . To you and to us!
This is the second time that we have asked your insurance agent for the necessary information on your automobile insurance. You can help by contacting him and asking him to answer right away.
Thanks.

38-1280, which should remain in the customer's folder. Indicate your followup on the insurance followup card and the next followup date, and suspense for ten days. When there has been on response at the end of this second ten-day period, refer the account to an adjuster for personal handling. Note the date referred and adjuster's initials on the Insurance Followup Card. ADD TO THE POTENTIAL LOSS REPORT. See "Personal Handling" later in this bulletin.

CANCELLATION AND RENEWAL FOLLOWUP

After original insurance placement, there are three situations that will prompt us to follow the customer for coverage:

1. Cancellation. Insurors are legally bound to notify insured lienholders of cancellation at least 10 days before date coverage will terminate.
2. Expiration. Policy expires during life of loan. Most companies notify the lienholder of the expiration if they do not intend to renew. Since all companies do not do this, we must rely on our Insurance Followup Card, which should come up 10 days before expiration.
3. Non-payment of renewal premium on continuous policies.

All three of these situations can be handled with just two form letters. Here is the procedure:

As soon as notice of cancellation or non-payment of renewal premium is received, the Insurance Followup Clerk should immediately:

1. Send Insurance Notice #1 shown on page 7.
2. Prepare Insurance Followup Card, note the followup performed and next followup date, and file the card on the termination date.
3. On the termination date send Insurance Notice #2 shown on page 7. Suspense for 20 days.
4. At the end of this period, if no confirmation has been received, refer the account to the adjuster for personal handling. (See Personal Handling section).

PERSONAL HANDLING

The adjuster uses his own judgment in efforts to contact the customer and, in order of desirability:

1. Get the customer to furnish dual interest coverage immediately.
   a. Through C&S Agency, debiting the account for the premium, or,
   b. Through an outside source.
2. Place single interest coverage, charging his account.
3. Repossess the vehicle.

The adjuster is expected to use whatever telephone calls and/or letters necessary to conclude this account. He should be familiar with all of the automobile physical damage insurance program bulletins. Once he has received the assignment from the Insurance Followup Clerk, it continues to be his responsibility until he has received written confirmation of the evidence of insurance. IF UNABLE TO SECURE COVERAGE WITHIN 10 DAYS, LIST THE ACCOUNT ON THE NEXT POTENTIAL LOSS REPORT. If it is secured, he should see that it is not listed on the Potential Loss Report, and then give the coverage information to the Insurance Followup Clerk, who should:

1. Note expiration date information in the "Expiration Date" section of the Insurance Followup Card.
2. File the card for 10 days prior to expiration date.
3. File the letter or policy in the customer's file.

TOPIC SELLING UP

Page 1 of 1 Date 5-7-68

New Bulletin

Good salesmen have long been noted for selling a customer "up". By pointing out the extra value and added benefits of ownership and use of the higher-priced goods, the salesman makes a larger, better sale, and increases his sales volume and commission. From the standpoint of the work analyst, he has made more productive use of his time.

On the other hand, the customer has not been hurt by the "sell-up". He has benefited because he is getting more value per dollar than he would have gotten had he not decided to "buy-up". If the job is done well, then, both the seller and the buyer benefit.

We can learn something here that applies to our own customer relationships. That is - sell the loan customer what he needs. In many cases we can make him a larger loan than he requested if we do a good job of analyzing his total debts and suggest a modification of the customer's original request. Just as a salesman helps his customer SELECT the automobile which must fit within the customer's wants, needs, and ability to pay, we must help our customer SELECT the best loan for his particular situation.

The guiding principle of selling up must be for the Bank to be of the most possible service to the customer. Selling up simply for the sake of making a larger loan is just not to be done. It is not in the best interests of the customer or the bank. Here are some other considerations:

1. Can we make a sounder loan, by getting at the problem instead of treating the symptom with a small loan?

2. We can better control his borrowing - after advice, we have the whole picture.

3. We will stand a better chance of getting all his loan and other bank business. He won't go to another bank to get another small loan later.

4. A larger loan should result in greater profit.

Customers frequently do not look far enough ahead to really be able to make an intelligent financial analysis of their needs. They are interested in borrowing enough to handle the presently pressing financial matters and perhaps those that will come up in the next two or three months. This is where our talents take over. We are experts in consumer financial analysis. It is our job to diagnose the financial ailment and prescribe the proper loan.

SUBJECT CASH VALUE LIFE INSURANCE LOANS

Page 1 of 3 Date 3-23-66

New Bulletin

Loans secured by assignment of Cash Value of Life Insurance carry slight risk of loss, provided they are set up properly in the beginning, and where necessary, followed for payment of future premiums. This bulletin outlines procedures to be followed in lending on this basis.

CLASSIFICATION Loans secured by Cash Value Life Insurance are classified "Collateral."

TERMS Terms - up to 60 months are in order. However, borrowers should be encouraged to shorten the term as much as possible within their ability to repay. Cash Value of Life Insurance is a form of saving, and our customer will be better off to replenish this fund as fast as possible.

ADVANCES Advances may be extended up to 100% of cash value and accumulated dividends.

RATES The rate structure for loans secured by cash value is set out by the Bulletin: "LENDING GENERAL - RETAIL RATES - OVER-THE-COUNTER." Credit life and disability insurance should be placed on cash value loans wherever possible. Our insurance coverage is inexpensive and allows the customer to retain his insurance program intact in the event of death or disability.

INVESTIGATION

1. Check CIF
2. Where a check of CIF, other bank sources, or from information developed in the interview indicates the possibility of later collection problems, a full investigation should be made. In the absence of derogatory information in the preliminary investigation, we can rely on our collateral.

RELIABILITY OF THE INSURANCE COMPANY Regulations governing life insurance companies are such that on the average transaction it is not necessary to check on the company's financial ability to honor our assignment. In lending of amounts of $5,000 and over, the reliability of an unknown, new or local insurance company should be checked with a senior credit officer.

ASSIGNABILITY A life insurance policy is a contract usually involving three parties: the insured, the insuror, and the beneficiary. Policies differ in terms and conditions, so it is important to check every insurance contract carefully. The following items should be checked by reading the appropriate section of the policy contract.

1. Most policies are assignable, provided the insurance company is notified in writing. A few policies are not assignable, or state that a special assignment form provided by the insurance company must be used. The following policies are not acceptable to the Bank as cash value collateral:

   (a) GI Insurance which is not assignable.
   (b) Group Insurance does not build cash value.
   (c) Weekly premium, or industrial policy holders should be referred to the issuing company.

New Bulletin

2. Determine who is the owner of the policy, and thus has a right to assign the policy. The name of the owner of the policy is found on the first page of the contract. Generally, the insured is also the owner of the policy, but in some cases, the beneficiary, or some other party may be the owner. Ownership of the policy may be transferred without notation on the policy, thus, if there is any reason to think that we cannot rely on our borrower's statement, we would check with the company to verify his right to assign before advancing funds.

3. Determine the amount of cash surrender value, which the policy has accumulated by reading the "table of cash surrender or loan value," which is found in the policy contract. If there is any reason to doubt the borrower's statement that he does not have an insurance company loan or prior assignment, wait for the return of questionnaire 15-523 before advancing funds.

FORMS After determining the assignability of the policy, the right of the individual to assign, and the amount of cash value and accumulated dividends, the proper forms and followup measures should be taken to set up the loan.

1. Assignment form 15-517 should be signed by the customer in duplicate. The assignment form should be signed by the owner of the policy in exactly the same way as the name on the policy is registered.

2. Collateral note 19-830 should be signed with the collateral described on the note, e.g., "assignment of cash value Aetna Life Insurance Company, policy no. 437689 on the life of John J. Smith."

3. Insurance questionnaire 15-523 signed by the customer should be prepared in duplicate for forwarding to the company with the assignment. The questionnaire will establish the amount of cash value, accumulated dividends in the policy, status and amount of premium payments. Upon return of the questionnaire, we should verify our cash value computation in file, and disburse funds, if not previously disbursed.

4. A followup card should be made for return of the insurance company's acknowledgement of the assignment.

5. Where a loan secured by a Cash Value Life Insurance is renewed, a new questionnaire should be submitted to verify that the cash value of the policy has not decreased. A week or more generally elapses before assignments or questionnaires are returned by the company. If the customer is financially responsible with satisfactory credit experience, it is in order to advance the funds relying on the customer's representations, otherwise hold disbursement until the papers are acknowledged and completed.

SUBJECT CASH VALUE LIFE INSURANCE LOANS

TOPIC

 Date 3-23-66

New Bulletin

PREMIUM FOLLOWUP A large majority of insurance policies have provisions whereby the cash value is used to convert the policy to a paid-up term policy, in the event of lapse, usually within a period of 90 days from the due date of the premium.

In addition, many policies contain an automatic premium loan provision. The provision gives the company the right to charge the accumulated cash value with a premium loan, if the premium has not been paid by the end of the grace period. The automatic premium loan provision can easily dilute the cash value of the loan unless future premiums are paid on time.

However, since our loan is on a reduction basis, the payments will generally exceed any decrease of cash value and it is not necessary to follow for premium payments unless:

1. Our loan goes past due.

2. We receive several loan inquiries on the borrower.

COLLECTIONS If the borrower is unable to meet his monthly payments with reasonable promptness, we should:

1. Encourage him to transfer the loan to the insurance company in order to retain his life insurance protection.

2. If the borrower will not transfer his loan, we must exercise our assignment by writing the insurance company for the necessary procedures, notifying the borrower of our action.

SAFEKEEPING Insurance policy contracts are not negotiable, and thus do not need to be placed under dual control. The policy and other papers may be filed in the customer's loan file.

PAID OUT PROCEDURE When a CVLI loan is paid off, a release of the assignment should be sent to the insurance company. The policy and note should be returned to the customer requesting a receipt for the policy contract.

SECTION OVER-THE-COUNTER

SUBJECT CREDIT SERVICE CORPORATION

TOPIC

 Date 7/25/69

REVISION OF BULLETIN: OVER-THE-COUNTER CREDIT SERVICE CORPORATION DATED 9/30/68.

The extension of credit to small businesses through term lending offers great potential to create jobs and promote the economic growth of the community, while providing an opportunity to develop better bank customers. Many banks have been reluctant to make term credit available to small and growing businesses because of the relatively high degree of risk. Our experience indicates, however, that through the years the overall loss ratio of the combined C&S Banks has been good. It is only in isolated cases that unfavorable losses have appeared and this was primarily because of the higher average loan.

To help prevent any office having an unfavorable loss picture, while promoting and developing a larger portfolio of term credit loans, the Citizens and Southern Credit Service Corporation has been established. This facilitates a pooling of loan loss reserves, so that loans on which losses are incurred will be purchased by CSC rather than being charged off by the local office. Initially, this program will be available only to branches of The Citizens and Southern National Bank and its Affiliates. After gaining experience in the program, we plan to make it available to our Correspondent Associates and to other banks.

SCOPE OF THE PROGRAM

The basic purpose of the program is to stimulate the making of more good term business loans and at the same time -

1. Leave the authority and incentive with the loan officer to do what he thinks best.

2. While continuing the loan officer's free rein on all loans, provide him with the opportunity to seek advice on those specialized loans which he does not encounter frequently.

3. Minimize the credit risk for the lending bank.

The program will provide a means by which the participating banks can make term loans to businesses in which they have basic confidence in the management, but which they have been unable to handle in the past, because of limited collateral or for strategic reasons such as the size of the loan in relation to legal limits and loss reserves.

Through more and varied term lending experiences, it will provide the loan officer an opportunity to increase his abilities in the areas of:

A. Evaluation of management ability.

B. Analysis of business potential.

C. Term Loan Agreements, when they should be required, and how the covenants should be set up to feel the pulse of a business.

D. Proper collateral and security.

REVISION OF BULLETIN: OVER-THE-COUNTER CREDIT SERVICE CORPORATION DATED 9/30/68.

EXTENT OF COVERAGE
The Credit Service Corporation will reimburse 100% of the outstanding principal balance in event of credit losses on covered loans.

COST OF COVERAGE
The cost of covering eligible loans is 1% per annum of the original principal balance, payable at the time the loan is made.

ELIGIBLE LOANS
All term credit business loans of more than twelve months with a principal amount of $5,001 to $100,000 are eligible for coverage, provided the total liability (including the new advance) of the borrower does not exceed $250,000 to all participating banks. New loans can be automatically guaranteed by merely indicating so on the discount sheet, except in the following situations where specific or non-automatic acceptance for coverage by CSC is required:

1. Total debt to C&S National Bank, its Affiliates, or other participating banks exceeds $25,000 (including the new advance).

2. The business is a new venture with less than two years in operation.

3. The company has sustained net operating losses for its last fiscal year.

4. The loan constitutes a rework of existing debt.

5. The business has a deficit net worth.

6. Loan is not to be repaid in nearly equal installments within five years or less, but more than twelve months.

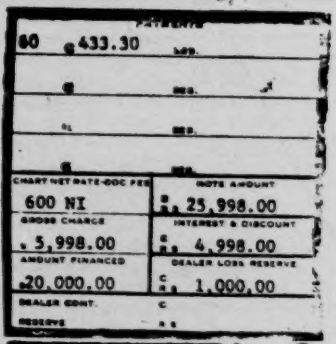
All eligible loans must be covered. In order to maintain a proper spread of risks, loans cannot be covered on a selective basis.

APPLICATION FOR COVERAGE
On each eligible loan prepare the "Application" form in duplicate (Form #CSC 1). If the loan is eligible for automatic coverage, send only the application, along with the copy of the credit for the fee, to Credit Service Corporation. If the loan is not eligible for automatic coverage, supporting documentation as listed on the back of the Application (Form #CSC 1) must be included. The most important item is a memo from the lending officer outlining the particulars of the loan and the abilities of management, and commenting on any present or potential problem areas the borrower may have. In general, the memo should comment on any unfavorable answer to the "Term Loan Check List" (Form #CSC 3).

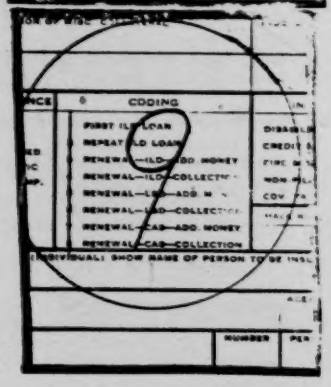
REVISION OF BULLETIN: OVER-THE-COUNTER CREDIT SERVICE CORPORATION DATED 9/30/68.

NEW LOAN PROCEDURES

On all loans covered under this program, a fee equal to 1% per annum of the amount financed is due the CSC. This fee must be paid out of the total charge to the customer. On the discount sheet show the total charge as usual in the space for "Gross Charge," enter the fee under "Dealer Loss Reserve" and the remainder under "Interest and Discount." On each insured loan, simply send a check made payable to C&S Credit Service Corporation to CSC with the application.



In the "coding" section of the discount sheet, enter "9" for all guaranteed loans. This code will appear with the loan class on the ledger cards for easy identification of guaranteed loans. When the ledger cards are received from Central Billing, punch slot #32 on the side of the ledger card.



THE CSC MONTHLY REPORT

Monthly Report (Form CSC 2) will be prepared as of the end of each month. The total amount of covered Loans Outstanding at End of Period will be determined by needle-sorting slot 32 on the right side of the ledger card and running a tape of the balances. The report should reach Credit Service Corporation by the first day of the following month.

PAID IN FULL ROUTINES

Normal procedure calls for removal and discarding of a wheeldex card when the account is paid in full. This procedure should continue on regular loans. On a guaranteed loan, however, the card should be removed, stamped "Paid," and sent to Credit Service Corporation as notification that the loan has been paid in full.

On prepaid loans on which a rebate is granted, it will also be necessary to rebate a portion of the fee paid to CSC. Use the same percentage as that on the interest rebate, then prepare a debit (showing the number of months the loan has left to run) to C&S Atlanta for charge to CSC. Send a copy of the debit with the wheeldex to CSC.

DELINQUENT ACCOUNTS TO BE PURCHASED BY THE CREDIT SERVICE CORPORATION

The Credit Service Corporation should be requested, by letter, to purchase a past-due covered loan when:

1. All reasonable collection efforts have been made, and the account has been determined to be a "loss" and,

2. Collateral, if any, has been sold and sale proceeds applied to reduce the account balance (Exceptions: Where the bank has been unable to dispose of the collateral over a reasonable period of time, this requirement may be waived), and

3. All normal procedures for charge-off, including preparation of a Charge-Off History Sheet, have been followed up to - but not including - listing in with charge-offs for presentation at a Board Meeting.

Include with the letter one copy of the Charge-Off History Sheet and Credit File to the Credit Service Corporation. Retain one copy of the Charge-Off History Sheet until payoff check is received, then file the History Sheet in the place of the credit file. Upon receipt of the payoff check from Credit Service Corporation, process it with an interest rebate ticket to close the loan. Figure rebates in the usual manner, but do not rebate the "fee." Send the note, endorsed without recourse, to Credit Service Corporation.

ORDERING FORMS

Supplies should be ordered, specifying the "CSC" number, from Credit Service Corporation, Atlanta, except in the case of Application Forms (CSC 1) which must be ordered from the stock room. The stock number is 8-320 Rev. 6/69.

REVISION OF BULLETIN: OVER-THE-COUNTER CREDIT SERVICE CORPORATION DATED 9/30/68.

ADDITIONAL ITEMS

1. On loans scheduled to be paid other than equal monthly such as quarterly or skip payment loans, compute the CSC fee on the actual length of time the loan will be on the books. This does not apply to "balloon notes." On balloon notes, compute the fee as if the balloon portion was going to be liquidated at the same rate as the liquidating portion. For example: a note calling for 11 monthly payments of $100 and a balloon of $1,900, the fee would be computed as if the loan was going to be on the books for 30 months.

2. Extensions, Amendments - If a CSC covered note is to be extended or amended (For example: release of an endorsement or item of collateral), write a letter outlining exactly the changes to be made in the terms of the loan, the collateral or endorsers or other conditions of the loan (for example: extend payments two months, to resume normal monthly payments on July 22 or release endorsement of John Doe on November 1, as we originally agreed to do, or release of lien on 1969 John Deere Tractor). Send two copies of the letter to CSC, leaving space at the bottom for CSC to acknowledge and approve the change. CSC will acknowledge the change by signing and returning one copy of the letter. The above does not apply to due date changes that do not constitute extensions. CSC reserves the right to terminate coverage if a loan is extended or amended.

3. Reworks - If a CSC covered loan is reworked, a portion of the CSC fee must be rebated to the customer to arrive at the net payoff figure. Compute the rebate of the CSC fee using the same factor as is used on the interest and finance charges. There is no minimum charge to be deducted. Debit CSC for this amount and credit unearned interest. Send a copy of the debit to CSC along with the paid out wheeldex card. Then file an application for coverage on the new loan. Since reworked loans are not eligible for automatic coverage, supporting documentation should accompany the new application.

II. The Business Itself
1. Are the nature and location of the business such that they give reasonable assurance of future successful operation? Will the demand for its product or service continue? Can it meet competition in price, quality and service?
2. Would an inspection of facilities and equipment be useful in determining whether they are adequate and are efficiently employed, or are you satisfied that this is the case?
3. Does the company have adequate internal accounting procedures and controls?
4. Does it have adequate outside auditing and legal assistance?
5. Is there a possibility of problems with labor or labor unions that would seriously impair the operation of the business?
6. Is the company adequately insured against the principal risks that are present in the conduct of its business?

III. Financial Condition
1. Do you have adequate information to assess the present financial condition of the company?
2. Would an analysis of financial statements for the past 3-5 years indicate unfavorable trends that point to problems in the future?
3. Do you need projections of the operating statement and balance sheet for the next year or more to properly assess the proposed loan?
4. Does an analysis of the balance sheet demonstrate that the company is adequately financed and capitalized?
5. Are you satisfied that tax returns have been properly prepared and that all income and other taxes have been paid?
6. Are there contingent liabilities of the company or outside debt of the owners that could represent a threat to the operation of the business?

IV. Loan Proposal
1. Will profits plus depreciation and other non-cash expenses provide enough cash to repay the loan and finance required future expansions of inventory or receivables or other needs?
2. Is the amount requested the amount needed to accomplish the desired ends?
3. Is the proposed loan the best method of financing or should another be considered?
4. Collateral, if required
   A. Will collateral have sufficient liquidation value to protect the bank for the duration of the loan?
   B. Do you have adequate control over the collateral?
   C. Is collateral insured and have taxes and other liens been paid?
   D. Do you have good title to the property and has it been properly recorded?
5. Is a term loan agreement needed to place proper restrictions on the company or to bring about a condition of default in the event that the company does not operate as anticipated?

SUBJECT DEBT CONSOLIDATION

TOPIC CAS PAYOFF

 Date 1-29-68

NEW BULLETIN:

To provide a consistent method of communication between locations, this bulletin introduces a form to be used by a branch when paying off a CAS account. Its use will insure that proper consideration is given to continuation of the customer's line, credit card pickup, and recourse or non-recourse payoff. Each bank location will be kept informed of changes of status of a customer's account.

PROCEDURE

This form should be filled out in duplicate on all CAS account payoffs. A copy will be retained for the branch customer's file. The original copy plus pay-off check goes to CAS. CAS will file the original in their customer's file.

DETERMINING RECOURSE ON CONSOLIDATION LOANS

Generally, if an account is worthy of making a debt consolidation loan, or reworking, the CAS account should be paid off without recourse, just as any other creditor would be. If additional money is advanced on a rework, the CAS payoff should be without recourse. Paying off an account with recourse should occur rarely.

Accounts that are already recourse accounts to merchants should be paid off without recourse, if at all. Any further recourse involvement would expose us to additional merchant relationships that could easily work to our disadvantage.

ORDERING FORMS

Forms will be padded, 50 to a pad. The simplicity of inserting a piece of carbon paper and completing in longhand should make this an economical form to use. Forms should be ordered from Purchasing. Specify form #19-849.

SUBJECT DEBT CONSOLIDATION LOANS

TOPIC

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - FAMILY FINANCIAL COUNSELING - BUDGET CONSOLIDATION Dated 3-25-64

Daily we receive requests from customers who wish to have their obligations consolidated into a single transaction on a monthly retirement plan. As a general rule, these consolidation loans fall in two broad categories. The first is to those good credit risks who anticipate the need to consolidate their obligations with payments in relation to income. In the second category are those loans to families already in financial difficulties because of over use of credit or perhaps because of unforeseen emergencies.

In addition, we interview many individuals in need of counseling on financial management who have not recognized a financial problem. We, as a bank, can render a real service here, which accrues benefits not only to the customer, but to the bank and other creditors in the area. Adequate family financial counseling accompanied by debt consolidation loans serves as a deterrent to personal bankruptcies and, moreover, provides a way to increase the profitability of our loan portfolio by improving the quality and size of loans made to such individuals.

The purpose of this bulletin is to discuss various approaches to this type lending, stressing use of the "Family Budget Consolidation Work Sheet." Through intelligent use and analysis, this work sheet will be a very useful tool in the processing of consolidation loan requests.

The use of the Family Budget Consolidation Work Sheet is a matter of individual judgment in each case. Many of our customers and the general public do understand their financial capabilities; hence, they exercise and control their credit buying in keeping with their ability to repay. Using this form on customers who fall into this category might be offensive, therefore, good judgment must be the deciding factor.

It is the responsibility of each lender to recognize those applicants who do need advice and guidance and to use the "budget work sheet" in those cases. There are any number of factors or combination of factors which would indicate a need to use this form, and it would be impractical to list all. The following circumstances do, however, strongly suggest use of the "budget work sheet":

1. Request for a consolidation loan to reduce monthly payments.
2. Constant renewals, particularly where there is evidence of customer pyramiding his debts.
3. Whenever we have numerous inquiries from other creditors even though the customer's record with us has been satisfactory.
4. Any indication of over-extension of debt beyond the customer's capacity to pay.

This form may also be utilized in the adjusting of delinquent accounts. One of the first steps in adjusting a delinquent account is to find the cause. Frequently, customers become overly obligated after our loan's inception and try to stay even by borrowing from one source to pay another. This, of course, further jeopardizes their financial position and can lead to a loss for the bank with the customer losing his credit standing. When an adjuster recognizes such a situation, he should make every attempt to get the customer into the bank for "financial counseling" which would include the use of the "budget work sheet." If this is done soon enough, there is a strong possibility of making what may have been a loss account into a profitable one.

If this includes a rework of existing bank debt, remember that we may be getting an opportunity to do the thorough job of interviewing and investigating that we may have failed to do the first time. Don't fail to look for debt load in existence now that was also in existence at the time of our first loan, but not known to us at that time. The customer could be wilfully concealing information. He might be genuinely innocent of intentionally misleading us. In either of these two cases, we're still unduly exposed, however, and we must be sure what type of credit risk the customer really is before we make a decision.

The budget work sheet can be an invaluable tool and can aid in the extension of sound credit. However, it must be remembered that no form can substitute for the application of good judgment in extending credit. We must evaluate the applicant's paying habits, personal habits, capacity and integrity before reaching a credit decision. The intelligent use of this form serves a useful purpose in counseling with the customer. After all, each customer or prospect is entitled to the best advice, instruction and information we are capable of giving.

INTERVIEW

While the objectives are basically the same in any interview, when handling the potential consolidation applicant, he must be put at ease so that we gain his confidence and the interview must be complete so we can determine the customer's financial condition and satisfy ourselves as to his capacity and willingness to meet the proposed plan of repayment.

The ideal interviewing atmosphere is best created when the interviewer projects himself into the customer's own personal circumstances so that he may talk to him on the same level of understanding. The Family Budget Consolidation Work Sheet provides this line of communication in discussing an individual's financial needs. It is also advisable to avoid the term "problems" when discussing the applicant's financial needs, for the common reaction to this word is that the solution may be complicated and difficult. Actually with adequate counseling and an analysis of the completed work sheet, the solution is more easily reached. (See OVER-THE-COUNTER - APPLICATION AND INTERVIEW.)

EXTENT OF INVESTIGATION

With complete information developed during the interview, our investigation should be complete, verifying all facts given. Each must be checked, otherwise the analysis of the customer's financial picture cannot be complete and a workable solution reached.

TERMS

Generally speaking, 24 months should be the maximum term of a debt consolidation loan. In exceptional cases where income in relation to total debt precludes repayment in 24 months, terms up to five years may be in order after consideration of the following factors:

1. Is the loan substantially secured by assets of a relatively stable value or does it have an unquestionably good endorser?
2. Was the overloaded debt position brought on by probably non-recurring expenses, i.e., major medical, education loans, moving expenses, major purchases, etc.?
3. Is job stability above average?

CREDIT CONSIDERATIONS

Each request will involve a different set of circumstances; hence, our analysis of the "budget work sheet" will involve a different approach on every customer. There are some basic points, however, which must be kept in mind in reviewing the work sheet.

1. Will the combining of all obligations relieve the customer's over-extended position?
2. Will the customer's income be relatively predictable?
3. After considering monthly expenses, will the customer be able to meet his note with us and have some freedom in his income to offset normal emergencies?
4. Does the amount of the loan and/or circumstances indicate a need for collateral? The completed "budget work sheet" will point out available collateral.
5. If it appears the debt consolidation loan terms would not relieve the difficulty and a longer period of repayment is necessary, does the customer have sufficient equity in his real estate to rework the transaction?
6. Perhaps the analysis will disclose the only workable solution to the customer's difficulty is the sale of some personal assets. This will be only in those cases where a customer is extremely over-obligated.
7. From conversation with the customer, the conclusion may have been reached that the financial difficulties could have been avoided if some reserve such as a savings account had been available. This is a clue for us to include in our analysis and if possible for the customer to meet his monthly expense, the payment on the note and still have available funds, sell the customer on some systematic savings program. Perhaps he is a checking account customer and the automatic deduction would be the best approach in developing him as a saver. If the customer does not have a checking account, sell him one.

8. The analysis may also disclose the possibility of including a Savings Bond or an amount to open a savings account in the total loan. Whenever this is possibile, the benefits are three fold - we make a larger and more profitable loan, we acquire a new savings customer, and the customer becomes a saver.
9. Marital problems often accompany money problems, so efforts should be made to secure signatures of husband and wife. In the event of a separation or divorce, we will have better collection possibilities.

CONSUMER CREDIT COUNSELING SERVICE

When a customer with debt to us appears in such poor condition that bankruptcy looks almost inevitable, he should first be referred to Consumer Credit Counseling Service. There is one now in operation in Atlanta and one in Savannah, with other cities being considered. These non-profit organizations provide a definite service to the family with financial difficulties and reduce the number of potential bankrupts.

THE FAMILY BUDGET CONSOLIDATION WORK SHEET

The simplicity of this form's design makes comments unnecessary except for those made on the illustrations on pages 5 and 6. The section on "monthly expenses", however, does require further consideration. We are not attempting to set up standards for the amounts allowable for rent, food, etc., since there is considerable variance between the needs and desires of individual families and since the experienced credit man should be able to appraise these factors in the light of each individual case. Generally speaking, we must accept the applicant's estimates in this area and our job is to point out any inconsistencies between this and other monthly obligations.

All of the answers to this type lending may not be found in the "budget work sheet", however, the possibility of doing a better lending job is enhanced through its use.

ORDERING FORMS

Forms may be requisitioned in the usual manner from the Purchasing Department. Specify form #19-885, Rev. 3-64.

CLASSIFICATION

The nature of the collateral will determine loan classification. If no collateral, then it should be classified as a signature loan. If auto and household goods are the collateral, and the auto has more value than the household goods, then it should be classified as an auto loan.

FORMS, AGREEMENTS, AND PERFECTING SECURITY INTERESTS

The nature of the collateral (if any) will also determine the type forms to use, and method of perfecting our security interest.

SUBJECT DEMAND LOANS TO INDIVIDUALS

TOPIC

 Date 10-11-71

NEW BULLETIN

Demand loans to individuals are serviced by the Loan and Discount Department or L&D Teller. Accounting is accomplished via the Commercial Loan System. Loans of $25,000 or less for non-business purposes are subject to Federal Reserve Regulation Z, which implements the Consumer Credit Protection Act.

Use note forms (with C&S logo) #15-1105 (Secured) and #15-1100 (Unsecured), (without logo) #15-1250 (Secured) and #15-1200 (Unsecured). Demand loans shall be considered to have a maturity of one half year (183 days) for the computation of the Finance Charge and APR. The following spaces must be completed.

1. Amount of Loan - the amount of the advance to the customer or other party.

4. Amount Financed - the total amount of the loan which may include other charges.

   Annual Percentage Rate - Regulation Z requires that we disclose the equivalent of a simple interest rate, determined by the Actuarial method. The APR will be the same as the actual interest rate unless a base charge is applied which occurs infrequently.

5. Interest - the Interest Charge, figured by applying a simple interest rate per annum to the amount financed. This may be calculated via audio, video, or manually using 183 days (365-day basis).

7. Finance Charge - the same as interest unless a base charge is made.

8. Total of Payments - the total amount financed and the finance charge.

   Date - day the loan is made.

   Number - serial number assigned to this loan.

   Due - on demand.

The Insurance Statement must indicate "loan not eligible for Credit Life Insurance". It is not necessary to obtain the customer's signature since demand loans are ineligible for Credit Life Insurance.

Until such time as our note forms are revised, legal counsel advises that we type "Interest Payment is monthly, payable upon receipt of statement", in the area under the asterisk on the note beginning "on demand notes these

COMPLETION OF THE COMMERCIAL LOAN DISCOUNT SHEET

Follow directions given in G.O.G. 9.811 - Loans - Commercial Loan System - Forms - New Loans And/Or New Customers.

CALCULATION OF FINANCE CHARGE, AND ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE

A 365-Day year must be used in all calculations on personal and consumer loans. Although infrequent, a base charge of $10.00 may be charged on loans of $5,000 or less, in addition to interest for the actual number of days the loan is on our books. If a base charge of other than $10.00 is charged the annual percentage rate must be calculated manually. On corporate loans, a 365-Day year or a 360-Day year may be used at the loan officer's option.

To avoid errors, all personal or consumer demand note calculations, including those obtained by computer response, must be calculated or checked by two people - both of whom must initial the note.

Refer to the bulletin - OVER-THE-COUNTER - SINGLE PAYMENT TIME LOANS TO INDIVIDUALS - Dated 8/16/71 for computer inquiry via audio or video.

MANUAL CALCULATION

I. To find the Interest Charge:

A. Multiply the total amount financed by the appropriate simple interest rate.
B. Multiply the result by 183 days (one-half year maturity - 365 Day basis).
C. Divide by 365.
D. Drop any fractions of a cent. Do Not Round Up.
E. Add base charge, if any.

EXAMPLE: $5,000 advance @ 8% simple, 183-Day term.

$5000.00		Amount Financed
x .08		Interest Rate
$400.0000
x 183		Term, in days
73200.0000
÷ 365
$ 200.5479	=	$200.54 Interest Charge

NEW BULLETIN

Although a base charge of $10.00 is rarely added to demand notes, if applicable the interest charge plus the $10.00 base charge would be the amount of the finance charge or in the example shown on page 3 - $210.54.

II. To find the Annual Percentage Rate (A.P.R.):

A. Divide the total finance charge, including the base charge, if any, by the total amount financed.
B. The conversion chart - single payment loans, 365-Day basis indicates the daily factor for demand loans to be 199.
C. Multiply the result of step A by the factor, 199. Round to the nearest 100th of a percent.

EXAMPLE OF APR: $5,000 advance @ 8% simple, with a $10.00 base charge, or 183-Day term.

$ 210.54		Total Finance Charge (including base)
÷5000.00		Total Amount Financed
.421080
x 199		Demand Conversion Factor For 183 Day Term
8.379492	=	8.38%, Annual Percentage Rate

NOTE: Normally there would be no base charge on demand loans, therefore, the annual percentage rate determined by this method should be the same as the simple interest rate used in calculating the interest. A slight variance is possible, due to rounding of decimals during calculation.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER THE COUNTER - DENTAL PAYMENT PLAN - GEORGIA DENTAL ASSOCIATION - Dated 9/29/61

The dental payment plan, sponsored jointly with the Georgia Dental Association, has been in effect since April, 1955. Its purpose is to enable people to receive major dental treatment and at the same time relieve the participating dentists of the task of collecting. Many patients use the dental payment plan
R to cover the cost of extensive treatment which takes several months to complete. By discounting the note after the first appointment, the dentist may receive cash immediately. The patient may begin paying quickly, and spread the cost over a long period.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN ASSOCIATION AND BANKS

Since the plan is sponsored jointly by the Georgia Dental Association and The Citizens and Southern National Bank, the Agreement Between the Association and Participating Bank must be signed by all banks wishing to participate. This agreement (19-860 Rev. 9-61) is reproduced on page 2. The Master Agreement has R already been signed for the national bank, and for the participating affiliates, associates, and correspondents. The necessary forms will be sent to any additional banks wishing to participate.

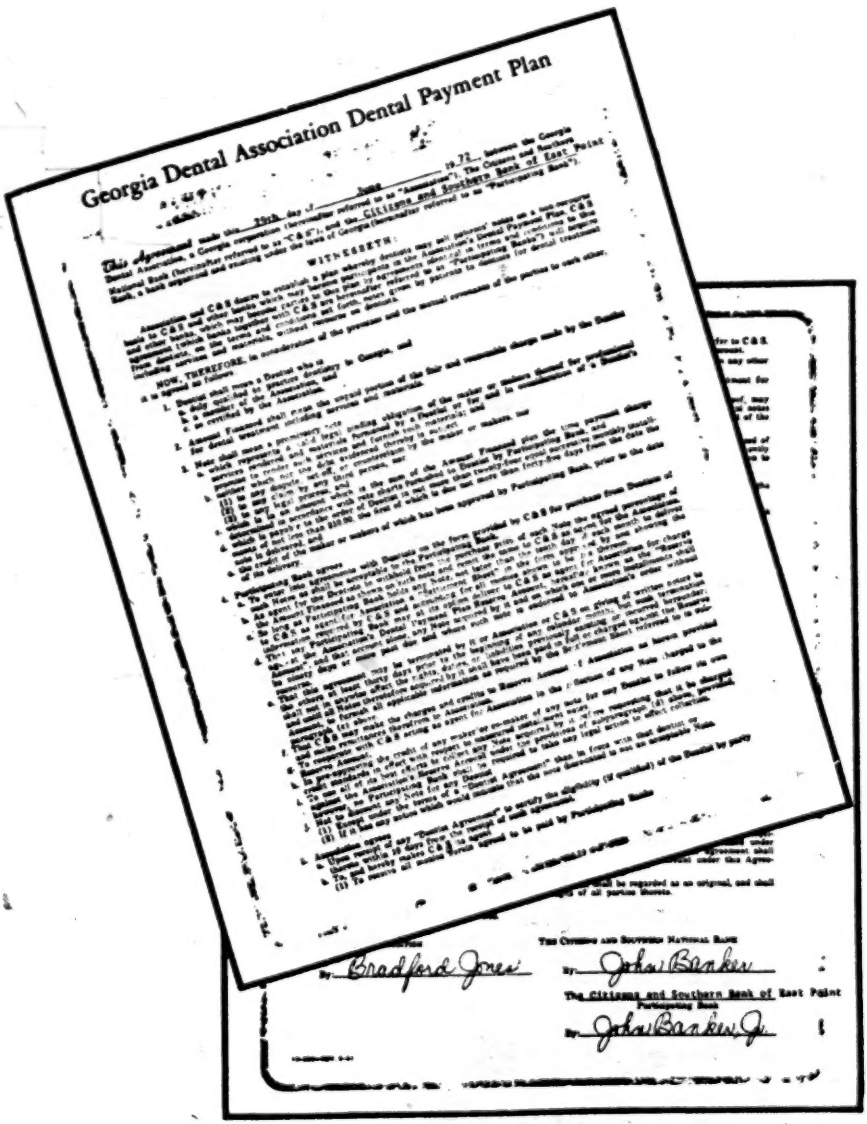
AGREEMENT BETWEEN DENTISTS AND PARTICIPATING BANKS

R New dentists should sign four copies of the Agreement Between Dentist and Participating Bank (19-861 Rev. 1-64). The bank should complete all spaces on the agreement and have it signed by a bank officer. All four copies of the completed agreement should be forwarded to Retail Banking, Atlanta, for approval of the Georgia Dental Association. In order for the dentist to participate in this program, he must be a member in good standing of the Georgia Dental Association. You will receive two copies of the approved agreement and a certificate for the dentist. Maintain one copy of the agreement in your file and return the other copy and the certificate to the dentist. This agreement is reproduced on page 3, and the certificate on page 4. It is not necessary to obtain new agreements from dentists presently participating.

It is very important that the dentists fully understand how the plan works and their responsibilities. Dental notes are purchased without recourse to the dentist. However, a 2% contingent reserve is deducted from the dentist's bill.
R Before a delinquent account can be charged to the reserve account, the dentist must return to the bank the amount representing unfinished treatment. The application must show the date of scheduled completion. You may also purchase dental notes from your dentists for work completed not more than thirty days prior to discounting the note. The bank will not purchase accounts which have been collection problems for the dentist.



Georgia Dental Association Dental Payment Plan

This Agreement made this 22th day of June, 19 72, between the Georgia Dental Association, a Georgia corporation (hereinafter referred to as "Association"), The Citizens and Southern National Bank, a Georgia corporation (hereinafter referred to as "C&S"), and the Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point (hereinafter referred to as "Participating Bank").

WITNESSETH:

Association and C&S desire to establish a plan whereby dentists may set patients' notes on a non-recourse basis, which may be purchased by C&S or by other banks which may participate in the Association's Dental Payment Plan (C&S and such other banks, which may hereafter participate in the Association's Dental Payment Plan, are hereinafter referred to as "Participating Banks"), and which notes may be used by patients to finance dental treatment, including services and materials, without recourse on dentists; and

WHEREAS, C&S is willing to purchase such notes from dentists who are members of the Association and who agree to abide by the terms and conditions of this Agreement; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the premises and the mutual covenants of the parties to each other, it is agreed as follows:

1. Dentist shall mean a Doctor who is duly authorized to practice dentistry in Georgia, and is a member in good standing of the Association, and is certified by the Association.

2. Account Financed shall mean the unpaid portion of the fair and reasonable charge made by the Dentist for dental treatment, including services and materials.

3. Note shall mean a promissory note which is executed by a patient of a Dentist, and which represents the Account Financed by a Dentist, or the unpaid portion thereof, and which is in substantially the form attached hereto as Exhibit A, or in such other form as may be approved by the Dentist or makers, as the case may be.

4. Dentist Agreement shall mean the agreement between a Dentist and a Participating Bank, in the form attached hereto as Exhibit B, or in such other form as may be approved by Participating Bank, prior to the date of the delivery.

5. Participating Bank agrees with Dentists on the form attached to C&S as Exhibit B, or in such other form as may be approved by Participating Bank.

6. To purchase from Dentists, in accordance with the terms and conditions of this Agreement, Notes which are acquired by Dentists in connection with Accounts Financed which have been approved by Participating Banks, and which Notes are in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A, or in such other form as may be approved by C&S or Participating Bank, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within ten (10) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within thirty (30) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within sixty (60) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within ninety (90) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within one hundred twenty (120) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within one hundred eighty (180) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within two hundred forty (240) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within three hundred (300) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within three hundred sixty (360) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within four hundred twenty (420) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within four hundred eighty (480) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within five hundred forty (540) days from the date of the Account Financed, and which Notes are delivered to C&S or Participating Bank by Dentists within six hundred (600) days from the date of the AGREEMENT BETWEEN DENTIST AND BANK PARTICIPATING IN

To: The Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point (Participating Bank) June 29 19 72

Gentlemen:

I am a duly licensed and regularly practicing dentist in the State of Georgia, a member in good standing of the Georgia Dental Association, and eligible to participate in the Association's Limited Payment Plan as described in the Agreement between you and the Association, and I agree to abide by the terms of the Agreement as they now appear or as they may be changed from time to time. It is my desire to offer to sell to you, from time to time, upon the following terms and conditions, promissory notes (hereinafter called "Notes") which I require from patients in payment of their bills:

1. I shall submit to you, on forms provided by you, a complete credit application on each proposed maker or endorser. You shall be under no obligation to purchase any Notes which I may offer to you hereunder and the terms of this Agreement shall apply only to those Notes which you shall, in your sole discretion, desire to be assigned.

2. All such Notes shall be payable to my order in not more than twenty-four equal consecutive monthly installments of not less than $10.00, the first of which is due not more than forty-five days from the date the Note is delivered, and shall, upon delivery, be indorsed by me without recourse.

3. All Notes offered for sale to you hereunder shall be on a form approved by you and shall contain a time payment charge which shall be determined in accordance with the charts which you shall furnish to me from time to time.

4. You shall pay me for all Notes purchased by you hereunder, an amount equal to the unpaid face amount thereof less the amount of the time payment charge included therein and also less an amount to be determined by you and the Association from time to time, written notice of which you agree to give to me, which amount shall be credited by you to the Georgia Dental Association Reserve Account maintained with The Citizens and Southern National Bank, Atlanta, Georgia. It is understood that I shall have no interest whatsoever in amounts so credited to the said Reserve Account. Until such time as you shall notify me to the contrary in writing, you are authorized to deduct 2% of the Amount Financed for credit to said Reserve Account.

5. In order to induce you to purchase such Notes as you may in your sole discretion deem advisable, I hereby warrant, represent, and agree with respect to each Note that I shall offer to you for purchase hereunder that:

a. Each such Note is valid, genuine and binding on legally competent parties whose signatures are affixed thereto and is in all respects what it purports to be;

b. Each such Note shall have been given in payment for professional services rendered and materials furnished by me within thirty days prior to the delivery of the Note, or in consideration of my promise to render such services and furnish such materials;

c. Each Note are not subject to any discounts, set-offs, or counterclaims. In the event that any of the above warranties, representations or agreements should, at any time, be breached or prove to be incorrect with respect to any Note sold to you, I hereby promise and agree, notwithstanding the indorsement of the Note by me to without recourse, promptly to repurchase the Note or Notes involved by paying to you or your transferee an amount equal to the remaining unpaid amount thereof less the interest originally disclosed by you for credit to the Georgia Dental Association Reserve Account, and less any amount of unearned charges as determined by your standard method of com-

VISITS WITH DENTISTS

The dentist's copy of the agreement and the certificate should be delivered personally, and the dentist should be encouraged to "sell" the Dental Payment Plan. The Dental Payment Plan is intended to handle all acceptable patients, not just those which the dentist does not wish to carry on his own books.

Be sure to leave the dentist an adequate supply of Confidential Statements, notes, and rate charts. Explain to him, and to his assistant who will be handling the applications, how to use the plan to its best advantage. You might suggest this simple step-by-step procedure:

Replaces Bulletin: OVER THE COUNTER - DENTAL PAYMENT PLAN - GEORGIA DENTAL ASSOCIATION - Dated 9/29/61

1. Determine how the patient wishes to pay - cash, 30 days, Charge Account Service, or Dental Payment Plan.
2. If the patient desires the Dental Payment Plan, have him fill out the Confidential Statement. The dentist should be sure to indicate the date of scheduled treatment completion.
3. Mail the Confidential Statement to the bank, or, for faster service, telephone in the information for approval.
4. R If the bank approves the credit, use the rate chart to determine the total note amount, the payment amount, the insurance premiums, and the finance charge. Complete the note, complying in all respects with the disclosure provisions of Regulation Z, including the "Annual Percentage Rate". All notes must be payable to the dentist.
5. R Have the patient sign the note. One copy of the note must be given to the patient at the time he signs it.
6. R As soon as treatment is begun, the dentist should endorse the note without recourse and send it to the bank. The dentist must retain one copy of the note for two full years as evidence of compliance with Regulation Z.
7. N The bank will discount the note and advance to the dentist 98% of the amount financed.

Above all, do not sign up a dentist and then forget him. The dentists should become a part of your regular calling program, just as your dealers and insurance agents. Only by constant followup can we expect maximum participation in the program and the collateral benefits that are to be obtained.

R TERMS

For amounts financed of less than $2,000, the maximum term is 24 months. If the amount financed is $2,000 or more, the maximum term is 36 months. As a general rule, patients should be encouraged to use shorter terms, preferably 12 months, so that they will not be inclined to postpone any additional treatment that might be necessary until they have repaid the loan. The minimum payment amount is $10.

R RATE

The rate is 6% add-on. Credit Life Insurance and Disability Insurance are optional with the patient, though the dentist should be encouraged to sell these coverages whenever possible. The rate charts necessary to cover every possible dental payment plan loan are:

CD6A 324-M	CD6.00 AM36

In preparing rate charts for dentists, use our regular paper rate chart cover (form 19-1021), and include the Credit Life and Disability inserts. Participating correspondent banks may use whatever rate they normally use for personal loans.

R NOTE Use Installment Note (form 19-1412), which provides a blank space for the payee. Notes should be payable to the dentist and assigned on the reverse:

APPLICATION

Dentists should be supplied with Confidential Statement (form 19-987). This is available in modified form, without the Citizens and Southern Bank identification on it, for use by correspondent banks.

DEALER RECORDS

Maintain for each dentist a "Dealer Rejection-Repossession Record" (form 19-928) and one "Dealer Purchase Guide" (form 19-994), to reflect the cumulative experience of all dentist. Any account charged to the Loss Reserve should be indicated on the individual dentist's record so that corrective measures may be taken with any dentist that is producing a poor class of paper. These two
R records, in conjunction with the New Loan Report prepared by Installment Loan Control, should give you a fairly complete picture of your overall program and the experience of each dentist. See the following Consumer Credit Operating Guide bulletins for use of these forms:

SALES FINANCE - DEALER CREDIT - DEALER PURCHASE GUIDE
SALES FINANCE - DEALER CREDIT - DEALER REJECTION-REPOSSESSION RECORD

APPROVAL AND PURCHASE OF NOTES

Complete credit information must be submitted on each applicant. In approving credit for these notes, the bank must follow the credit standards for Unsecured Personal Loans - do not look to the Reserve Account as a crutch to carry poor credits. If this credit is approved, notify the dentist and hold the application until the note is received. If the credit is rejected, enter it on your Rejection Log and handle as any other rejection.

R Upon receipt of the note, advance to the dentist 98% of the amount financed. The remaining 2% is the Georgia Dental Association's reserve. In those national bank and affiliate bank cities where the Sales Finance Department services the Dental Payment Plan, the reserve should be listed on the Discount Sheet as "Dealer Contingent Reserve." Credit it to your General Ledger "Dealer Reserve" account.

N Participating national bank branches, affiliate bank branches and those correspondent associates using the C&S Automated Installment Loan System should issue a check for the 2% reserve. Indicate in the disbursement section of the Discount Sheet that a check was issued to C&S National Bank for the amount of the reserve. Do not list the reserve in the spaces labeled Dealer Loss Reserve, Dealer Contingent Reserve, or Prepaid Dealer Reserve. The reserve check should indicate that it is for GDA Reserve, and give the customer's name. Mail to Retail Banking, Atlanta.

N In preparing the Discount Sheet, the loan should be classified as Type 2, Sales Finance, Class 30, Service - Miscellaneous. The dentist's name should be listed as indorser, so it will appear on the New Loan Report. Do not list the GDA as indorser. In the "Dealer Name" space show "GDA." Use the same dealer number for all dentists, so your total experience will be shown on one New Loan Report.

N DEALER RESERVE REPORTS

The Sales Finance Department in each national bank city and each affiliate bank will receive a Dealer Reserve Statement on their GDA Reserve shortly after the beginning of each month. Installment Loan Control should be asked to show as the dealer's address "Georgia Dental Association, c/o Retail Banking, Atlanta." As soon as you receive the statement, prepare a "Debit Dealer Reserve" ticket (form 19-1250) for the total of the reserve on new loans for the month. Use transaction code 99P. Issue a check for the same amount payable to the C&S National Bank, and mail it and the dealer's copy of the Reserve Statement to Retail Banking, Atlanta. All reserve transactions on the GDA's Reserve Statement should appear in the Dealer Contingent Reserve columns. If any transactions appear in the Dealer Loss Reserve columns, they should be reversed to Dealer Contingent Reserve.

National bank branches, affiliate branches, and correspondent associates should have no transactions on their GDA Reserve Statements. Please contact Retail Banking, Atlanta, if you receive GDA Reserve Statements with transactions or ending balances.

SETTLEMENT SHEETS

R Correspondent banks, and those correspondent associates not using the C&S Automated Installment Loan System, should send a settlement sheet and a check for the reserve on new loans to Retail Banking, Atlanta, by the 10th of the month. Even if you have no activity during the month, it is necessary to prepare the Settlement Sheet to reflect the outstanding and Past Dues. The settlement sheet is illustrated below.

National bank offices, affiliates, and those correspondent associates using the C&S Automated Installment Loan System need not prepare a settlement sheet.

UNCOLLECTIBLE ACCOUNTS

Any account that has one or more installments 90 days past due, after normal collection effort, may be charged to the Association's Reserve Account. While the Reserve Account is intended to protect the bank against all credit losses, it is not intended to substitute for collection effort. The bank must do everything possible to prevent the loss before calling upon the Association for reimbursement. After all collection efforts have been expended, send your complete file containing the original written credit application and copies of all collection correspondence, along with your note, to Retail Banking. The note should be endorsed to the Georgia Dental Association without recourse. Indicate in your file the net balance after computing the interest rebate.

In the event that an account becomes seriously delinquent, and the treatment has not yet been finished, the bank should collect from the dentist an amount representing the unfinished portion of the treatment and apply it to the loan before charging the balance to the reserve account.

INSURANCE CLAIMS

These loans may be covered by credit life and disability insurance. In the event of the death of an insured customer on whom the dental treatment has been completed, credit life claims should be filed for the unpaid balance of the loan. However, if a patient dies and the dental treatment has not yet been completed, the dentist should be called upon to return to the bank the amount of money represented by the unfinished treatment. This should be applied to the loan and a claim filed for the unpaid balance.

REFINANCING

The new agreements permit the bank to reschedule or refinance a dental loan, combining it with additional debts if necessary, and to extend the terms if the bank feels that such rescheduling will prevent a loss. Such refinancing does not relieve the Association of its liability and, in the event that the customer still cannot pay, the unpaid portion of his dental loan may still be charged to the reserve account.

ADDITIONAL TREATMENT

In the event that a patient requires additional treatment before he pays out a dental loan, the cost of the additional treatment may be added to the R unpaid balance and reworked for an additional 24 or 36 months, depending on the amount financed. Of course, in such a situation the 2% reserve would apply only to the cost of the additional treatment.

FORMS

R Agreements and rate charts may be ordered from Retail Banking, Atlanta. All other forms may be requisitioned, by form number, in the normal manner from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta.

CORRESPONDENT BANKS

Correspondent Banks may participate in this program by signing three copies of the Agreement Between the Association and Participating Bank. There may be towns in your area where the local bank will not be interested in participating. In such cases, we have agreed to work with the dentists in those towns where it is practicable for us to investigate the paper and render a normal collection service. Before signing up dentists in other cities, however, check with the local bank to be sure that it has no objection to your handling the financing for his dentist.

CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE

The Dental Payment Plan is intended to finance treatment that requires extended repayment terms. With Charge Account Service, we have the perfect teammate to finance smaller amounts requiring shorter terms. Nowhere else can the dentists find such a complete financing arrangement to offer their patients. When calling on your dentists, be sure to present both programs and encourage them to utilize them to their best advantage. The dentists can eliminate many of their "money" problems by taking the positive approach in offering their patients these options ---

Revision of Page 2 only of OVER-THE-COUNTER - INDORSED LOANS - Dated 4/25/69

For the purposes of this bulletin, Indorsed Loans are all over-the-counter consumer credit installment loans which (1) are unsecured and supported by two or more signers, and (2) are not for home improvements or repairs.

These may be:

(1) Husband and Wife Loans. A loan made jointly to the Husband and Wife or to the Wife with the Husband's accommodation indorsement.
(2) Joint or Co-Maker Loans. Loans made to two or more parties for their joint use.
(3) Accommodation Indorser Loans. A loan in which the indorser "lends" his name and responsibility to the transaction to strengthen the credit for the benefit of the borrower.

DESIRABILITY

Through an indorsed loan, a good potential customer with limited credit history or job tenure and without sufficient acceptable collateral may establish his credit; and, an individual who has permitted his credit to become temporarily damaged may re-establish himself. Also, an indorser may add the necessary strength to permit handling a request of a customer or potential customer where the amount requested is more than can be supported by the applicant's credit alone.

Although many indorsed loans will be unprofitable in themselves, we should handle willingly, and actively solicit and suggest this as a possibility when the applicant has the potential of becoming a good customer to whom we may later - after developing experience - lend on his signature only. This type applicant seldom has close ties with another local bank and through service and solicitation can generally be sold our "Full Service Banking".

SOURCE OF BUSINESS

Opportunities to make this type loan will result from overall advertising and solicitation for personal loan applications. It is necessary to recognize, from interviews and applications, conditions which indicate that a qualified indorser will permit handling a request which would otherwise be rejected. When this condition exists, suggest this possibility to the applicant and let him know generally the type endorser that would be required. (See following paragraphs on "Credit Requirements").

(1) DO NOT suggest a specific individual to an applicant as a possible indorser except in those instances where the advance is to directly benefit both parties.
(2) DO NOT suggest an indorser to a bad credit risk as an indirect method of rejecting an application.

In considering the need for an indorser, always keep in mind that most people take pride in their ability to get credit "on their own". Asking for indorsers when not needed will result in the loss of good business - maybe not the first time, but some place along the line a more understanding lender will take your customer.

CREDIT REQUIREMENTS

Investigation: The extent of the investigation on each party must be the same as normal for regular unsecured borrowers. (See Bulletin: "Lending General - Credit Investigation").

The Borrower: Weaknesses in the borrower's credit evidenced by: (1) short employment, (2) low income, (3) limited credit background, (4) frequent small loan company borrowings and (5) slowness or irregularity in past payment records, may be offset by a satisfactory indorser. However, the borrower must have the capacity to meet the required installments under existing conditions and there must be no evidence of poor or bad character.

The "Family Budget Consolidation Work Sheet" should be used when there is a question as to the borrower's capacity to meet his required monthly obligations.

The Indorser: The indorser must have the capacity and character to indicate that he will and can meet the required repayment schedule if called upon to do so. It is much more difficult to collect an obligation from one person made by and for the benefit of another than it would be to collect a direct obligation made by himself and for his own use. Therefore, the credit of the indorser must be stronger than would normally be required if the indorser were borrowing the money in his own name and for his own use.

Personal contact should be made with the indorser to assure that in fact he does indorse the note and that he fully understands his liability and responsibility to meet the obligation if the borrower fully fails to do so.

Occasionally a request will be received from a good bank customer that a loan be made to another on the strength of his indorsement. Previously discussed credit requirements for indorsers apply and an investigation of the borrower's credit should be made. Exceptional or unusual weaknesses should be discussed in generalities (do not give out confidential information) with the indorser to give him the benefit of our experience and opinion. An obviously bad credit risk should not be handled even with a stronger indorser.

TERMS

Up to 24 months - $10.00 minimum monthly payment.

R In determining terms consider - (1) the credit worthiness of the borrower and the indorser, (2) the borrower's stability and his capacity to repay the required monthly payment, and (3) the purpose of the loan.

INSURANCE

Credit life insurance or credit life and disability insurance should be solicited on each eligible transaction. When feasible, place this insurance on:

(1) the borrower in accommodation indorser transactions;
(2) the one to whom we look for repayment in joint borrowers or co-maker transactions;
(3) the "bread winner" in husband-wife transactions.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - INDORSED LOANS - Dated 8-17-64

NOTE: This insurance can be placed on only one of the parties obligated on the transaction. That party must also sign and show his date of birth in the insurance statement section of the note (required by Regulation Z effective 7-1-69).

FORMS TO USE

1. Forms required on each transaction:

   (1) Discount Sheet (Form #19-898). Use in interview and investigation of borrower and indorser if interviewed. Also for discounting purposes.
   (2) Unsecured Installment Note (Form #19-912). Joint or Co-Maker Loans - have both parties sign on the face of the note in the spaces provided. Accommodation Indorser Loans - have the borrower sign on the face of the note in the space provided and the accommodation indorser sign in the space provided on the reverse of the note under the printed guarantee.

2. Forms which may or may not be required:

   (1) Confidential Statement (Form #19-987). Use to obtain personal information on an indorser, borrower or co-maker when interview is not feasible.
   (2) Budget Consolidation Work Sheet (Form #19-885). Use in the interview when judgment indicates the advisability of using this as an aid to ourselves in appraising capacity and/or as an aid to the one being interviewed in appraising his own situation.
   (3) Borrower's Authorization To Pay (Form #19-889). Use only when part or all of disbursement is to be made other than to the borrower. If disbursement is made by check payable jointly to the borrower and another, this form is not needed.
   (4) Guaranty (Form #15-531). Use when an indorser does not want the borrower to know that he is guaranteeing the transaction.

DISBURSEMENT OF FUNDS

Joint or Co-Maker Loans - make disbursement jointly to both parties.
Accommodation Indorsed Loans - make disbursement to borrower.

Generally, disbursement will be made by the bank check directly to borrower(s) or by deposit to a checking account. However, at times one of the conditions on which the approval of credit is based is that outstanding balances with other creditors be paid off. In cases, a bank check should be made jointly to the borrower(s) and the creditor, or to the creditor alone on authorization given in the "Borrower's Authorization To Pay".

COLLECTIONS

Collections are basically the same for all loans; however, it is necessary that the indorser be kept informed at all times on the status of the transaction. Copies of all notices (See Operating Guide Bulletin - "COLLECTIONS - NOTICES - ENDORSED LOANS") and letters should be sent to the indorser. Also, by telephone or letter, keep the indorser informed of the results of telephone or personal contacts with the borrower and of the fact that we are looking to him to pay if the borrower does not, after reasonable follow-up. Indorsers can be of substantial help in adjusting these accounts and should be called upon for this help.

SPECIAL NOTICE

1. The Georgia Legislature enacted House Bill No. 89 in March, 1969, thereby changing the extent to which a married women can act as surety or assume the debts of her husband. The law now states:

N E W

> "The wife may not bind that portion of her separate estate which is composed of tangible personal property by any contract of suretyship or by any assumption of the debts of her husband. The sale of any portion of her separate estate which is composed of tangible personal property to a creditor of her husband in extinguishment of his debt shall be absolutely void."

The bank's attorneys further clarify:

> "This carves out "tangible personal property" which would be anything in the nature of jewelry, furniture, equipment, machinery, automobiles, appliances, etc. - anything having a tangible quality and not a part of real estate. Consequently a married woman could pledge or create a security interest in real property (land and improvements) or intangible property (stocks, bonds, contract rights, etc.) to support a guaranty or surety obligation or to assume the debts of her husband but could not do so for those purposes with regard to the tangible personal property."

2. A corporation may or may not be authorized by its corporate charter to indorse another's note. Generally, such provisions are not part of the corporate charter, and in the absence of specific knowledge of such provisions, corporations should not be accepted as indorsers.

3. A "verbal indorsement" may or may not have value, depending on the integrity of the indorser. Such an indorsement can not be enforced by legal means, and it is much too easy for an indorser to forget his promise or to have an honest misunderstanding of his responsibility. Therefore, we should not base a credit decision on the strength of any verbal indorsement.

Since our lot financing program was developed in 1965, following changes in real estate regulations for national banks, a moderate number of loans have been made with excellent experience. The larger than average loan, above average credits, and collateral relationships combine to make lot financing a very desirable class of business that should be solicited aggressively.

CLASSIFICATION

These loans should be classified Collateral since they are consumer in nature and contain the add-on rate with life and disability insurance. We should describe the collateral on the discount sheet as S/D R. E. LOT, so that the ledger cards can be readily identified at any time. It will not be necessary to add these to the real estate total for call reports since they will represent only a small per cent of the total real estate outstanding.

AUTHORITY TO LEND

State-Chartered Banks - Section 2 (a)

"Any state bank may make loans secured by a first lien on improved or unimproved real estate, including farm lands or forest tracts of land and improved business and residential properties. The advance should not exceed 80% of the fair market value when amortized".

National Banks - Law -- 12 U.S.C. 371

"Any national banking association may make real estate loans upon improved real estate, including improved farm land and improved business and residential properties".

Land may be considered improved under special conditions.
Paragraph (e), Section 2020 ---

(e) Off-site improvements
Whether off-site improvements have enhanced the value is a question of fact to be determined in each case. Examples of real estate improved by off-site improvements:

(1) Property which is valuable because the improvements of a developed urban area are immediately available to it.
(2) Lots in a housing subdivision for which substantial improvements such as streets, water, sewer and other utilities have been provided.
(3) Prime industrial property enhanced in value because it is located on a paved street with utilities and transportation facilities available.

Revision of Pages 1 and 2 only of OVER-THE-COUNTER - LOT FINANCING - Dated 1-23-69

APPRAISAL

R An appraisal made by an outside appraiser or two competent lending officers is necessary to make a conforming real estate loan. Where the appraisal is made by a bank officer, the following points should be carefully considered in arriving at a reasonable evaluation.

1. Comparable land values - it is desirable that the lending officer compare other lot sales in the immediate vicinity to establish a fair market price.

2. Personal contact with realtors and other builders in the area to establish a fair market price.

3. The sales contract - this in itself is a good indication of the "market price"; however, it must be established that a reasonable price has been set. If a source of equity funds is not evident from the interview and the credit application, this may suggest to the lender that the price may have been adjusted upward to compensate for a limited down payment. By employing the above methods of appraising, we will substantiate the final conclusion reached.

Qualified outside appraisers should be engaged when large tracts of land are to be developed into land lots. This type request will usually originate within the commercial or mortgage loan departments. The developer will generally sell a majority of the lots to builders; however, there may be some which will be available to individuals. The consumer lender should work closely with the commercial or real estate officer to determine if the land lots are priced reasonably with established land values as well as to give the developer a fair rate of return.

EXTENT OF INVESTIGATION

The normal requirements regarding thorough interview and complete investigation should be met. (See OVER-THE-COUNTER - APPLICATION AND INTERVIEW and LENDING GENERAL - CREDIT INVESTIGATION).

CREDIT REQUIREMENTS

Lot financing should be based primarily on favorable credit factors - adequacy and stability of income, reasonable debt position and satisfactory paying habits, rather than over-reliance on collateral. Even though the land value might more than cover the loan, we are not interested in repayment through foreclosure except where inability to repay develops from unforeseen circumstances.

Replaces Pages 3 and 4 of Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - LOT FINANCING Dated 1-23-6

RATES

See LENDING GENERAL - RETAIL RATES - OVER-THE-COUNTER. Closing costs and any attorney fees will be paid by the customer - either directly or included in the advance, which is not to exceed 80% including such fees.

TERMS AND ADVANCE

Since lot financing must conform, as a real estate loan, the advance cannot exceed 80% of the appraisal or purchase price, whichever is lower. With an 80% advance, the loan must be repayable in regular monthly installments.

Maturities should not exceed a five-year period. It is desirable that loans under $3,000 not exceed a three-year maturity, so as to provide the necessary amortization to keep the loan on a sound basis. Actually, maturities should be geared to expected time of permanent financing on the home loan; however, in most cases, the borrower will tend to prefer the longest maturity available.

There may be occasional situations which will warrant exceeding the 80% of appraisal. The following is quoted from The National Banking Review, December 1963, Pages 262 - 263.

"A recent ruling permits the use of pledged collateral as an offset to any excessive portion of a real estate loan. For example, a real estate loan will not be considered in violation of the statute where the amount of the loan exceeds the limitations of that statute, provided the excessive portion of the loan is fully secured by pledged collateral, in the form of a savings account, certificate of deposit, or other security to which the bank has ready access and first claim".

If additional collateral is taken under this ruling, we should restrict our collateral to savings; stock that is properly margined; cash value life insurance; or, the like.

PREPARATION AND CLOSING OF LOAN

After the credit requirements have been met, the loan must be properly processed to adequately assure the bank of a first mortgage lien. There are two ways we can assure ourselves of a first mortgage lien:

1. An opinion from a reliable attorney, OR
2. Property check performed by Legal Messenger Service. (See LENDING GENERAL - REAL ESTATE - PROPERTY VERIFICATION). This method will be found to be both faster and cheaper, in general, than waiting for an attorney.

Replaces Pages 3 and 4 of Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - LOT FINANCING Dated 1-23-69

Although a title policy is not required, the additional cost is reasonable if the customer desires one. It will be satisfactory for the customer to use his attorney to provide the bank with an opinion. Attorney's fees will be paid by the customer either direct or as a part of the loan advance, so long as it is within the 80% advance.

The attorney should be provided with a description of the deed, and the name and address of the seller. With this information, the real estate records will be checked to assure the bank of a first mortgage. Regardless of whether the attorney closes the loan, or it is closed by the lending officer, the following forms will be necessary:

1. Consumer Collateral Installment Note (Rev. 6/69)
2. Deed to Secure Debt (15-568)
3. Lot Appraisal Form (19-941) illustrated on pages 5, 6, and 7.
4. Owner's affidavit - this is generally done to assure lender that there are no outstanding labor bills and unpaid bills for assessments.
5. Borrower's affidavit - assures lender that borrower or deponent swears no improvements or repair bills outstanding 90 days preceding the date of the loan. Further that there are no suits pending against deponent, and that there are no assessments against the property. (Prepared by attorney)
6. Survey - This is a survey of the land lot itself to insure that the measurements are accurate, and to disclose any easements or encroachments existing on the property. It is not mandatory that the bank require this, but the customer may so desire.

In many instances, the bank will have to provide these forms to the attorney for final preparation. It is recommended that whenever possible, the attorney be present at the final closing with the borrower and the lending officer. It is also important that after the closing, the attorney record the documents for the bank. As a general practice this will be made a part of the final opinion which the attorney will submit to the bank.

INSURANCE

Lot loans are eligible for life and disability insurance under our Prudential policy. Our Metropolitan credit life real estate policy is not applicable since it requires that the property be improved and that the insured customer live therein. (See Operating Guide bulletins - INSURANCE - CREDIT LIFE, INSURANCE-DISABILITY).

SOURCE OF BUSINESS

Real estate companies can provide us with prospects for which they have land lots to sell. Present commercial customers or prospects would welcome this service as a benefit both to their customers as well as themselves.

When mortgage loans are being handled on a regular basis, builders and developers will approach us for financing from the outset on the land. Individual lot financing will provide these builders with the necessary tools to turn over their investment and realize a profit. Thus, the mortgage loan department can utilize consumer lot financing as the beginning step toward eventual construction and permanent financing.

REGULATION Z

Show Total of Payments and Finance Charge in appropriate spaces on the note. This is because the customer's dwelling is not yet in the picture. R
The customer does have the right to rescind.

SECTION OVER-THE-COUNTER

SUBJECT NEGOTIABLE SECURITIES

TOPIC

 Date 4-24-69

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - NEGOTIABLE SECURITIES - Dated 6-10-68

Stocks and Bonds are desirable as collateral due to their liquidity and chance of appreciation (stocks), if the proper safeguards are taken. Stocks will most often be utilized and offered as collateral.

CLASSIFICATIONS

The two basic classifications of stocks are listed and unlisted stocks. Listed stocks refer to those that are listed and actively traded on the two national security exchanges. Just because the stock offered as security on a loan is listed does not necessarily mean that there is a ready market for it. This factor should be considered in accepting a stock for collateral.

Unlisted securities are those stocks which are traded on local "over-the-counter" markets. This market is made up usually of relatively small local corporations that do not qualify or desire to be listed on a national exchange. Just because a company's stock is traded on an "over-the-counter" basis does not mean that it is not as valuable as a nationally listed stock. All of the banks and most insurance companies are listed on these exchanges.

BASIC CONSIDERATIONS

Here are the basic considerations in loans on securities:

1. Moral risk of borrower.
2. Financial responsibility of borrower.
3. A definite understanding with the borrower that the loan must be repaid on a regular schedule whether in installments or in one payment, and that the loan must be properly margined at all times. This means that when the market value declines, additional collateral should be pledged, or the loan reduced to bring it in line with the original agreement.
4. The value of collateral.
5. The marketability of the collateral and whether the market can absorb a large number of shares if you have a concentration.
6. Related laws.
7. Documentation.
8. Changes in laws or economic conditions.

SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS

Determine that there is a ready market for the security offered and that it is actively traded. A call to a broker friend can resolve this question quickly.

A stock selling for under $10.00 is to be avoided unless something of a favorable nature is known of the company. As a rule, loans should not be made on extremely low priced stock, although there could be exceptions to this under certain conditions.

Closely held securities, regardless of the price, should be avoided unless a purchase agreement, at a stated price, can be obtained from the company.

Speculative stocks that are subject to drastic price fluctuations should be avoided if possible and if they are used at all, the margin requirements should be tightened to insure that you are properly protected.

APPROVED STOCK PURCHASE PLANS

We will continue to make loans to persons under approved stock purchase plans where company stock is being sold to key personnel, and payments are made on a monthly or quarterly basis. Also, this includes loans to officers and directors of correspondent banks on stocks of their bank.

REGULATION "U"

The Federal Government has a tight set of regulations that govern the use of stocks. One of these is the "margin requirement" that prohibits a bank from lending 100% of the market value of a stock that is pledged as collateral. At the present time our margin requirement for stocks is 30%, or phrased another way - "lend only 70% of the market value". This is required when the loan is for any other purposes than purchase of stock.

If, however, a customer wishes to borrow money to purchase the stock and uses the stock to secure the loan, then only 20% of the value can be loaned with an 80% margin.

On every loan secured by any stock, a Regulation "U" form must be signed by the customer and acknowledged by the person making the loan. The customer must state the reason for which the money is being borrowed.

BONDS

Corporate Bonds, Government Bonds and Treasury Bonds are the most common types.

1. Government Savings Bonds - Series E, F, and G are not assignable. Series H Bonds are assignable but are rarely offered as collateral.
2. Corporate and Treasury Bonds are normally "bearer" type bonds; that is, no owner is named on the bond and they can be redeemed by the holder. These bonds are quoted and traded on the major exchanges. As these instruments are extremely negotiable they must be kept under dual control in the collateral file.

Since they are "bearer" bonds, no assignment or power of attorney is needed. If it becomes necessary to sell the bonds in order to liquidate the loan, it would be advisable to obtain a "sale order" from the customer.

FORMS NEEDED

1. Collateral Note (19-880) - complete description of securities and number of shares pledged, i.e. 500 shares common stock American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Cert. No. 71805 and No. 71806.
2. Assignment of Investment Security (15-563) - one for each stock certificate in blank, signed but undated. Exactly as stock is made out and acknowledged by interviewer. Attach one to each certificate.
3. Regulation "U" (15-557) - one per loan, completely filled out. It should be signed in the same manner as the stock certificate is made out. This form stays with the stock certificate and stock assignments, and logged into the collateral file for safekeeping.
4. Collateral Receipt Card (15-575) - this is a three part form consisting of one white original (customer's receipt for collateral), yellow collateral card (for bank's record of collateral held in safekeeping) and a margin card (for periodically checking margin on loan). When loan is paid out and collateral released to the customer, collateral card should be signed by the customer as acknowledgement of release of securities to the owner.
5. Hypothecation Agreement (15-501) if needed. Used only when another party, other than the borrower, is allowing his securities to be pledged on a loan. It should be kept with stock certificates in safekeeping.

The Georgia Legislature enacted House Bill No. 89 in March, 1969, thereby, changing the extent to which a married woman can act as surety or assume the debts of her husband. The law now states:

"The wife may not bind that portion of her separate estate which is composed of tangible personal property by any contract of suretyship or by any assumption of the debts of her husband. The sale of any portion of her separate estate which is composed of tangible personal property to a creditor of her husband in extinguishment of his debt shall be absolutely void". N E W

The bank's attorneys further clarify:

"This carves out "tangible personal property" which would be anything in the nature of jewelry, furniture, equipment, machinery, automobiles, appliances, etc. - anything having a tangible quality and not a part of real estate. Consequently, a married woman could pledge or create a security interest in real property (land and improvements) or intangible property (stocks, bonds, contract rights, etc.) to support a guaranty or surety obligation or to assume the debts of her husband but could not do so for those purposes with regard to the tangible personal property)."

SAFEKEEPING

All securities, of course, should be held in your collateral file under dual control. The note and all related papers must be signed by the customer exactly as shown on the security.

FRAUDS

As our economy grows, it becomes more complex, and along with complexity, the dangers expand. Unfortunately, there is a market in this country in stolen and counterfeit securities. Needless to say, if such stocks are pledged against a loan, you will never see your customer after the note is signed. The only practical safeguard is to "know your customer". If you don't know him, then good lending practices require that you investigate to your satisfaction.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT - Dated 10-8-68

Property improvement loans are made to individuals for the purpose of improving residential real estate. The improvements may be additions, remodeling, repairs, landscaping, wiring, air conditioning, and many others. Basically, any improvements to the property or the house qualifies for financing.

CLASSIFICATION

Classify as Property Improvement.

Property improvement loans feature several benefits to the customer and to the bank.

A. BENEFITS TO THE CUSTOMER ARE:
   1. Prompt service is given with no red tape involved.
   2. Low bank rates.
   3. Reworks of existing mortgages are eliminated, thus avoiding closing costs and fees.
   4. Life and disability protection is available for the borrower.
   5. The improvements protect as well as improve the real estate investment of the borrower.
   6. Any type of improvement is financed.

B. BENEFITS TO THE BANK:
   1. The homeowner is generally an above-average borrower, and is a prime prospect for more banking services.
   2. The average unpaid balance of this type of loan is high.
   3. The yield is profitable.
   4. Collection expense is low.
   5. Loss ratios are very favorable.
   6. The customer frequently has given this a great deal of advance thought and planning.

ELIGIBLE PROPERTY

1. Owner-occupied housing.
2. Single family residential rental property (loans to owners).

(Ownership of more than one single-family residence for rental purposes, or multiple unit apartments, duplexes, triplexes, etc., places the individual in a more commercial category. Property improvement loans of this nature should be handled as Term loans).

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT - Dated 10-8-68

CREDIT REQUIREMENTS

THE BORROWER

The degree of protection the bank will enjoy will be evidenced by the credit standing of the borrower and by his amount of equity in his home. However, it is important to remember that equity cannot replace weaknesses in the borrower's credit or personal background, such as:

a. Low income
b. Unstable employment
c. Heavy indebtedness
d. Litigation or slow payment record
e. Questionable personal habits

Although a recordable instrument is used, a property improvement note is basically unsecured, so there should be no doubt in your mind concerning the ability of the borrower to repay the loan. In addition, we should always be satisfied from both the interview and results of credit investigation that the customer is of good character.

THE PROPERTY

The nature and extent of improvements have a direct relationship to the location of the property. Some specific considerations:

1. Present property value
2. Type neighborhood
3. Is neighborhood progressing or deteriorating?
4. Will proposed improvements overprice the property if sale becomes necessary?

RATE-TERMS-ADVANCES

Rates are set forth in LENDING GENERAL - RETAIL RATES - OVER-THE-COUNTER. Terms are five years maximum, with three years being the most common. The chief determining factor here must be the customer's ability to pay. Advances may be made up to 100% as working progresses, if this is considered a desirable approach to a given situation.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT - Dated 10-8-68

FORMS TO USE

19-898	Discount Sheet
19-916	Consumer Property Improvement Note	The body of the note is divided into two sections: Repairs and Goods. Repairs include structural additions such as rooms, carports, etc., as well as general remodeling and modernization such as painting and plastering. The Goods portion refers to such things as built-in appliances, wall-to-wall carpeting, and central heating systems.
19-889	Borrower's Authorization (where applicable)

INTERVIEW

Probably the only thing that distinguishes this interview from other loan interviews (see OVER-THE-COUNTER, APPLICATION AND INTERVIEW) is the procedure necessary to clearly determine the purpose of the loan. Most of our customers are honest in stating the purpose of the loan. However, this risk can be greater than in almost any other type of normal loan. Possibilities for white lies, subterfuge, and on down to outright fraud are perhaps greater here than in any other type of over-the-counter unsecured lending. Certain loss situations have shown that some common real uses of the money are to:

1. Purchase other goods.
2. Pay off or reduce debts.
3. Pay taxes.
4. Use for capital requirements in new business.
5. Bolster a short-of-capital business.

At the time of the interview, your customer usually will be able to furnish you with a contractor's estimate of the work to be done. If the customer is overseeing or doing the work himself, he will probably give you a definite idea of the scope of the job. Here are some safeguards that we may want to use to help assure proper loan use:

1. Ask the customer for a contractor's estimate of material and labor to be used.
2. Pay the contractor and/or building supply firm on a direct basis, securing a borrower's authorization for this purpose.
3. Where large amounts are involved, arrange to make an inspection of the property similar to one we would make for a real estate construction loan.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT - Dated 10-8-68

INVESTIGATION

Normal, thorough credit investigation practices will apply (see LENDING GENERAL - CREDIT INVESTIGATION). Special attention must be given to verification of property ownership when we intend to record (loan over $1500). Arrangements have been made with a firm, Legal Messenger Service, Atlanta, telephone 873-5753 collect, that can give us property checking service in approximately 90 Georgia counties. (See LENDING GENERAL - REAL ESTATE - PROPERTY VERIFICATION).

DISBURSEMENT OF FUNDS

We should normally:

1. Disburse funds payable jointly to the supplier and customer, or,
2. Disburse funds directly to the supplier (having secured a borrower's authorization), or
3. Deposit funds to the customer's checking account, or
4. Pay funds directly (cashier's check) to the customer, only if none of the above 3 can be done.

RECORDING AND RELEASE

All loans of $1,500 and over should be recorded on the real estate records of the county in which the property is located. If a collection problem develops on any property improvement loan which has not been recorded, it should be recorded at once. Recording of the note does not give us the security of a mortgage or impair the title to the property or prevent the property from being sold without paying off our note. Recording does place any prospective buyer on notice that there is an unpaid indebtedness for improvements to the property, which might induce the buyer to require that the loan be paid-off before accepting the transaction. In any event, the bank might be notified that a sale of the property is about to take place and take the necessary steps to recover the loan amount. The legal description of the property (as furnished by Legal Messenger Service) should be given. Also, type or print the customer's name below his signature.

Where we record, we should release. This means that we should collect sufficient documentary fees at loan inception to pay for release. A form-type letter should be used as transmittal letter to the county clerk, with a carbon copy going to the customer so he'll know we've done our part. Triplicate to customer file. Close attention to this is very important. Failure to release means, in many cases, that the customer has to get us to sign a quitclaim deed which frequently costs him $25 to $50, depending on his attorney.

OPERATING BULLETIN

SECTION OVER-THE-COUNTER

SUBJECT PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT

TOPIC GEORGIA PLAN

 Date 11-6-68

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - SAVANNAH PLAN - HOME IMPROVEMENT

At this point, the Savannah Plan is now in process of becoming the Georgia Plan. Modifications in the broad approach will take place to fit the needs in each city, however, the portion of the plan relating to Property Improvement loans can and should be standardized. Additionally, uniform reporting procedures are needed so that we may determine the extent of our systemwide activity and the ultimate collectibility of this type of loan.

Preliminary experience in Savannah tells us that loans can be made to low income families to improve sub-standard housing for more than 75% of the applicants and on a basis that should produce reasonably good collection results. It has been clearly demonstrated that a positive approach is mandatory and that every avenue must be explored to FIND A WAY TO MAKE IT - not an excuse for rejection.

Our original premise still stands - we are going to solicit this business, and lower credit standards somewhat. Through thorough and careful interviews and counseling, flexibility in terms, mutual faith, and appropriate collection techniques, we will make the Georgia Plan work and show that private enterprise can do a job without abandoning the profit motive and substituting "giveaway programs".

WHO ARE GEORGIA PLAN APPLICANTS

For purposes of record keeping and determining which customers qualify for extraordinary handling, only general guidelines can be provided. Within these guidelines, each loan interviewer must determine whether a given application should be handled as a Georgia Plan transaction or as a normal property improvement plan. Our intent is to provide funds to improve substandard areas or houses and a willingness to work with owner occupants who would not immediately qualify for a property improvement loan under our usual standards.

We hope that loans to landlords for purposes of upgrading their properties and other loans to credit worthy individuals will be made as a result of Georgia Plan promotions but such loans should not be considered as part of the portfolio and procedures covered by this bulletin.

BASIC PLAN

We will handle Georgia Plan home improvement loans using the same forms, procedures and general operating techniques as are presently used in making property improvement loans, with modifications to fit the circumstances. Only the modifications are covered in the following paragraphs. Modifications include revision of terms and credit standards to some degree, but most importantly, spending the time that is necessary to qualify as many applicants as possible. The latter, short range excess expense, should be considered as our corporate investment in raising living standards and increasing incomes for the future.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - SAVANNAH PLAN - HOME IMPROVEMENT

CREDIT REQUIREMENTS

Handling of weaker credit risks than usual will be the normal course of events in this plan.

Character, desire and pride of ownership are key factors to be considered. Slow paying habits in the past may be discounted if the interviewer is satisfied that the applicant has a sincere desire to do better in the future and has reasonable job security.

Our whole underlying philosophy in handling residential home improvement loans should be that we want to help those that want to help themselves. We do not envision a "giveaway" program in any sense of the word to the extent of completely departing from good business practice. Impressions from the interview and from a visit to the home will form much of the basis for decision.

*The basic eligibility requirements for life and disability insurance are:

1. He is 61 years of age or less;
2. His contract or note is repayable in periodic installments over a period of seven years or less;
3. The balance to be financed is $10,000 or less; and,
4. The debtor must be gainfully employed during normal workweeks of at least 30 hours (either for others or for self) at the time the loan is made.

Customers ~~PERSONS~~ WHOSE ENTIRE INCOME IS FROM INVESTMENTS, RENTALS, PENSIONS, ETC., ARE NOT ELIGIBLE.

INTERVIEW AND APPLICATION

It should be obvious that our abilities to deal with people in difficult circumstances, to lend and collect, are going to be tested as never before. It should be equally obvious that a thorough job of securing a complete application and conducting a good interview takes on even more importance.

Debt Counseling and an "in depth" interview should be part of our program with no limitation on the amount of investigation or handling as long as we can come up with a transaction that has a reasonable chance of success.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - SAVANNAH PLAN - HOME IMPROVEMENT

HANDLING APPLICATIONS:

1. The first thing to do upon receiving a phone or written application is - GET THE CUSTOMER INTO THE BANK.
2. Everybody in the bank who normally handles loans will be involved in this and will conduct these interviews.
3. There will be no "buck passing". In other words, whoever gets the phone call should talk to the applicant and set up an appointment and not transfer the call to another branch or another individual. The same is true with applicants actually coming into the bank. They should be handled at the branch and by the person to whom they first talked.
4. Special care must be taken to determine what materials are to be purchased and used, and who is to perform the work. The contractor should be of good reputation, and we should investigate sufficiently to assure ourselves of this. The Better Business Bureau should be called where the firm's reputation is unknown to you.

INVESTIGATION AND DECISION-MAKING

It is not practical that one-stop loan service be accomplished on Georgia Plan loans. Of more importance than speed are the fundamentals of getting a full credit statement and conducting credit investigation as needed, including the making of a personal visit to the applicant's premises to help form the decision. This personal visit should be made after credit investigation and before ownership verification. (See Verification of Ownership). It is not necessary to make such visits where the investigation obviously precludes handling the transaction.

There are three reasons for lender to make the personal visit:

1. To see that the nature and extent of the proposed improvements are warranted,
2. To gain a further insight into the character aspect of the credit by relating it to the individual (clean, orderly. Do you get the feeling he's trying to improve his standards of living or does this appear to be kin to a handout?), and
3. To compare "before" and "after", because if the loan is approved, he will make another visit to assure satisfactory completion of the work before funds are disbursed. We suggest a polaroid camera for the purpose of taking pictures to aid in evaluation.

REJECTIONS

To be certain that all possibilities of making a loan have been explored, rejections should be confirmed by the senior Consumer Credit Officer in each city before notifying the applicant of our decision.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER-THE-COUNTER - SAVANNAH PLAN - HOME IMPROVEMENT

COLLECTION FOLLOWUP

At the ten-day point, past-due accounts should be reviewed. Accounts that have established a paying pattern of six or more satisfactory payments should be sent a notice. Others should be referred for personal handling.

The emphasis must be on helping the borrower to find a way to pay. Wherever possible, the person who loaned the money should perform the collection followup. His familiarity with the customer's situation should enable him to do an effective collection job including family budget counseling as we go along.

EXTENSIONS, LATE CHARGES, TRANSFERS

Normal procedures will prevail.

VERIFICATION OF OWNERSHIP

→ See LENDING GENERAL - REAL ESTATE - PROPERTY VERIFICATION.

County records must be checked to verify ownership before approval. ~~See Bulletin 10-8-68 - OVER-THE-COUNTER - PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT for property ownership verification procedures.~~

PERFECTING OUR SECURITY INTEREST

All Property Improvement Notes as well as Deeds to Secure Debt should be recorded.

COMBINATION DEBT CONSOLIDATION AND PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT LOANS

Cases will exist where it may appear advisable to make a combination debt consolidation and property improvement loan. The debt consolidation portion of the loan should not exceed 25% of the total loan. We will consider this only when it will better enable the customer to pay our payment.

SECURED TRANSACTIONS

Preliminary experience indicates that a significant number of applications can be handled by picking up the first mortgage on the property to be improved. This approach is particularly advantageous where the existing mortgage is relatively small and the applicant's income will not permit an increase in monthly payments. With terms up to 10 years permissible, through the resulting "Baby Real Estate Loan" (under $10,000) the desired improvements can generally be made with little or no increase in monthly payments.

These secured Property Improvement transactions must conform to State and National Bank requirements for Real Estate lending but because of the relatively small size and specialized collection procedures needed, should be carried in our Georgia Plan portfolio.

Classify as "Property Improvement" and describe the collateral on the discount sheet as S/D R.E. so that the ledger cards can be readily identified at any time. It will not be necessary to add these to the real estate total for call reports since they will represent an insignificant percentage of our total real estate outstandings. Add documentary fees to the principal amount being financed.

DISBURSEMENT OF FUNDS

Loan proceeds will be disbursed only after the lender, by personal inspection and discussion with the borrower, has satisfied himself that the improvements have been made. Certificates of completion should be obtained from each contractor.

Funds should be disbursed by:

1. Making check payable to the firms or individuals providing the goods and services. A Borrower's Authorization must be obtained if this is done. A modification of this may be applicable - make out such checks and retain for a short length of time before mailing to allow time for work to be done satisfactorily and confirmation received from customer of completion.
2. Making checks payable jointly to the customer and the firm or person who provided the goods and services.

In some cases, the borrower himself will state that he will purchase the materials and do the work. Certainly, here is our maximum potential risk. In many cases, it will at least be possible for us to make out checks to the supplier for goods purchased. The interviewer should ask the man about his ability to perform the work involved.

In the final analysis, we will simply have to have enough faith in the man to lend him the money directly. If you don't "feel" it, don't lend it.

ADVERTISING AND PROMOTION

Advertising and Promotional material is available to publicize our willingness to lend money under the Georgia Plan for Property Improvement but this is effective only up to a point. The most effective approach to the people we are trying to reach is word of mouth - customer to neighbors and friends - group presentations under the auspices of community associations, churches, civic clubs, schools, etc.

RECORDS AND REPORTS

Accurate reporting of activity and collection experience is needed to appraise the development of Georgia Plan lending on a statewide basis. Additionally we hope to develop knowledge and techniques that will let us expand our market to lower income brackets for all classes of loans - better service to more people at a profit.

Reporting of Georgia Plan activity can be handled very simply:

1. Maintain a log in each office to record every Georgia Plan application and the disposition.
2. To segregate outstandings easily, show "Georgia Plan" in the space for Endorser on each applicable discount sheet. When the ledger card is returned from Central Billing, punch slot #7 nearest the top of the ledger card.
3. Complete the report shown below at the end of each month and forward to System Consumer Credit in Atlanta. Order reports as needed from System Consumer Credit rather than the Purchasing Department.

Replaces Page 1 and 2 ONLY of Bulletin: OVER THE COUNTER - REGULATION "U" Dated 9/18/69

Several more amendments to Regulation "U" became effective July 8, 1969.
N These amendments further tighten the use of credit in stock market transactions.

The reason for these margin requirements is to prevent excessive use of the credit for the purchase or carrying of securities. Under the present law, margin requirements can be applied to loans for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities registered on a national securities exN change, and to certain securities traded in the over-the-counter market.

GENERAL RULE

Regulation "U" does not permit the extension of credit which is secured directly or indirectly by any stock for the purpose of purchasing or carrying any margin stocks in an amount exceeding the maximum loan value of the colR lateral, which is now 20 per cent of its current market value. Example:

> Customer wishes to borrow money to enable him to purchase 100 shares of stock selling at $100 per share. (Total cost $10,000). The stock is to be used as the collateral for the loan. The > R maximum we can lend is $2,000.

The bank is allowed to extend credit for the purpose of purchasing or carrying a stock listed on a national securities exchange secured by collateral other than stock, without being subject to Regulation "U" requirements. The loan value of such collateral should be determined by the bank in good faith. Example:

> Customer wishes to borrow $10,000 to purchase the same 100 shares at $100 per share as mentioned above. As collateral, he has offered to give us C&S bonds valued at $10,822. We can lend up to $10,822 in this case.

LISTS OF MARGIN STOCKS

In order to determine whether a security is a"stock registered on a national securities exchange", or a security issued by an investment company, or in the "certain over-the-counter securities" group, two Federal Reserve listings are available:

1. List of Stocks Registered on National Securities Exchange".
N 2. List of Over-The-Counter Margin Stocks. (A copy of the July 8, 1969 list accompanied GOG 9.46 dated July 7, 1969).

New Bulletin: OVER THE COUNTER - REGULATION "U" - Dated 5-7-67

Copies of each of these can be obtained from the Comptroller's Department. These records may also be used to determine whether a stock into which a security warrant or right is convertible or exchangeable is governed by Regulation "U".

PURPOSE OF A CREDIT OR LOAN

1. "Credit which is extended for the purpose - regardless if immediate, incidental, or ultimate - of purchasing or carrying a stock is "purpose credit", despite the fact that there may have been a temporary application of funds otherwise."
2. "Credit extended to enable the customer to reduce or retire indebtedness which was originally incurred to purchase a stock is for the purpose of "carrying" such a security and will fall under the regulation requirement in so far as the margin requirement is concerned. (See 1st paragraph under General Rule)."
3. "An extension of credit provided for in a plan, program, or investment contract offered or sold or otherwise initiated after August 31, 1969, which provides for the acquisition of any securities described in the following paragraph and of goods, services, property, interests, or other securities, or investments, is purpose credit."

MARGIN STOCK

"Margin Stock means any stock which is:

1. A stock registered on a national securities exchange,
2. An over-the-counter margin stock,
   a. The term "OTC Margin Stock" means stock, not traded on a national securities exchange, which the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System has determined to have a degree of national investor interest, the depth and breadth of market.
3. A debt security that is convertible with or without consideration, presently or in the future into a margin stock or carrying any warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase a margin stock,

4. Any warrant or right,

5. Any security issued by an investment company other than a small business investment company licensed under the SBIC Act of 1968, unless at least 95 per cent of the assets of such company are continuously invested in exempted securities."

UNSECURED LOANS

Unsecured loans, even though made to purchase stocks, are not governed by Regulation "U".

MULTIPLE LOANS

The entire amount of the credit extended to a customer by any bank at any time for the purpose of purchasing or carrying stocks registered on a national securities exchange will be considered a single credit and all the collateral securing the indebtedness will be considered in determining whether or not all loan indebtedness complies with Regulation "U". (This type credit is considered separate from a loan on convertible securities). Convertible securities are covered on page 4 of this bulletin.

R The maximum loan secured by nationally registered stocks will be 20% or 70% of present market value, depending upon the purpose of the loan. If the loan is to purchase registered stock which will be the collateral R for the loan, the maximum loan amount is 20%. For other purposes, the maximum loan amount is 70%.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Regulation "U" Statement - Federal Reserve Form U-1 (C&S Form 15-557).

R The recent revision of the form is shown on pages 7 and 8.

Loans secured directly or indirectly by any stock require that we obtain R and retain in our records for at least three years after the loan is paid, a statement in conformity with the requirements of Federal Reserve Form U-1. This form is to be executed by the customer and accepted in good faith by an officer of the bank prior to the time the loan is made. In order to accept the customer's statement in good faith, the officer must (1) be aware of the circumstances that surround the loan, and (2) if there is any information which would cause a prudent man not to accept that statement without inquiry, investigate customer's statement in order to ascertain the truthfulness of the statement. Attached is a sample of the Regulation "U" form (although the form refers to a 6-year retention period, we can continue using them until present supplies are exhausted. Reprints will be correct).

It should also be pointed out that if the form merely states what is not the purpose of the loan, it must then be supported by a notation or memorandum of the loan officer which will describe the purpose of the loan. In other words, the lender must know what the loan is for. Regulation Z makes this necessary, also. As is indicated on the form, a false statement by the customer or the loan officer of the bank on the form may be punishable by fine or imprisonment. At the time the loan is made, Regulation "U" Form should be placed in the collateral folder. When the loan is paid out, attach Regulation "U" Form to the back of the Collateral Record Card. When loan is paid, the Collateral Record Card is a receipt for collateral pledged, and must be retained 10 years or longer in the department where the loan originated.

WITHDRAWAL

Withdrawal or substitution of collateral may not be permitted unless the loan balance will not exceed the maximum net loan value (after rebate is calculated) of the collateral remaining on the loan. Interest has been excluded in this table for simplicity's sake. Also, even dollar figures are used in lieu of exact terms.

	Purpose of Loan	Amount	Collateral	Terms	Loan Bal. 6 Months Later	Collateral To Be Withdrawn	Loan Bal. Reduction Required

RENEWALS

If the amount of the loan is not increased at the time of renewal or extension of maturity, it need not be treated as the extension of a credit except by the addition of interest or service charge in respect to the loan. The loan must, however, comply with the margin requirements. It is not necessary to obtain another Regulation "U" form for this.

REPORTS

The bank and every person engaged in the business of extending credit who, in the ordinary course of business, extends credit for the purpose of purchasing or carrying securities registered on a national securities exchange, will be required to make reports as the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System may require.

R LOANS ON CONVERTIBLE SECURITIES

"If the bank extended after June 15, 1959, and prior to October 21, 1967, credit for the purposes of purchasing or carrying a security convertible into a stock registered on a national securities exchange and the loan was secured by such a security and if after October 20, 1967, there is substituted any stock direct or indirect collateral the loan must then meet the present margin requirements.

a. Loans made after October 20, 1967, for the purpose of purchasing or carrying a security convertible into a stock registered on a national securities exchange and any credit extended after July 8, 1969, for the purpose of purchasing or carrying a security convertible into a margin stock; if the loan is secured, directly or indirectly, by any stock, the loan is considered to be subject to the present margin requirements."

SUBSCRIPTIONS ISSUED TO STOCKHOLDERS

"An extension of credit need not comply with the other requirements of Regulation "U", if it is to enable a customer to acquire a stock by exercising a right to acquire such stock evidenced by a warrant or certificate issued to stockholders and expiring within 90 days of issuance. The extension of credit or loan must not exceed 75 per cent of the current market value of the stock and each acquisition must be treated separately. Any such loans granted after October 20, 1967, must be reviewed and the bank must compute the amount by which the loan exceeds the maximum loan value of the collateral (20 per cent of the stock's present market value) and the customer must reduce the loan by an amount at least equal to 1/4 of such sum by the end of the 4 succeeding 3 calendar month periods."

"If the bank fails to receive the required reductions or a portion thereof within 5 full business days after the reduction is due, the bank is required to sell a sufficient amount of the collateral and apply the proceeds of the sale to reduce the loan in an amount at least equal to twice the required payment for the first 2 such reductions, at least equal to the required payment for the third reduction and at least sufficient so that the remaining loan does not exceed the current maximum loan value of the remaining collateral after the fourth reduction."

OTHER LOANS SECURED BY STOCK

It is the policy of our bank, normally, to loan up to 70% of the market value of acceptable stocks, either listed or unlisted, provided the purpose of the loan is for reasons other than to carry or purchase securities.

FUTURE CHANGES

Any future changes in margin requirements alone will be communicated as in the past - NOT through a revision of this bulletin. Any other changes in Regulation "U", will, of course, necessitate a revision of this bulletin.

ORDERING FORMS

Regulation U forms (15-557) may be obtained by requisition from Purchasing Department, Atlanta.

OPERATING BULLETIN

SECTION OVER-THE-COUNTER

SUBJECT REJECTIONS

TOPIC

 Date 1-16-69

NEW BULLETIN

Despite our desire to find a way to handle every loan application, there will be requests that cannot be handled within the limits of policy and good credit judgement. For purposes of discussion and setting up uniform procedures, a rejection is defined an any loan request that cannot be handled because of credit weakness and/or inadequate collateral or terms. Good customer relationships, adequate record keeping and close management appraisal are particularly important in this phase of personal lending.

EXTENT OF INVESTIGATION

If a request clearly cannot be handled on the basis of information furnished by the customer, explain the reason then and there. Trying to create a false impression of giving the customer "every consideration" by delaying a decision and/or making further investigation is not fair to the customer and is expensive to the bank. NOTE: A discount sheet must be filled out on every loan request, at least to the extent of identifying the customer, recording the nature of the request and giving the reason for rejection.

On the other hand, extreme care is needed to be sure that rejections are not made based on insufficient information from the customer or a cursory investigation. Many apparently marginal requests can be made "good" by intelligent and imaginative credit appraisal.

CONDITIONAL APPROVAL

Every potential rejection should be examined carefully to try to find a way to make an acceptable transaction. Debt consolidation, additional collateral, changes in terms, the value of an acceptable endorser should be considered and offered as alternates to an outright rejection. The alternative may not be acceptable to your customer, but at least you have created an impression of trying to find a way to handle your customer's request if the conditions of approval have been realistic.

Unrealistic conditions should never be used to avoid saying "No". If a fundamental credit weakness exists, your customer is entitled to an honest explanation of why we cannot handle his request at this time.

For purposes of record keeping and procedural handling, a realistic conditional approval should not be considered as a rejection.

DUAL REVIEW

Every rejected transaction that might have been made acceptable by more imaginative credit analysis is lost business - present and probably future. For training and business development reasons, all rejections should be reviewed and initialed by the officer-in-charge of personal lending at each lending location. Preferably this should be done before the customer is notified, but if this is not practical, the review should be made as soon as possible afterward.

RECORD KEEPING PROCEDURES

1. Retain discount sheet and other credit data in credit file. Prepare new credit file if necessary.

2. In locations with a Central Information File, forward the prescribed notification form promptly each day.

3. If re-investigation of a present customer shows a definite deterioration in creditworthiness, send a memo of the facts to any other C&S locations that have outstanding credit. It is particularly important to notify CAS since their continuing line of credit is generally only reviewed in relation to "danger signals".

SUBJECT REJECTIONS

TOPIC CUSTOMER RELATIONS

 Date 1-10-69

NEW SUBJECT

There is no magic formula to be used when it is necessary to reject a proposed loan transaction and at the same time hope to retain as much goodwill as is possible under the circumstances. We do know that a poorly handled rejection can terminate other relationships in the bank that we might want to retain, can permanently close the door to future business under better circumstances and can spread a negative reaction to friends, relatives, neighbors and business associates of the rejected applicant.

On the other hand, tact, sincerity, interest and a genuine appreciation of having had the opportunity to consider the proposed transaction should leave the door open for doing business another time. In general, the same principles should be used in "selling" rejections as would be successful in any other sales approach, keeping in mind some elementary but often overlooked DO and DON'T reminders.

Do make your decision known to your customer in person whenever practical.	Don't relay the decision through one of your associates or leave a message with anyone other than your customer.
Do assume full responsibility for the decision. Indicate that you are speaking for the bank and yourself and that your thinking and judgement coincide.	Don't leave the impression that you would make the loan except for "the boss", "credit committee", "policy", etc.
Do be as brief as possible within the bounds of giving an honest and courteous reason for your decision.	Don't get drawn into a discussion of individual details that would not alter the overall decision.
Do respect your sources of confidential information. Your general reasons can be given without specific reference to the source of information.	Don't attribute your rejection to a bad Credit Bureau Report or divulge the name of any firm reporting slow payment.
Do leave the door open by using phrases such as "at this time", "under the present circumstances", "hope you will give us another chance to do business if curcumstances change", etc.	Don't forget that even the worst credit risk has a boss, friends and relatives that can be alienated by word of mouth advertising of a negative approach.
Do suggest an alternate source of credit if the transaction could be handled elsewhere, but is not a loan that we would handle under the circumstances.	Don't overlook the fact that family financial counseling is part of our job, but don't preach or force advice on your customer.

DO THANK YOUR CUSTOMER FOR GIVING US A CHANCE TO CONSIDER HIS REQUEST.

SUBJECT SAVINGS ACCOUNT LOANS

TOPIC

 Date 3-7-66

Replaces Bulletin: "OVER-THE-COUNTER - COLLATERAL - SAVINGS ACCOUNT LOANS" - Dated 9-24-54

Customers will often pledge their own cash on deposit in the form of savings as security for a loan. Savings account loans are a means of forced saving preserving the customer's account for emergency use. Provided certain precautions are taken, loans secured by savings are granted with almost no loss exposure. This bulletin outlines procedures for granting loans secured by various types of savings accounts.

CLASSIFICATION Loans secured by savings accounts are classified "COLLATERAL".

TYPES OF ACCOUNTS The types of savings accounts which may be taken as security are as follows:

1. Our own bank savings accounts and savings bonds.

2. Savings accounts and bonds with other banks, Savings and Loan Associations, and Credit Unions. Remember to establish the assignability of all savings accounts, bonds, and Credit Union share accounts.

NOTE: U.S. Government Series E bonds may not be taken as security.

INVESTIGATION A minimum amount of investigation is necessary in handling a loan secured by a savings account. It is advisable to do the following:

1. Require definite identification from the borrower to establish his authority to pledge the account.

2. Check CIF or in cities where CIF is not available, check other lending departments of the Bank.

3. Verify the balance as shown in the passbook with the issuing bank or Savings and Loan Associations.

4. Credit Bureau investigation should be made where a check of CIF or other sources develops information which indicates a further check is necessary.

TERMS As is customary with any installment loan, the terms of a savings account loan should be established according to the borrower's ability to pay. Since this is a fully-secured note, terms may be granted up to 36 months. Generally, loans made for yearly recurring obligations should be limited to 12 months.

RATES Since we are lending money to customers who pledge their own cash as security for a loan, we can give a lower rate than our usual installment charges. See Bulletin: "LENDING GENERAL - OVER-THE-COUNTER - RETAIL RATES". The rate schedule takes into consideration our costs in setting up and collecting installment accounts. Note that an additional rate preference is given to loans secured by C&S savings, over accounts of other institutions.

Replaces Bulletin: "OVER-THE-COUNTER - COLLATERAL - SAVINGS ACCOUNT LOANS" - Dated 9-24-54

FORMS The following are forms used in savings account lending. Selection of proper forms for various kinds of savings collateral is outlined in each section dealing with the particular type of loan.

1. For all loans, use Installment Collateral Note form 19-830. Give a complete description of the account on the note, e.g., Citizens and Southern National Bank Savings Account form #5683.

2. CHANGE OF STATUS order 21-1125.

3. Assignment of Bank Account 15-549.

4. Blank draft

5. Collateral followup card

PROCEDURES FOR HANDLING

I. NO PASSBOOK SAVINGS - In some C&S cities (Macon and Atlanta) no savings passbook is issued. The following procedures should be used to perfect assignments on no-passbook savings account.

a. Obtain the complete account number from the savings customer, or from bank records, if the customer does not have his savings account number.

b. If the customer's account is not with your branch, telephone the branch where the account is carried to determine the balance on deposit.

Upon contacting the branch, state:
1. Your name and office

2. The complete account number and name of the customer

3. The amount to be pledged on the loan

Ask the teller to pencil in on the Data Processing print-out the amount pledged, and the office to whom it is pledged. This precaution will prevent a dishonest person from withdrawing funds from his account on the same day those funds are pledged.

c. At this point, you should prepare a Savings Account Change-of-Status order (21-112 in duplicate and send to Data Processing. One of the cards after processing, wil be returned to you as evidence that the account has been flagged and pledged. This card should then be placed in the customer's loan file.

II. PASSBOOK ACCOUNTS - Where you accept a passbook representing an account in another bank, or an out-of-town C&S office, take a blank draft drawn on that office and have the customer sign it. This will facilitate charging the balance due on the loan, should it become necessary to liquidate in this manner.

Replaces Bulletin: "OVER-THE-COUNTER - COLLATERAL - SAVINGS ACCOUNT LOANS" - Dated 9-24-54

Prepare in triplicate the Assignment of Bank Account form (15-549) for your customer's signature. This form is used to notify the depository bank, or other savings organization of your loan. The assignment form gives the name of the bank or association carrying the deposit, the current balance of account, and request for acknowledgement of assignment. Send the original and one copy to the bank or other depository organization requesting acknowledgement, and the return copy for your file. The third copy is retained as a tickler for the acknowledgement. Be certain to followup for the acknowledgement.

Obtain the passbook from the customer, and place it for safekeeping in the collateral file of the Loan and Discount Department. Upon delivery of the passbook to this department, obtain a signed receipt (15-575) from L&D and place it in the customer's file.

III. SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS Savings and Loan Associations passbooks occasionally require the use of an assignment form printed in the back of the passbook. Copy this form in triplicate for the customer's signature. The procedure will then be the same as with the acceptance of a passbook and assignment from another bank, or one of our passbook savings branches. If a special assignment form is not required by the Savings and Loan Association, use our Assignment of Bank Account form 15-549.

IV. C&S SAVINGS BONDS The assignment of C&S savings bonds as security should be perfected by following the instructions issued in the Comptroller's Operating Manual for savings bonds. Use the Assignment of Bank Account form 15-549 in triplicate. Remember that you should followup for an acknowledged assignment of the savings bonds from the office issuing the bonds.

Where you take a C&S Series D bond as collateral, check the present value of the bond before lending, since it was purchased at discount and not at the matured value on the face of the bond.

COLLECTIONS Normal collection procedures should be followed even though accounts are fully secured. Where borrowers cannot maintain monthly payments, discussion with the customer will generally result in the installment loan being liquidated gracefully by charge to the savings account.

PARTIAL RELEASE If you wish to release only a portion of the pledged account, submit a release restoring the account on normal status. Then along with the release card, a new pledge card must be sent to Data Processing to secure a hold on the revised balance pledged. Be certain to prepare a followup card for the acknowledgement of the pledge.

PAYOUT In no-passbook cities, to release a pledged account when the loan is paid out, it will be necessary to notify Data Processing. Use the pledge card which was received as acknowledgement from Data Processing when the loan was pledged, and mark it to indicate that the loan is paid-in-full and return to Data Processing. Data Processing will release the pledge and will return the card to the branch where the savings account is located.

Where you have taken a passbook or savings bond as security, obtain the collateral from L&D and notify the Savings Department or the Building and Loan Association that your obligation has been satisfied, and the book released to the customer. Return the passbook or bond with the cancelled note to the customer in person or by mail, following the procedures outlined in the Comptroller's Manual. Always request a receipt for the collateral from your customer.

SUBJECT SINGLE PAYMENT TIME LOANS TO INDIVIDUALS

TOPIC

Page 1 of 12 Date 6-21-72

Replaces Bulletin: OVER THE COUNTER - SINGLE PAYMENT TIME LOANS TO INDIVIDUALS - Dated 8/16/71

Single Payment Loans to individuals are serviced by the Loan and Discount Department or L&D Teller. Accounting is accomplished via the Commercial Loan System. Loans of $25,000 or less for non-business purposes are subject to Federal Reserve Regulation Z, which implements the Consumer Credit Protection Act.

Use note forms #15-1100 (Unsecured) and #15-1105 (Secured). The term should be stated in days. All spaces must be completed.

1. Amount of Loan - the amount of the advance to the customer or other party.
2. Credit Life Insurance - the amount of the premium for Credit Life Insurance must be shown as a separate item on all insured loans.
3. Other Charges - any charges that are not part of the Finance Charge, such as filing fees. The nature of the charge should be specified.
4. Amount Financed - the total of the amount of loan, Credit Life Insurance Premium, and other charges.

   Annual Percentage Rate - Regulation Z requires that we disclose the equivalent of a simple interest rate, determined by the Actuarial Method.
5. Interest - the interest charge, figured by applying a simple interest rate per annum to the amount financed.
6. Base Charge - a fee in addition to the interest charge.
7. Finance Charge - the total of the interest and the base charge.
8. Total of Payments - the total of the amount financed and the finance charge.

   Date - day the loan is made.

   Number - serial number assigned to this loan.

   Due - date loan is repayable.

The Insurance Statement must be completed and signed by the customer, to indicate whether he requests or declines Credit Life Insurance coverage.

COMPLETION OF THE COMMERCIAL LOAN DISCOUNT SHEET

Follow the directions given in G.O.G. 9.811 - Loans - Commercial Loan System - Forms - New Loans and/or New Customers.

CALCULATION OF INSURANCE PREMIUM, FINANCE CHARGE, AND ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE

The Insurance Premium, Finance Charge, and Annual Percentage Rate on single payment loans may be obtained via either the Audio Response System or Video Display, for those offices having direct access to the computer. In some cities, this information may be available from a central inquiry point, which is equipped with video display equipment. In offices that do not have either form of on-line inquiry capability, these figures must be manually computed.

R A 365-Day year must be used in all calculations on personal and consumer loans. This is built in to the program for on-line inquiry. On corporate loans, a 365-Day year or a 360-Day year may be used, at the loan officer's option.

N The policy of assessing a $10 base charge plus interest on all time notes under $5,000 has been modified and in certain instances we will operate under the Georgia Industrial Loan Act which necessitates a flat charge instead of a base plus interest. Loans renewed for six months or less cannot be charged a second base charge, and new loans made to a customer less than fifteen days after a loan pays out will be exempt from the charge. Thus the use of realistic final maturity dates at the inception of the loan is most important. A complete schedule of new charges and rate charts is reproduced on pages 9, 10, and 11.

To avoid error, all time note calculations (corporate and personal), including those obtained by computer response, must be calculated or checked by two people - both of whom must initial the note.

MANUAL CALCULATION

R I. To find the Credit Life Insurance Premium on insured loans:

A. Multiply the amount advanced by .0302465.
B. Multiply the results by the number of days in the term of the note.
C. Divide by 1000.
D. Drop any fractions of a cent. Do not round up.

EXAMPLE: $1,500 Advance, at 8% simple, with base charge, 150 days term, with Credit Life Insurance.

$ 1,500	Advance
x .0302465	Premium Rate
$ 45.36975
x 150	Term, In Days
6805.4625
÷ 1000
$6.8054625	= $6.80, Credit Life Insurance Premium

II. To find the Finance Charge:

A. Add the amount advanced and the Credit Life Insurance Premium, if any, to find the total amount financed.
B. Multiply the total amount financed by the appropriate simple interest rate.
C. Multiply the result by the number of days in the term of the note.
D. Divide by 365.
E. Drop any fractions of a cent. Do not round up.
R F. Determine the base charge as follows:

1. Multiply the total amount financed by .05 times the term in days, and divide by 30. Drop any fractions of a cent. Subtract the interest charge.

2. Multiply the total amount financed by .08. Drop any fractions of a cent.

3. The base charge is the result of step 1, the result of step 2, or $10, whichever is smallest.

Replaces Bulletin: OVER THE COUNTER - SINGLE PAYMENT TIME LOANS TO INDIVIDUALS - Dated 8/16/71

G. Add the base charge and the interest charge to determine the total finance charge.

EXAMPLE #1: $1,500 advance, at 8% simple, with base charge, 150 day term, with Credit Life Insurance.

$1,500.00	Advance
6.80	Credit Life Insurance Premium
$1,506.80	Total Amount Financed
x 08	Interest Rate
$120.5440
x 150	Term, In Days
18081.6000
+ 365
$ 49.5386	= $ 49.53 Interest Charge
	+ 10.00 Base Charge*
	$ 59.53 Finance Charge

*1506.80 x .08 = 120.54

$(1506.80 \times .05 \times \frac{150}{30}) - 49.53 = $327.17$

EXAMPLE #2: $132 advance, at 8% simple, with base charge, 32 days term, with Credit Life Insurance.

$ 132.00	Advance
x .0302465	Premium Rate
$ 3.9925380
x 32	Term, In Days
$127.7612160
+ 1000
$ .127761216	= $.12, Credit Life Insurance Premium

$ 132.00	Advance
.12	Credit Life Insurance Premium
$ 132.12	Total Amount Financed
x .08	Interest Rate
$ 10.5696
x 32	Term, In Days
$338.2272
+ 365
$ .9266	= $ .92 Interest Charge
	6.12 Base Charge **
	$7.04 Finance Charge

Base Charge:

1. ($132.12 x .05 x $\frac{32}{30}$) - $.92 = $7.0464 - .92 = $6.1264 = $6.12
2. $132.12 x .08 = $10.5696 = $10.56

III. To find the Annual Percentage Rate (A.P.R.):

A. Divide the total Finance Charge, including base charge, by the Total Amount Financed.

B. Find the term of the note on the "Conversion Chart - Single Payment Loans, 365-Day Basis". Read the factor from the column to the right of the term. The conversion chart is reproduced on the last page of this bulletin. Additional supplies of the conversion chart may be obtained from Retail Banking, 17 NBG Building, Atlanta.

C. Multiply the result of Step A by the factor. Round to the nearest hundredth of a percent.

EXAMPLE: $1,500 advance, at 8% simple, with base charge, 150 day term, with Credit Life Insurance.

$ 59.53		Total Finance Charge
+1,506.80		Total Amount Financed
.039508
x 243		Conversion factor for 150 day term
9.600444	=	9.60%, Annual Percentage Rate

NOTE: If there is no base charge, the Annual Percentage Rate determined by this method should be the same as the Simple Interest Rate used in calculating the Finance Charge. A slight variance is possible, due to rounding of decimals during calculation.

RATE CHARTS

N Single payment time loan charts have been prepared to simplify handling of the most common loans. Each chart is calculated at 8% simple, with base charge. Complete instructions for use of the chart, including their use where the base charge is waived, are printed on the cover of each chart. Each chart includes figures for loans with credit life insurance, as well as for loans without insurance.

Order in writing from Rate Chart Section, Retail Banking, 17 NBG, Atlanta. Each order must include a list of the chart numbers and quantities desired. Attach a signed supply requisition card. Charts available are:

100.00	10.00 including interest
125.00 up	10.00 base plus interest

RENEWALS:

$100 or Less

Only simple interest for the renewal period may be charged on renewal of loans with original maturity of two months or less. Loans over two months in original maturity can be assessed charges on above basis for renewal period.

RENEWALS - Continued

More than $100

Only simple interest for the renewal period may be charged on renewal of loans with original maturity of six months or less. Loans over six months in original maturity can be assessed charges on above basis for renewal period.

PAID OUT LOANS:

If a customer pays out a loan and is granted a new loan within 15 days of the payout, it is considered a renewal to the extent of the amount of the old loan and the above renewal rules apply to that amount and based on that amount (i.e. $100 - 2 months; $100 plus - 6 mos.). Any excess may be handled as original loan with charges as above for the new loan period.

For example: A customer borrows $50 for 30 days, pays out the loan and five days later wants to borrow $100. The charges would be $2.18 base plus 65¢ interest. Rather than the $5.00 maximum charge for a $100 30-day loan.

Revision of Page 2 only of: OVER THE COUNTER-TIME DEPOSITS-Dated 5/21/70

As an added service to our savings customers with multiple maturity accounts, C&S will now make money available at any time. This must be handled in the form of an unsecured loan using note #15-1100 and the loan interest charged will equal the interest on the deposit account for the same period of time.

ELIGIBLE ACCOUNTS

1. Unpledged C&S Savings Bonds (Series V - 5% and X - 4½%)
2. Unpledged C&S 5 Percenter Savings Accounts.

AMOUNT OF LOAN

We are willing to advance up to the full value of the bond or account as of the date advanced. However, for expediency and simplicity we should use the value last calculated by the computer. On bonds this will be as of the last scheduled redemption date and is available from the monthend computer printout. If the bond has accrued interest that will be paid by check (or credit) before the next quarterly anniversary, only the redemption value as of the last quarter should be advanced. A Master File Change must be sent to Bond Control Department to divert interest check to the bond teller.

Example: $1,000 bond, issued 3-15-69, annual interest option. Loan made 2-5-70, value would be $1,038.21. However, check for $51.27 will be issued 3-1-70 before maturity date, at which time bond would be worth only $1,000.

For 5 percenter accounts this will be the current balance. If the customer has multiple accounts or several bonds, we must handle each as a separate loan because the anniversary dates or availability may be different.

TERM OF LOAN AND INTEREST

The due date of the loan will be the next date the savings funds will normally be available. On bonds this will be the next 3 months' anniversary date. On 5 percenter savings accounts this will be the first of next quarter; if funds were not on deposit at the beginning of the current quarter, use 90 days, and obtain customer's signature on a Withdrawal Notice (21-5010). Forward this immediately to the Five Percenter Bookkeeper at the bank where the account is carried.

Interest should be calculated at 5% simple except where the bond rate is 4½%, in which case the loan interest is to be 4½%. Although the bonds and savings accounts pay interest compounded daily, the difference between the simple and compounding will generally be only a few cents.

Explain to the customer that upon the due date (loan and savings) a check will be mailed to him for the excess of his savings over the loan balance. This will be generally the amount of accrued interest which was not advanced to the customer with the loan. There is to be no base charge or life insurance, and the A.P.R. will be either 4.50 or 5.00%.

LOAN PAYMENT

Bonds:

When signing the note, bond customers should also sign in triplicate the "Customer Request for Automatic Bond Redemption" (21-5135 with C&S logo or 21-5140 without logo). CUSTOMERS MUST NOT ENDORSE THE BONDS, and under no circumstances should we use a collateral note form. Remember to do this for each bond on which we lend. Copy distribution and use:

1. Original stapled to L&D note tickler. Upon note maturity, pull and use to redeem bond and pay off note. Since arrangements have been made to pay the loan from bond proceeds, do not send notice to customer.
2. Duplicate to branch that issued bond, to be attached to their file copy.
3. Triplicate to customer, as his receipt for bond.

Five Percenter Savings Account:

When signing the note, customers should also sign a withdrawal slip for the "Total R of Payments" of the note. The withdrawal slip should be dated with the maturity date of the loan. Place the withdrawal slip in the negotiable collateral file. Write on the L&D tickler "Withdrawal slip in negotiable collateral file", as a reminder at maturity of the note to use savings funds to pay the loan. Complete a Five Percenter Savings Status Change Order (21-5100), checking block 11 for "Hold Balance". On the maturity date do the following:

1. Send in another Five Percenter Savings Status Change Order (21-5100), coded Release Status 18.
2. Send in the withdrawal slip on loan maturity date.

If the customer is closing his account, rather than making a partial withdrawal, show "balance" on the withdrawal slip. On the withdrawal date, determine the balance and accrued interest, then enter the amount on the withdrawal slip.

TAX INQUIRY This does not affect our present reporting routines at all.

CONTROL

LENDER SHOULD IMMEDIATELY PHONE BRANCH THAT HANDLES THE ACCOUNT. Tellers should always refer to bond files before issuing duplicate bonds. The duplicate "Customer Request For Automatic Bond Redemption" will appear here as a control device.

SUBJECT ADD-ON PLAN

TOPIC

 Date 3/20/70

Replaces Bulletin: SALES FINANCE - ADD-ON PLAN - Dated 9-1-67

The Add-On Plan can be a valuable sales tool for the retail appliance and furniture dealer. Many credit worthy customers have an actual need for acquiring additional merchandise while they are still paying for previous purchases. However, required down payment and/or monthly installments on two accounts at the same time make this impossible. The Add-On Plan is designed to enable the customer to overcome these problems and is an essential part of our sales financing program available to dealers.

The Add-On Plan is designed to stimulate dealer interest and create customer awareness of the plan. Particularly attractive points of the program are:

1. We will accept an Add-On without additional down payment, after 4 prompt installments.

2. An insert describing the Add-On Plan will be placed in the customer's payment book (after the 4th payment card) on all eligible transactions for dealers using the Plan.

ADVANTAGES OF THE ADD-ON PLAN

CUSTOMER

1. Additional merchandise without additional down payment.
2. Wherever possible, little or no change in monthly payments.
3. No delivery delay due to additional credit investigation.

DEALER

1. An expanded market through sales to present customers.
2. No down payment required.
3. No additional credit investigation required.
4. Increased reserve participation through greater credit sales.

BANK

1. Increased volume at increased profit through lower collection and investigation costs.
2. More complete service to both customer and dealer.

DEALER CONTACT

All appliance and furniture dealers regardless of size, can profitably make use of the Add-On Plan. Each dealer should be thoroughly acquainted with the dealer advantages of the Plan and with its mechanics of operation. Be sure to explain its advantages to new prospects - it could close the sale for you.

Replaces Bulletin: SALES FINANCE - ADD-ON PLAN - Dated 9-1-70

ADD-ON INSERT (19-1042)

The Add-On Insert illustrated below is designed to advertise the plan to eligible customers and to alert dealers to eligible prospects. It reminds the customer of the availability of the Plan when the fourth payment is made. When customers make payments in the dealer's store, the dealer will see the insert and will have the opportunity to ask for additional business.

In the upper right hand corner of the Discount Sheet (19-898), in the space for "Payments", write in the words "ADD-ON COUPON" with red ink so that the Central Billing Department will include the Add-On Insert in the customer's coupon book.

On the new Discount Sheet (19-1295), in the Special Instructions Code box, write in a large number 3, circled.

NOTE: Our present computer program provides for use of only one digit as Special Instructions Code. If you need to use either Code 1 or 2, DO NOT write in (3). That customer simply will not receive an Add-On Coupon in his book.

Replaces Bulletin: SALES FINANCE - ADD-ON PLAN - Dated 9-1-67

TERMS

Additional merchandise may be financed without down payment any time after four payments have been paid satisfactorily on open contract for the same dealer. The maximum maturity on an Add-On Contract is 36 months. The dealer should try to set up the monthly installments on the Add-On Contract so that they are, as nearly as possible, the same amount as those of the original contract. This adjustment can be made by extending the terms on the Add-On Contract upwards, as necessary, to 36 months. Similarity of installments will be possible only when the original terms were 24 months or less and will depend on the net balance of the original contract and the additional amount to be financed.

Because of the 36 months limit there will be many cases when it will be impossible to add-on at a similar amount of monthly repayment. Dealers should understand why this will happen so that they will not mislead the customer into expecting that the amount of the add-on payments will (always) remain the same.

INSURANCE

Credit Life, Disability, and Property - Fire and Theft Insurance coverages are applicable to Add-On Contracts in the same manner as they apply to any other Sales Finance Domestic transaction.

However, customers who are currently receiving disability benefits under the original contract are not eligible for the Add-On Plan. In those rare instances, where credit factors warrant, such transactions should be handled on the basis of an additional loan - not covered by disability insurance.

COMPUTING NEW CHARGES

It will be necessary for the dealer to call the bank for a new pay off on the first contract. The dealer should then add the net balance (after rebate of charges and Dealer reserve) on the first contract to the cash unpaid balance on the Add-On Contract, and apply the appropriate rate to the combined figure. IT SHOULD BE NOTED THAT STANDARD REBATE NOW APPLIES TO THESE PAYOFFS.

The rate for Add-On Contracts will be the rate currently in effect with that dealer.

Replaces Bulletin: SALES FINANCE - ADD-ON PLAN - Dated 9-1-67

COMPLETING THE DISCOUNT SHEET

In setting up the Add-On Contract the following spaces on the Discount Sheet will be affected:

1. AMOUNT FINANCED - This will be the sum of the "Unpaid Balance of Cash Price" on the Add-On Contract plus the "Net Balance First Contract".
2. OLD NOTE - Show the number of the first contract and the net balance on the first contract.
3. DEALER'S LOSS RESERVE - If a reserve is being set up out of the finance charges in your plan of operation for the dealer, compute the percentage against the combined net balance on the old contract plus the add-on.
4. CONTINGENT RESERVE - If your plan of operation with the dealer calls for a holdback, compute against the cash unpaid balance on the amount added-on only.
5. CHECK TO DEALER - For the cash unpaid balance on the Add-On less contingent reserve, if any.
6. COLLATERAL - Describe both the merchandise already being financed and the merchandise added-on.
7. CODING - Source code of all add-on transactions is "3-RENEWAL ADDITIONAL $".

COMPLETING THE ADD-ON CONTRACT

Use the standard Add-On Contract (19-852).

RETENTION

When the Add-On Contract is discounted, the original contract should be stapled to it and retained in the note file along with the Add-On Contract. The Add-On Contract becomes a part of the first contract and the two must be retained in the note file until the add-on has been paid out.

SETTING DUE DATES

Due dates for Add-On Contracts should be established consistent with first contract due dates and the customer's previous payment record and the first installment should be within 30 days of the date of Add-On.

ORDERING FORMS

Order the Add-On Contract (19-852) from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - FARM EQUIPMENT FINANCING - DEALER AGREEMENT" Dated 3-20-50

Reproduced on Page 2 is a revised Dealer Agreement which is designed to be used for all classes of business and plans of operation where the dealer is fully obligated to buy back defaulted instruments. This new agreement (19-935) includes the following changes:

1. The wording covering payment of reserves has been changed to provide for a percentage holdback of reserve as well as "as and when" payment. The new wording also conforms more closely to Federal Reserve and F. D. I. C. definitions of "earned" and "unearned" reserves.

2. A definite right of offset of contract, reserves or other assets in our possession against any and all indebtedness of dealer to us.

3. Provision is made for suit against dealer on individual contracts as well as on the entire portfolio.

4. Changes in wording to clarify the overall intent of the agreement.

Immediate substitution of this agreement for existing agreements is not necessary; however, the new agreement should be used as new dealers are signed and should be substituted on present dealers as a favorable opportunity presents itself.

Although this is a printed "form" the legal significance is the same as though the agreement were individually drawn for each dealer. Every man in the Installment Loan Department handling dealer business should understand every provision of the agreement and the reason for it. Please check if you do not.

NEW SUBJECT

Flexibility in the handling of sales finance is a mark of mature, realistic service to sales finance dealers. This is particularly true in a highly competitive finance market. Consequently, additional means have been developed by which to serve these dealers, e.g., the Non-Recourse Option and the Non-Recourse Plan.

Introduction of this Non-Recourse Plan does not change our basic philosophy that the best plan for sales finance dealers is our standard recourse plan. Please continue to sell our dealers on the advantages of the standard recourse plan. If we cannot satisfy a dealer with the recourse plan, our first alternative is the Non-Recourse Option. This option and the standard plan should provide sufficient flexibility for us to handle all of our dealers. If a good dealer cannot be satisfied with the option, the second alternative is the Non-Recourse Plan. This plan may be offered to him only after you submit to System Consumer Credit, a resume of the full particulars covering our need to place him on the plan and obtain approval to offer it to him. The plan is placed into effect by the execution of a Non-Recourse Agreement (19-938, reproduced on page 2) between the dealer and the Bank.

The Non-Recourse Plan provides the dealer with a means of limiting his liability on paper assigned to us by establishing a reserve based upon a predetermined percentage of the dollar amount of his outstandings. This reserve percentage should be at least 10%. Accumulated funds in the reserve above this limit are considered to be earned. Losses up to percentage limit are charged to this reserve; losses in excess of the limit are sustained by the Bank.

The provisions of the plan are as follows:

1. Contracts received from the dealer will have a 2% per annum dealer's reserve set up from charges when discounted. In addition, a holdback may be set up in a separate reserve account, where deemed necessary, either to build up the reserve account or because of the nature of the offerings.

2. When in the opinion of the Bank, repossession is warranted on a particular account, written notice will be given the dealer. He will effect repossession within five days without charge to the Bank for his personnel or equipment.

3. The dealer agrees to hold the collateral for the Bank without charge and to assist in its resale at a mutually agreeable price. The Bank is not bound to accept the dealer's price; it may make other disposition at its discretion.

4. Upon resale of the collateral, the dealer will promptly forward to the Bank the proceeds of the sale, less any Bank-approved expenses in repossessing and reconditioning the collateral, to be applied to the delinquent account.

5. Any remaining deficiency will be cleared by deduction from the reserve account. If sufficient funds are not available in the reserve account to pay the deficiency, this loss is sustained by the Bank.

6. On June 1 and December 1 of each year, any balance in the dealer's reserve account in excess of 10% of his contingent liability will be paid to him. This reserve will not be paid if the dealer is in default with any obligation to the Bank in any way or is in the process of liquidating his contingent liability.

7. It is the intent of this plan that all of the dealer's offerings should qualify for purchase under it. However, if a dealer wants us to handle a marginal offering, this may be done with full recourse by indicating this on the voucher portion of the check or on the deposit slip given in payment for the contract.

8. This agreement may be canceled at any time by either party giving written notice to the other party. Cancellation will have no effect on offerings purchased prior to the date of the cancellation notice.

FACTORS TO CONSIDER BEFORE RECOMMENDING THIS PLAN In determining whether this plan should be recommended for a dealer, the factors of capital, capacity, and character should be considered. In addition, consider the following factors:

1. Our experience with dealers with whom we are doing business would be a determining factor in whether we could offer them this plan. If the quality of the paper and our experience in general have been good, these dealers would be eligible for this plan.

2. This plan should not be recommended for a new dealer unless we have sufficient information on him to establish that his paper will liquidate within the limits of the reserve account. If a new dealer desires this plan, investigate him thoroughly to determine his character and the type of business he submits to his finance company.

3. The dealer's volume, both in the number of accounts and in the amount of each contract, should be sufficient to build up an adequate reserve.

4. The dealer's location should make it practicable to check a customer's credit without undue expense. The Non-Recourse Plan cannot be extended in areas where adequate pre-investigation is not possible.

5. The dealer's attitude in working with the Bank on this plan is of prime importance. The plan should be recommended only for the more cooperative dealer who understands that it is to his advantage to work with the Bank in order to conserve his reserve account.

EXTENDING RETAIL CREDIT UNDER THIS PLAN The Non-Recourse Plan will lose its effectiveness if we purchase an excess number of contracts on a recourse basis. Therefore, we must be alert to detect and to reserve undesirable trends in that direction. We can minimize potential problems in this area in several ways:

1. Be sure that our dealers, both old and new, understand that we expect the same volume and the same class of business under the Non-Recourse Plan as we would expect under the standard recourse plan. They should also understand that we expect them to maintain the same credit levels under the Non-Recourse Plan as they would if they were placing full endorsement on each contract.

2. Some dealers will be tempted to send us marginal deals which they probably would have rejected prior to accepting the Non-Recourse Plan. If the quality of a dealer's paper deteriorates after he signs the Non-Recourse Plan Agreement, contact him immediately and, through effective salesmanship, implant the fact that we cannot purchase paper which does not match the standards of his previous offerings.

3. Purchases which are graded fair or better should qualify under the Non-Recourse Plan.

ELIGIBLE PRODUCTS All products which we currently classify as sales finance-domestic, subject to an adequate reserve in relation to the product being financed.

FORM OF CONTRACT Present contracts will be used.

RATES Our net rate will be the same as that in effect from time to time under our various recourse plans, with charts to the public adjusted to provide the necessary reserve differential.

INSURANCE The same insurance will be used on these contracts as is used on the standard recourse plan.

HANDLING THE RESERVE A new dealer number should be assigned when a dealer switches from the standard recourse plan to the Non-Recourse Plan. Any account purchased under the Non-Recourse Plan but with recourse should be identified by placing an "R" before the loss reserve figure on the discount sheet, and the reserve should be kept separately from the non-recourse reserve. A different dealer number may be assigned for recourse purchases from a non-recourse dealer, [illegible] much paper is being purchased on a full recourse basis.

NEW SUBJECT

DEALER CONDITION REPORT Any dealer operating under this Non-Recourse Plan should be designated on the Dealer Condition Report by placing "NR" under the date in the Approval Expiration Date column.

STANDARD PLAN

TERMS
Advanced by bank	90% of cost
Down payment by dealer	10% of cost plus wholesale flat charge

RATE
Original flat charge for 90 days	1%
Renewal flat charge for 30 days	½%

In addition, charge interest monthly on the average daily balance. The interest rate will vary, based on the normal Commercial Loan interest rate in the office and dealer territory.

CURTAILMENTS The original note is written for 90 days. At the end of 90 days, collect 10% curtailment and each month thereafter as the ½% renewal flat charge is collected.

Our standard Distributor Agreement requires curtailments to be made at the rate of 10% per month starting with the seventh month. The agreement was written this way to permit deviation from our standard plan where individual cases might require the skipping of one or more curtailments.

INSURANCE The flat charges quoted above include the cost of insurance under our blanket wholesale policy -- see bulletin "Insurance, Wholesale - Equipment", dated 5-5-54. We prefer to collect our normal flat charge and place the insurance rather than have the dealer arrange his own. For substantial dealers, if the dealer insists on placing his own insurance, be sure to obtain a copy of the dealer's insurance policy with a loss payable clause in our favor. Monthly interest charge should be increased 1% per annum if flat charge is waived.

NEW BULLETIN

Our customers have a continuing responsibility to us to furnish us with evidence of adequate insurance coverage on the collateral. Wording in our contracts creates this insurance obligation, and empowers us to administer insurance monies and obtain insurance coverage when the customer has failed to do so. We frequently have to exercise these rights.

This bulletin covers the recommended followup routines for Sales Finance locations. It also introduces the Uninsured Vehicles Report. The follow-up principles and methods involved here are very similar to those of our collection followup routine. Early stage followups are made by clerical personnel. Later followups are to be made by the adjuster, who must exercise credit and collection judgment in connection with his followup. This is the "Personal Handling" stage. This procedure makes it clear that personal handling is the adjuster's responsibility.

USE OF FORM LETTERS

Please use no form letters other than shown or mentioned in this bulletin. Policy identification, routing, etc. will be expedited by following these standardized procedures. Use of two of these form letters, for instance, (38-1280 and 38-1285) will (1) reduce initial insurance followup with the customer, and (2) eliminate the need for an insurance policy or copy of the policy. The properly executed form letter returned from the insurance agent can be placed in the customer's file in lieu of the policy or copy of policy.

NEW TRANSACTIONS

INSURANCE AND TITLE VERIFICATION

A completed Insurance and Title Verification form (19-2015-0) must accompany each contract covering an insurable vehicle. (See sample on page 2.) This is the very cornerstone of our entire followup procedure. Dealers and their Sales personnel should be educated and sold on accurate completion of this form.

FOLLOWUP

WHEN THE INSURANCE IS ORIGINALLY PLACED THROUGH THE C&S AGENCY, order coverage using the procedure outlined in the bulletin: INSURANCE-AUTOMOBILE PHYSICAL DAMAGE. No followup is required of the branch, unless the account requires personal handling. When this occurs, C&S Agency will refer the account to the branch with instructions.

INSURANCE AND TITLE VERIFICATION FORM

This form completed in detail must accompany all contracts. Failure to comply will result in contract being returned.

PERSONAL HANDLING

The adjuster uses his own judgment in efforts to contact the customer and, in order of desirability:

1. Get the customer to furnish dual interest coverage immediately.
   a. Through C&S Agency, debiting the account for the premium, or,
   b. Through an outside source.
2. Place single interest coverage, charging his account.
3. Repossess the vehicle.

NEW BULLETIN

The adjuster is expected to use whatever telephone calls and/or letters necessary to conclude this account. He should be familiar with all of the automobile physical damage insurance program bulletins. Once he has received the assignment from the Insurance Followup Clerk, it continues to be his responsibility until he has received written confirmation of the evidence of insurance and has given it to the Insurance Followup Clerk.

UNINSURED VEHICLES REPORT

This report, shown on page 10, advises management on a periodic basis of all uninsured vehicles in a given location. Provision is made to break them down by dealer, so problem dealerships can be spotted readily.

Any and all uninsured automobile loans that have reached the personal handling stage should be entered on this report. They should continue to be listed on this report until:

1. The loan is paid out or charged off.
2. Written evidence of coverage is secured. This will be:
   a. A copy of the policy that shows us as lienholder, or,
   b. Our completed form letter that gives us confirmation of the insurance coverage,or,
   c. The policy has been ordered through C&S Agency.

The Insurance Followup Clerk should prepare the report in duplicate, at the end of each reporting period. The original should be sent to Retail Banking, Atlanta, and a copy should be retained by the local office to be used in much the same manner as the Past Due List. The originals of the Uninsured Vehicle Cards are the accounts that should be listed on this report. The date and balance columns have special significance. Loans on this report over 30 days must be listed on the next Potential Loss Report. The balance is the balance when first on report, and does not need to be updated. Deletions from the report can be made by simply lining through the items. Additions can be "tacked on". Care should be taken to revise the totals of each new report, however.

CANCELLATION AND RENEWAL FOLLOWUP

After original insurance placement, there are three situations that will prompt us to follow the customer for coverage:

1. Cancellation. Insurors are legally bound to notify insured lienholders of cancellation at least 10 days before date coverage will terminate.
2. Expiration. Policy expires during life of loan. Most companies notify the lienholder of the expiration if they do not intend to renew. Since all companies do not do this, we must rely on our Insurance Followup Card, which should come up 10 days before expiration.
3. Non-payment of renewal premium on continuous policies.

NEW BULLETIN

All three of these situations can be handled with just two form letters. Here is the procedure:

As soon as any notice of cancellation or non-payment of renewal premium is received, the Insurance Followup Clerk should immediately:

1. Send Insurance Notice #1 (shown on page 11).
2. Prepare Insurance Followup Card, note the followup performed and next followup date, and file the card on the termination date.
3. On the termination date send Insurance Notice #2 (shown on page 11). Suspense for 20 days.
4. At the end of this period, if no confirmation has been received, refer the account to the adjuster by the procedure in the New Transactions section of this bulletin. Enter the account on the next Uninsured Vehicles Report.

SUBJECT BOAT AND MOTOR FINANCING

TOPIC

 . Date 8-23-62

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - BOAT AND MOTOR FINANCING" Dated 4-5-61

For the past several years increased leisure time, higher personal income and the development of artificial waterways within practical distance of larger urban areas have resulted in the phenomenal growth and popularity of boating as a major recreational activity. Consistent with our policy of gearing our services to the needs of the communities we serve, a complete revision of our boat and motor financing plan has been made.

We are now able to offer a complete and adequate "financing package" to boat dealers through the addition of our new boat and motor group insurance policy, revised rates, reserves, terms and the availability of several plans of operation. These optional plans provide a means of tailoring our plan to each individual dealer's needs while still providing low cost competitive financing for the purchaser. In cases where present dealer relations are satisfactory to all concerned, the new "package" does not require the change of existing dealer arrangements. However, it places us in an excellent position to solicit new business and to protect our present dealers in situations where we are faced with losing the dealer because we are not competitive with other plans available.

All installment loan personnel concerned with the handling of sales finance dealers should thoroughly understand all provisions of the new "package."

CLASSIFICATION — Contracts purchased from dealers covering boat and/or motors should be classified as SALES FINANCE - DOMESTIC.

DEALER PLANS

I. Standard Plan - Full Recourse

Agreement - use Full Recourse, 19-935

Reserve balance requirement - 5% of retail outstandings.

Reserve rate - 2% per annum on the unpaid balance of each transaction until 5% reserve balance is obtained. 1% per annum at dealer's option thereafter. (See subsequent paragraph "DEALER LOSS RESERVE.")

Should it become necessary to change existing dealers operating under a full recourse plan with reserve balance requirements in excess of 5% of retail outstandings, a new agreement must be executed. Excess reserve thus created may be paid at the next settlement date.

The full recourse plan still remains our standard plan of operation. It offers the most profitable arrangement to the dealer in that more of the contracts which he offers to us can be approved and it provides him with the greatest profit from his loss reserve since the reserve balance requirements are lower than the optional plans. It also affords the bank the greatest protection. All effort should be made to sell both present and prospective dealers on the advantages of the full recourse plan.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - BOAT AND MOTOR FINANCING" Dated 4-5-61

II. Non-Recourse Option

Agreement - use Full Recourse, 19-935, together with Non-Recourse Option, 19-933 (Operating Guide bulletin: SALES FINANCE - AGREEMENT - NON-RECOURSE OPTION).

Reserve balance requirement - 10% to invoke.

The option agreement must be signed with an agreed percentage of 10%. Since this plan is essentially full recourse until the dealer decides to invoke his option, excess reserves will be paid over 5% of retail outstandings. The dealer must understand, however, that in order to invoke the option he must first bring his reserve up to 10% of his retail outstandings. (See subsequent paragraph "DEALER LOSS RESERVE.")

Reserve rate - 2% per annum on the unpaid balance of each transaction until 5% reserve balance is obtained. 1% per annum at dealer's option thereafter. (See subsequent paragraph "DEALER LOSS RESERVE.")

III. Non-Recourse

Agreement - use Non-Recourse, 19-938 (Operating Guide bulletin: SALES FINANCE - AGREEMENT - NON-RECOURSE).

Reserve balance requirements - 10% of retail outstandings.

Reserve rate - 2% per annum on the unpaid balance of each transaction until 10% reserve balance is obtained. 1% per annum at dealer's option thereafter. (See subsequent paragraph "DEALER LOSS RESERVE.")

The Non-Recourse Plan is to be offered only after the recourse and Non-Recourse Option plans have been extended and the dealer has refused both. Approval of System Consumer Credit is necessary before offering Non-Recourse to a dealer.

RATES The net rate to the bank computed on the unpaid balance, including insurance premium when financed, should be 6-LD2. (The net rate no longer changes with balances over and under $500 as in previous plans.)

RATE CHARTS Dealers should be provided with the standard rate chart cover, 19-1021, containing:

1. Credit Life Insurance Insert
2. Disability Insurance Insert
3. Boat and Motor Insurance Insert
4. 8-LD2-M chart (2% reserve)
5. 7-LD2 chart (1% reserve)
6. 6-LD2 chart (reserve - see previous paragraph on "DEALER LOSS RESERVE")

E- 1604

LD charts should be provided in all cases. Transactions received, which are not eligible for disability and/or credit life coverage, should be adjusted in accordance with the paragraph "INELIGIBLE TRANSACTIONS - SALES FINANCE" in the Operating Guide bulletin: INSURANCE - CREDIT LIFE and INSURANCE - DISABILITY.

DEALER LOSS RESERVES Rate to the purchaser will be 6% per annum plus life and disability and a 1% or 2% per annum dealer loss reserve based upon the reserve balance requirements of the particular plan of operation involved.

On an individual transaction basis, the dealer may give the bank's net rate (6-LD2) to the customer when it is necessary in order to place either the insurance or the transaction itself with us. In such cases, the standard reserve (2% or 1%) will be held out of the proceeds of the transaction and should be credited to dealer contingent reserve. From the standpoint of reserve accounting and settlement, there should be no distinction between the loss reserve and the contingent reserve.

Reserve balances will be built at the rate of 2% per annum, on each transaction, until the required reserve balance is reached. After this the dealer may elect to add to his reserve at the rate of 1% per annum. Dealers should understand that in so reducing their reserve they are cutting a profit-making tool in half.

ADVANCES Advance of 100% may be made on all plans unless there is reason to set up a "Contingent Reserve" on a particular individual offering.

TERMS AND DOWN PAYMENTS We should always determine that on each contract offered to the bank, the purchaser should: 1. have sufficient down payment to establish an interest, or real equity, in the equipment and. 2. be in a position to pay regular monthly installments in an amount sufficient to increase his equity faster than the equipment will depreciate from time, average use and obsolescence. It is important to remember that a pleasure craft is a "luxury item" and during an adverse economic period, when it is necessary to curtail expenditures, a boat is dispensible, hence the purchaser's equity is extremely important. Down payment of 10% may be accepted on contracts involving small balances (under $500) and short terms (12-15 months). As the amount of the balance to be financed increases so will the need for larger terms and larger down payments. As a guide, the percent of down payment should gradually increase from 10% to 25% as the amount financed increases from $500 to $2,500. Terms may be correspondingly increased up to 24 months on contracts in this range. Contracts involving more than $2,500 may have terms up to 36 months, but should have 25% down payment unless substantial information is available to conclusively prove the credit reliability and financial worth of the customer. The bank should be protected on any contract either by adequate down payment or repayment sufficiently fast to insure that the value of the boat and related equipment always exceeds the balance outstanding.

Where rate is a factor, for the dealer, in the closing of transactions of $2,500 or over, we will be willing to negotiate the rate on an individual deal basis down to 5-LD2 - net to the bank. The standard reserve (2% or 1%) will still apply to such deals, and should be held out of the proceeds of the transaction and credited to dea contingent reserve. Here again from the standpoint of reserve accounting and settlement, there should be no distinction between the loss reserve and the contingent reserve. 5-LD2 rate charts should not be supplied to dealers. These large transactions should be handled on an individual dealer contact basis.

INSURANCE As in the case of all of our group insurance policies, dealers should be educated to sell our new boat and motor insurance on an automatic, part of the transaction, basis. All installment loan personnel concerned should become familiar with the provisions of our group boat and motor insurance policy. (Operating Guide bulletin: INSURANCE - BOATS AND MOTORS.)

Whenever our policy is not used, equivalent coverage must be provided by the customer. In such cases, the bank should be named "Loss Payee." All such loans or contracts should be covered with coverage failure insurance. (Coverage Failure Statement must be signed by the customer and the dealer.)

RECORDING All contracts should be recorded, covering:

1. Boats
2. Boats and Motors
3. Motors alone in excess of $500

Contracts on motors alone, $500 or less, need not be recorded. Be sure our requirements on recording are understood by each dealer so that he may record contracts on motors alone, $500 and less, if he wishes.

CONTRACT FORMS Use Conditional Sales Contract Vehicle-Farm-Equipment (19-986) which provides a recording copy. The dealer should be provided with a separate credit application - Confidential Statement (19-987, Rev. 8-60) which he will attach to the contract when submitting.

On contracts covering motors alone, $500 or less, which do not need to be recorded, use Conditional Sales Contract Personal Property (19-899). This form does not provide a recording copy but does have the Confidential Statement on the reverse side of the original contract.

WHOLESALE If required, advance 80% for 90 days and curtail 10% each 30 days thereafter. Rate is 1% flat for 90 days with ½% renewal charge each 30 days. Boats and motors may be insured under our wholesale equipment policy (GP-142298, American Manufacturers Mutual Insurance Company). This is an inland marine policy and boats and motors on demonstration are covered on an "all risk" basis.

So many manufacturers and distributors in the boat industry have repurchase agreements available that it is impractical for the bank to execute them centrally as we do for appliance business. In the case of boat dealers, each local office should execute their own distributor agreements whenever it is felt that such an arrangement would be either necessary or materially add to our protection. At least a D&B Report should be obtained on the manufacturer or distributor before executing the agreement. If questions arise, consult the System Consumer Credit Department, Atlanta.

OUTBOARD MOTORS SOLD BY APPLIANCE DEALERS We are presently financing outboard motors for some dealers who also sell us appliance contracts (principally hardware stores). If volume is insufficient to warrant setting up separate handling, motors may be handled on the same basis as appliances. Such motors are insurable under our blanket retail fire and theft policy, but only to the extent to the coverages there (excludes collision and sinkage).

ORDERING FORMS Rate charts and inserts (not covers) should be requisitioned from System Consumer Credit, Atlanta. All other forms used with the various plans may be requisitioned in the normal manner from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta.

SECTION SALES FINANCE

SUBJECT DEALER CREDIT

TOPIC APPROVAL OF DEALER LINES

 Date 8-20-53

NEW SUBJECT

"Approval of Dealer Lines" (Form 19-977) has been revised to show operating plans, experience and guidance lines more clearly for each class of business.

The revised form appears in three subsequent illustrations showing its use with different kinds of dealers. These are copies of actual reviews of dealers with whom we are doing business. Only slight changes have been made for illustrative purposes or names changed to protect identities.

The following paragraphs and illustrations are intended to cover procedure and mechanics only, and will not consider credit factors, in preparing the "Approval of Dealer Lines."

PURPOSE

1. To summarize all information needed by the approving officer or committee in setting dealer lines.

2. To provide a permanent record of the credit action taken.

3. To serve as a "top sheet" in the credit file for quick reference.

4. To provide the System Consumer Credit Department, Atlanta, with a summary on each dealer line for use in discussing accounts with distributors, and in maintaining a uniform credit policy throughout the system.

WHEN TO PREPARE

Where practical, the Approval should be prepared before making major credit decisions on any dealer account.

On new dealers, an Approval form should be prepared to summarize the results of investigation and proposed plan of operation before setting lines.

On old dealers, an Approval should be prepared if retail line is about to be exceeded, if wholesale line requires adjustment or, if expiry date has been reached.

On accounts being declined a written record of the factors involved in the declination is particularly important. An Approval form should be used for this purpose on all declined accounts whether old or prospective dealers.

DISTRIBUTION

1. Original as "top sheet" in credit file.

2. Copy for unit manager or officer handling daily relationship with dealer.

3. Copy for System Consumer Credit Dept., Atlanta.

4. Additional copies as needed for members of credit committee or others with an interest in the account.

NEW SUBJECT

CENTRAL CREDIT REVIEW

On dealers doing business exclusively with the Installment Loan Department or where liability in the Commercial Department is secondary, it is not necessary to send a transcript of the financial statement to System Consumer Credit or to prepare Financial Statement Analysis (Form 8-257). The Approval serves a comparable purpose and is intended to meet all written review requirements both locally and centrally.

Where the primary liability is in the Commercial Department, Commercial Department requirements should be observed in sending copies of statements, analysis, etc. to Atlanta.

In either case, dealer's entire liability and relationship with the bank should be reviewed at the same time.

Since Financial Statement Analysis (Form 8-257) does not have spaces to properly describe activity in the Installment Loan Department, the "Approval of Dealer Lines" should be a part of every consolidated review.

ORDERING FORMS

The Approval of Dealer Lines may be requisitioned from the Purchasing Dept., Atlanta, in the normal manner.

TOPIC D&B REPORTS

 Date 6-1-68

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - DEALER CREDIT - D&B REPORTS" - Dated 11-6-57

Effective June 1, 1968, new contracts will be made with Dun and Bradstreet, and also effective on that date certain changes will be made in our operating procedures for ordering reports. This bulletin outlines these changes.

WHEN REQUIRED

Continuous service should be maintained on each active dealer and prior to review and approval of lines on present dealers, a check should be made to insure that a current report is on hand. A current report is one less than six months old. In the analysis and approval of new dealers, D&B reports should be obtained.

BANKS THAT DO NOT HAVE THEIR OWN CONTRACT WITH DUN AND BRADSTREET

D&B "Subscriber Inquiry" forms ready imprinted with a special code number and address are supplied by Corporate Services Department. This inquiry form should be prepared in triplicate and the Bank Code should be added to the special code already imprinted, e.g., Thomaston, "07". The original form should be mailed direct to Dun and Bradstreet, P. O. Box 6187, Station H, Atlanta, Georgia 30308, one copy should be sent by inter-office mail to Corporate Services (Agency Reports), 7th Floor, Atlanta Main Office; and the second copy should be retained for follow-up.

Dun and Bradstreet will mail the reports to Corporate Services which, in turn, will send the original to the Ordering Bank and provide System Consumer Credit with a copy for their files.

Additional D&B "Subscriber Inquiry" forms may be obtained from Corporate Services (Agency Reports), as necessary.

CONTINUOUS SERVICE RENEWAL PROGRAM

Continuous service extends for a period of one year from the date a report is first ordered. It consists of supplementary or revised reports sent to you automatically, and at no extra cost.

Prior to expiration date, Dun and Bradstreet will send the original "Subscriber Inquiry" forms to Corporate Services which, in turn, will send them on to you together with a RED and a BLUE card. You should separate the inquiry forms into two groups - those in which you have continued interest and those in which you have no interest. The "continued interest" group should be banded under the RED card and the "no interest" group should be banded under the BLUE card. Both groups should be returned to Corporate Services where a record will be kept of the reports on which continuous service is desired. (A copy of the record will be sent to System Consumer Credit.) The two groups will then be returned to Dun and Bradstreet who will charge the continuous service reports to the C&S contract.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - DEALER CREDIT - D&B REPORTS" - Dated 11-6-57

METHOD OF PAYMENT
Corporate Services will maintain a month-by-month record of the reports each Bank orders and will debit each Bank monthly for those reports. The renewals for Continuous Service will rate as orders and will be debited at the end of the month in which each is made.

BANKS INCLUDED IN THE C&S CONTRACT, OR WHICH HAVE THEIR OWN CONTRACT WITH DUN AND BRADSTREET

The procedure outlined above will not apply, but it will be necessary for you to insure that Dun and Bradstreet furnishes a duplicate copy of each report. The duplicates are required for System Consumer Credit files and you should send them by inter-office mail to: System Consumer Credit, 7th Floor, First Federal Building, Atlanta.

CONTINUOUS SERVICE RENEWAL PROGRAM
You will be responsible for insuring that Continuous Service is maintained on your dealer accounts.

METHOD OF PAYMENT
Dun and Bradstreet will charge all reports to the C&S contract and you will be debited by Corporate Services at the end of the contract year.

REPLACES BULLETIN: SALES FINANCE - DEALER CREDIT - DEALER CREDIT RECORD. Dated 9-15-59

With the installation of new automatic equipment in the Central Billing Department, we are now able to furnish each office with a monthly IBM listing of all retail purchases from each dealer, thereby eliminating much of the manual posting of information required by our present Dealer Credit Record. This new Dealer Credit Record (IBM listing), including information not previously available, is reproduced on page 2 with explanations covering the various spaces. Coded information on this listing corresponds with the coded spaces on the Discount Sheet as described in the Operating Bulletin: LENDING GENERAL - DISCOUNT SHEET. To obtain full benefit, all applicable spaces on the Discount Sheet must be filled in and the Central Billing Department must be informed of all changes in dealer numbers.

The new IBM Dealer Credit Record will be sent to each office as soon as possible after the end of each month. As received, totals should be posted to the experience section of the Dealer Purchase Guide, a review of the month's purchases should be made to determine any unfavorable trends requiring correction in subsequent purchases, and the Record filed in the Purchase Guide Binder for reference during the month. At least one month's Credit Record should be kept in the binder at all times, and as new records are received, the old records should be transferred to the dealer credit file. As new Approvals of Dealer Lines are prepared and the retail experience is summarized on the Approval, the Credit Records may be destroyed.

Use of the old Dealer Credit Record, form number 19-922, should be discontinued immediately. This form will, however, continue to be carried in stock for use by correspondent banks that are not provided with the new IBM Dealer Credit Record.

The initials of the man who approved the purchase of the contract are shown here.

The account number of each contract is indicated in this column to assist in future reference.

The class of business is indicated by code, the first two digits of which refer to "Sales Finance" classifications according to the code shown on the Discount Sheet. The third digit refers to the type of purpose of the purchase as indicated in the "Coding" space of the Discount Sheet.

Collateral or Endorser indicated here. The "Year," "Brand," "Series or Product," and "Style or Model" are listed in the number of spaces they may occupy (see bulletin "Lending General - Discount Sheet"). The "B" sign indicates that additional merchandise, usually less important, is also covered by the contract.

"Over Advance" (the difference between the amount financed and our standard advance) is indicated in this column.

Note -
"0" designates that the information does not apply. In cases where no down payment was made, or where the advance is within our standard advance, an "0" will be shown. See bulletin "Lending General - Discount Sheet," "Terms and Advance" Page Two.

The Dealer Credit Record is listed for each office by dealer. Under the dealer, new merchandise contracts are listed first. A subtotal of the number of "new" contracts is shown in the "Collateral - Endorser" column. The total dollar volume of "new" contracts purchased from the dealer is indicated under the "Amount of Note" column.

The dealer's "used" contracts are listed next and a subtotal (as for "new") showing the number of "used" contracts and the total dollar volume is shown.

The total volume of new and used is shown giving the number of contracts purchased and the dollar volume. Between these two totals will be found three groups of figures which indicate, from left to right, the number of contracts purchased in which the customer had (1) a checking account, (2) a savings account or (3) a safe deposit box with our bank.

Dealer name and number.

The month and year covered by the report is indicated here.

The "Day" column reflects the date of the month on which the contract was discounted.

This column shows the dollar amount of the "Total Interest and Discount" of each contract.

The "Total Note" dollar amount appears in this column.

The number "1" is used to indicate that the customer has a checking or savings account or a safe deposit box with the bank.

The coded credit grading given to each Sales Finance contract at the time of its purchase is shown here.

The "Salary" column will show the customer's income coded as indicated in the "Monthly Income" space of the Discount Sheet.

In the case of "Individual Retail" paper, race and age will appear in this space. On "Business" loans, the purpose of the loan and the type of business the loan is made to, will appear here in the code as indicated in the bulletin "Small Business Department-Term Credit-Classification."

This column indicates that an irregular monthly repayment schedule exists on a given contract. The following coding is used "A" -Annual, "S" -Semi-annual, "Q" -Quarterly, "M" -Monthly, "B" -Balloon Payment, "X" -A Payment Change (i.e., in cases where the final payment comes out to a slightly different figure than the previous regular installments). If the repayment schedule is regular, nothing will appear in this column.

The total number of months the contract will run, regardless of the number of payments involved, is indicated here, not the number of payments.

The total volume of all classifications of business for the same dealer (i.e., Ins., Furn, P.L.) is shown giving both the total number of contracts purchased and the total dollar volume.

TOPIC DEALER PURCHASE GUIDE

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - DEALER CREDIT - DEALER PURCHASE GUIDE"- Dated 9-15-54

This bulletin has been revised to include changes both in posting the Dealer Purchase Guide and in the source of those postings.

Dealer Purchase Guides for each dealer should be kept alphabetically in 3 ring binders together with the preceding month's Dealer Credit Record and Dealer Rejection-Repurchase Record. The Dealer Purchase Guide is a necessary tool in the daily purchase of dealer paper and it has been designed to go into your binder so that the History Section always faces the Dealer Credit Record or the Dealer Rejection-Repossession Record.

The Purchase Guide is designed to serve two basic purposes:

1. AS A GUIDE FOR THE PERSON RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DAY-TO-DAY PURCHASE OF DEALER PAPER. All spaces must be correctly filled in, showing the exact plan of operation. This assures paper being purchased in accordance with plans and conditions set forth at the time previous experience is reviewed and approval prepared. It also eliminates any danger of the account being handled incorrectly in the event a person unfamiliar with the dealer is assigned to buy his paper. Use a separate sheet for each class of business.

2. TO PROVIDE FOR THE ACCUMULATION OF EXPERIENCE FIGURES NEEDED IN REVIEWING AND APPROVING GUIDANCE LINES. Space is provided for two years' experience, as well as two prior years' purchases. To realize its full value, all spaces must be filled in neatly and accurately. No spaces should be left blank. If "none" is appropriate, so indicate by using a dash (-). When completed each month, these figures should be reviewed by the person responsible for the account and steps should be taken to correct any unfavorable situations.

HISTORY SECTION This section provides for showing the name of the dealer, officers or partners, authorized signatures, type of business, and bank personnel working with the account. It is important that all information be correct and complete.

The names of the New Business Representative and Officer of Account are provided so that they may be informed of all developments affecting the handling of the account.

RETAIL PLAN OF OPERATION This information is used daily by the man buying the dealer retail paper. Consequently, it is a must that it be shown accurately and correctly.

WHOLESALE PLAN OF OPERATION This section provides for a complete picture of the floorplan operation. It, too, should be accurate, showing the "discount plan," the frequency of "checking," etc. If the dealer supplies his own insurance, proper follow-up must be established and maintained to be sure this insurance is in force.

Show exact signatures that appear on corporate resolutions or Powers of Attorney on file for checking against contract assignments.

For guidance of men not familiar with account, show principal or dealer employee through whom majority of contact is made.

ILD person responsible for New Business solicitation.

Show exact trade style to insure mail being correctly addressed and accuracy in all transactions.

Be sure any changes made in plan of operation are reflected on the dealer purchase guide so that the information is current at all times.

Spaces are self-explanatory and should be filled in with precision completely and accurately so that operation may proceed correctly in the absence of Branch personnel.

This space is provided to show how dealer is to report to Bank on "Net Sale" basis, rather than upon gross terms shown above.

Show wholesale purchase plan data - terms provided on each plan dealer with merchandise (applicable to banks). In "check away" show frequency of wholesale checks.

CONDITIONS AND REMARKS This section is most important and should show all special conditions, arrangements, etc., affecting the handling of the account. Conditions provided in the Approval of Dealer Lines should also be included and lined out as satisfied.

EXPERIENCE SIDE

PURCHASED DURING THE CURRENT MONTH

Wholesale Purchases - All information concerning wholesale is obtained direct from the wholesale control sheet. These purchases should be compared with the wholesale outstandings for turnover. Compare with retail purchases to help determine the percentage of business we are obtaining.

Retail Purchases - This information comes from the Dealer Credit Record and is self-explanatory. Watch for sudden increases and decreases in volume. From the standpoint of profit, the unpaid balance and the number of used purchases against new should be observed closely, keeping in mind the rate currently obtained.

Poor Risks - This column is a consolidation of "poor" and "bad" risks purchased (coded 3 and 4), including both new and used, and is obtained from the "Credit" column of the Dealer Credit Record. This indicates the quality of paper generated and should be watched in relation to collection experience.

Note - "Retail Purchases" (new and used) and "Poor Risks" are the only items posted from the Dealer Credit Record. These two items will be posted when the Dealer Credit Record arrives from the Central Billing Department. All other information should be posted, as in the past, at the end of each month.

Rejections - This figure is consolidated from the Dealer Rejection-Repossession Record and indicates the class of paper being offered. Too high a percentage of rejections might indicate the need of stopping business entirely or requiring the dealer to pay the additional inventigation costs. No rejections could indicate an unusually good class of paper or too liberal passing of credit.

Repurchases - To properly control and analyze dealer paper, we must be able to determine the extent to which the paper will stand on its own feet in case of dealer financial difficulties. In this column, enter the number of accounts repossessed as well as repurchases by the dealer because of collection trouble. Do not enter repurchases if they were made for some other reason than collection. This information is posted from the Dealer Rejection-Repurchase Log.

Losses - This will be filled in from the total number of losses during the current month and is obtained from the Dealer Rejection-Repurchase Log.

OUTSTANDINGS - CLOSE OF CURRENT MONTH

Retail Outstandings - Enter number and amount of accounts outstanding at the end of the month. The amount can be obtained from the adding machine tape prepared when monthly listings are made. Number of accounts should be obtained by actually counting the cards.

Total Reserves - Includes both Dealer Loss Reserve and Dealer Contingent Reserve and may be entered from the copies of the monthly statements rendered to the dealer. Should be adequate for class of paper and financial worth of dealer.

Past Due Accounts - Show the number of accounts 15-29 days, 30-59 days and more than 60 days past due, in the appropriate column. If none, so indicate by using a dash. These indicate the quality of paper purchased and if percentage is out of line, perhaps a complete review is in order to determine if contracts are bought correctly and if adequate collection effort is being maintained.

Wholesale Outstandings - These are posted from the wholesale ledger with that portion of the total outstandings that is over six months' old being segregated. Compare six months portion with total outstandings to determine if corrective measures are necessary. The date checked is entered in the appropriate column before sending wholesale checking report to Atlanta.

Direct Installment or L&D Loans - Direct installment liability is determined from the Installment Loan records and L&D liability from the liability ledger. (L&D information may be picked up anytime between the 25th and the end of the month.) The total indebtedness of the dealer should be considered in the monthly review.

Financial Statement - Up-to-date financial information is necessary to completely review an account. This section provides a constant reminder if statements are not in file. In conversations with the dealer, a glance at the Purchase Guide tells when statements are required.

C&S Bank Service Since - Every effort should be made to obtain the full collateral benefit from each dealer account. Show here the date each service is opened, and use this section as a guide for soliciting further service. Until space is provided, write in the information regarding CAS.

APPROVED LINES As dealer accounts are reviewed, the retail and wholesale lines and expiry date should be entered on the Dealer Purchase Guide as a limit for the man buying paper. Paper should not be purchased except within approved lines; and whenever lines are about to be exceeded or expire, it is the responsibility of the man buying the paper to bring the account up for credit review.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - DEALER CREDIT - DEALER REJECTION-REPOSSESSION RECORD" - Dated 9-7-59

The Dealer Rejection-Repossession Record (19-928) serves as a supplement to the IBM Dealer Credit Record so that a complete picture of recent activity is available with which to evaluate dealer paper being purchased. The general level of purchaser credits submitted and the consequent rejection and repossession picture are important factors in the consideration given to the conditions under which a dealer's paper will be purchased in the future.

REJECTIONS The Dealer Rejection-Repossession Record is reproduced on page 2 of this bulletin as a completed sample. All applicable spaces are to be completed. The columnar headings are self-explanatory and when listing a rejection, show the purchaser's name (last and initials), the date of application, the amount of the rejection (amount to be financed), and indicate the reason for the rejection in the "Remarks" column.

REPOSSESSIONS-REPURCHASES Repurchases are to be entered on the date they are paid off by the dealer. Bank liability repossessions are entered when the loss is charged off. Show the customer's name, date of repurchase, the amount of the net balance (after rebate if any) and the reason for repurchase. In the case of bank liability repossessions, indicate the customer's name, date of repossession, the amount of net balance, the amount charged off to P&L, and the reason for repossession. Comments concerning losses, the length of time a dealer takes to pay off a repurchase, etc. should always be noted in the "Remarks" column whenever such information is available.

RECAPITULATION The number of rejections, the number and dollar amount of repurchases or repossessions, and the dollar amount of losses is recapped at the end of each month and the totals posted to the experience record of each dealer's Dealer Purchase Guide (see bulletin: SALES FINANCE - DEALER CREDIT - DEALER PURCHASE GUIDE).

ORDERING THE RECORD Your supply of the Dealer Rejection-Repossession Record may be ordered from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta, in the usual manner.

SUBJECT DEALER CREDIT

TOPIC FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

 Date 10-23-57

Replaces Bulletin: "FINANCIAL STATEMENTS" Dated 1-30-51

Having current financial statements and operating figures in file on all of our dealer accounts has always been a requirement for the extension of wholesale and retail lines. During the past two years, particularly, we have emphasized, individually and in meetings, the need for accurate information and intelligent analysis. Without going into the techniques of financial statement analysis, we would like to outline our current basic requirements for financial statement followup and handling.

FREQUENCY OF STATEMENTS

As a matter of policy, we should have statements and operating figures from dealers at their fiscal year-end and at their mid-year period. Exceptions are expected in both directions at the discretion of the credit men reviewing the accounts. One statement per year is adequate in most cases for larger, well financed firms -- monthly or quarterly statements may be required from marginal accounts or where accomodations are large in relation to net worth.

All automobile dealers furnish their factories with monthly balance sheets and operating figures. Except in the case of a very rare and unquestionably strong dealer, we should be furnished with copies of these statements.

The majority of our dealers close their books at 12-31 and our general followup is therefore geared to request statements at the end of January and at the end of July.

FORM OF STATEMENT

A complete audit report prepared by an outside accounting firm will generally furnish the best and most complete information and is mandatory on larger lines. Many cases bring out the need for Certified Audits. In one instance, a large automobile dealership had falsified statements both to the bank and to the factory by including a debt due stockholders in their surplus account, thereby creating a difference in net worth of approximately $75M. When an audit was obtained, the fraud became evident and a possible large loss was avoided by immediate action.

In the absence of an audit, have your dealers complete the applicable statement form supplied by the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta. (Order directly from them, rather than through our Purchasing Department).

a. Personal Financial Statement (CB110)
b. Proprietorship or Partnership (CR221)
c. Corporation (CR222)

PROCEDURE FOR FOLLOWUP

The Dealer Purchase Guide should be your automatic tickler for statement followup. Each time a unit man talks with the dealer, the Guide should be before him and he can easily check to be sure the required statement is in file.

Replaces Bulletin: "FINANCIAL STATEMENTS" Dated 1-30-51

In addition to this, the procedure should be:

1. Send letters out 45 days after fiscal year-end to all dealers whose statements are not in file.
2. Send second letter 15 days later to those who have not replied.
3. Pick up followup as outlined above by telephone and personal contact, keeping in mind that current figures are of much more value than those several months old.

This procedure can be amended to fit a specific situation and can also apply to interim statements.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Statements should be acknowledged with a brief personal letter from the man handling the account. If possible, comment favorably on some aspect of the statement. If the statement is incomplete, P&L figures not furnished, or certain items require explantion, this is the time to ask for more information. Do not hesitate to return the statement to the dealer for correction if it is incorrect or incomplete in any way. This presents a constant selling job to encourage dealers to give us accurate and complete figures.

SPREADING OF STATEMENTS

As each financial statement comes in, it should be spread on our Comparative Statement form for dealer accounts (19-865). This form can be ordered from the Purchasing Department and is set up especially for Installment Loan dealers. Without the use of a comparative spread sheet, an accurate analysis of the account based on figures rendered is difficult and trends may be overlooked.

FORWARD TO CENTRAL INSTALLMENT

So that everyone may be kept aware of the financial progress (or lack of same) among the dealers in whom we have the greatest exposure, please send to Central Installment, Atlanta, after your review and analysis, the original of all financial statements received on automobile dealers and on other dealers where retail outstandings exceed $75M and wholesale outstandings exceed $40M. Also, please forward copies of any credit memorandums written concerning statements received between approvals. The statements will be returned to you immediately following review.

SUBJECT DISTRIBUTOR - MFGR. RELATIONS

TOPIC

 Date 3-30-51

New Subject

All of you are aware that our relations with distributors have been a major factor in the development and holding of appliance and farm equipment dealer business. This relationship is improving daily with the cooperation that each of you is giving to the credit men and roadmen of the various distributors. To further improve our position, we would like to bring out additional suggestions.

PROMPT PAYMENT OF INVOICES

Do not hold up payment to distributors pending receipt of down payment and signed papers from the dealer. You are already committed to handle the transaction and a Power of Attorney procedure has been developed to give you the necessary protection if you will use it. Make it standard practice to pay invoices the same day they are received - obtain dealers' Power of Attorney for your protection and greater ease of handling. On new dealers, the Power of Attorney should be sold as part of our wholesale plan and the necessary forms signed then.

DEALERS AUTHORIZATION

All of the automobile factories require a letter from each of their dealers authorizing the bank or finance company to pay for cars shipped to the dealer. Our farm equipment and appliance distributors have not made this a requirement but in many cases it is good business for us to supply such authorization to definitely confirm wholesaling arrangements and emphasize that we are the sole financing agency. With such a letter in effect, the dealer will be less likely to make other wholesaling arrangements and the distributor will be unable to switch floorplan to someone else without specific authorization from the dealer.

A sample letter is attached (#1) which would be obtained:

(a) From all farm equipment dealers where we are to handle floorplan.

(b) From appliance dealers as judgment dictates. We should use this means of tying in the larger appliance accounts with their distributors. In the case of smaller dealers, it might be well to tie in the one or two distributors supplying the bulk of the inventory.

This letter should be given to you to forward to the distributor.

NOTIFICATION TO DISTRIBUTOR

In every case, each distributor of every dealer having lines with us should be notified of our relations with the dealer. The letter described above serves the purpose where it is used - where it is not used, a letter from you, following the pattern of letter #2, should be sent to each distributor. Make this standard practice with all new accounts as your initial lines are approved. On present dealers, as lines are reviewed, send appropriate letters to the distributors involved.

APPROVAL TO DISTRIBUTORS

In many cases where only 1 or 2 distributors are involved, it should be possible to give a blanket approval based on a limit each week subject to cancellation. Where the dealer credit warrants, use letter #3 to confirm such arrangements. In those cases where you do not feel that a dealer's usual requirements can be approved on a blanket basis, the letter can be filled in with an amount that will take care of one or two item shipments.

New Subject

Copies of all letters should be sent to us for use in discussing dealer accounts around the territory with the distributor.

As a matter of procedure, therefore, please send System Consumer Credit, Atlanta, a copy of any correspondence which you have with one of the distributors. Where a declination of a dealer account is involved, on Atlanta's copy of the letter indicate breifly the reason for the declination if the facts are such that you have not put them in your letter to the distributor. We are also asking the distributors, in turn, to send us copies of their letters to you.

If you have any unusual situations respecting the distributors or their roadmen where you feel that their attitude generally or with respect to individual accounts is unreasonable, please let us have the facts on those also, in memorandum form.

Manufacturer-Distributor-Dealer relations are becoming more important to us.

TOPIC DISTRIBUTOR AGREEMENT

 Date 7-12-50

New Subject

The Distributor Wholesale Agreement, form 19-937 (shown on page 2), is the basic agreement between the distributor and the C&S National Bank. The Supplement, form 19-936 (shown below), covers any other bank under our basic agreement.

These agreements provide the bank with protection against unsold new merchandise floorplanned for dealers.

Use of the distributor agreement will enable us to perform a genuine service for our correspondent banks. We are willing to administer this agreement for the benefit of any of our correspondents, and the simplicity of the mechanics involved should appeal to them. All that is necessary is to have the correspondent bank execute the supplement, send it to us, and we will do the rest.

NOTIFICATION Since all agreements are on our standard form, the marking of those signed on the Distributor Index should be sufficient for reference purposes. As new agreements are signed, you will be notified by memorandum so that your Distributor Index may be marked. New Distributor Indexes are published periodically.

ORDERING FORMS Both the Distributor Wholesale Agreement and the Supplement may be requisitioned from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta, in the normal manner.

SUBJECT FARM EQUIPMENT

TOPIC

 Date 12-5-66

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - FARM EQUIPMENT" - Dated 5-15-63

Changing conditions and the entry of more competition in the field have led to a review of our entire program of farm equipment financing. A practical, easy to use set of rate charts have been developed that will simplify the computation of seasonal payments. All farm equipment charts now include both life and property insurance.

PROPERTY INSURANCE. Our experience under the master policy with American Southern has been satisfactory and they are being continued as insurance carrier under our new program.

Procedures for issuing certificates and settling claims are outlined in the Operating Guide bulletin "Insurance - Farm Equipment" dated December 5, 1966.

There will be some instances where the customer will have his own insurance and will not want us to write the coverage. Under these circumstances, be sure the "Statement of Insurance" is completed on the reverse side of the contract and place Coverage Failure Insurance on the loan. As a matter of policy, DO NOT ADJUST THE RATE WHEN THE CUSTOMER CARRIES HIS OWN INSURANCE.

RATES AND DEALER LOSS RESERVE Under this program, we have increased our yield after insurance costs, but still remain competitive.

The new rate charts simplify computation and still allow the dealer to be flexible in meeting particular competitive situations.

Listed below are the amounts of dealer reserve paid according to the chart used:

New (or late model used) with amount financed over $1,500:

Dealer Uses	Dealer Reserve
(A) Pink Chart	None
(B) White Chart	1%PA
(C) Green Chart	2%PA

Used (or low priced new) with amount financed less than $1,500:

Dealer Uses	Dealer Reserve
(A) White Chart	None
(B) Green Chart	1%PA

TERMS AND DOWN PAYMENTS Maximum terms are 48 months on new units. This assists those purchasers who are buying big units with large unpaid balances. It should not be construed, however, as an invitation to use long terms on smaller balances. Every repayment schedule should insure that the balance on the contract remains less than the resale value of the collateral. Used units, as a rule, should not be financed over 36 months. However, if there are extenuating circumstances which justify longer terms and the credit factors are satisfactory, longer terms may be used provided prior approval is secured from the bank.

As a guide, the following relationship between terms and down payments is suggested:

NEW TRACTORS, IMPLEMENTS, LATE MODEL USED TRACTORS

Minimum Down Payment	Standard Payment Plans
20%	Equal Monthly Payments, 30 Months Maximum First Payment Within 45 Days
25%	Equal Monthly Payments, 36 Months Maximum First Payment Within 45 Days
30%	Equal Monthly Payments, 48 Months Maximum First Payment Within 45 Days
25%	Any semi-annual or crop payment plan providing first payment comes due in six months or less. Maximum is 36 months.
30%	Any semi-annual or crop payment plan providing first payment comes due in six months or less. Maximum is 48 months.
35%	Any crop payment plan if first payment comes due after six months, but no later than twelve months. Maximum is 48 months.

USED IMPLEMENTS, OLD MODEL TRACTORS

Maximum term is 36 months.

Down payment: 25% - All monthly repayment contracts.

35% - All other than monthly repayment contracts.

The exercise of good judgment in evaluating the credit standing of the customer, his financial resources to withstand a crop failure and the selling practices and financial strength of our dealer will enable us to perform the maximum service to both on a sound basis.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - FARM EQUIPMENT" - Dated 5-15-63

CONDITIONAL SALES CONTRACT Our Conditional Sales Contract (19-986, Rev. 1/64) is to be used in the financing of farm equipment. Spaces are provided for listing seasonal payments.

NEW APPLICATIONS A revised and simplified application has been developed which reduces the amount of information to be taken from the prospective customer. This application also provides space for the computation of the time price differential. An illustration is shown on page ADVANCE Normally the reserve buildup out of the finance charges should permit a 100% advance provided the quality of the paper purchased and the strength of the dealer justifies.

DEALER LIABILITY Experience has proven that a full recourse plan, supported by adequate credit and collection service, more completely fills the dealers' needs and results in a lower net financing cost for the dealer.

REPOSSESSIONS As a matter of policy, farm equipment repossessions should be paid off by the dealer within ninety days from the date they are repossessed. If they are sold within this period, they should be paid off on the date sold. This period should normally give the dealer adequate time to recondition and resell the unit. However, there may be a valid reason, such as a seasonal slack selling period, that the dealer has not been able to resell a repossession. If our insisting that the full balance be paid would work a real hardship on the dealer, then it may be short-sighted to demand payment. If we are convinced that the dealer is doing all that can normally be expected to resell repossessed units, then we should ask for a 10% curtailment every thirty days (10% of the balance outstanding at the time of repossession). We should continue to emphasize the importance of selling these units so the dealer will not relax efforts to dispose of them. They should also be checked each time a wholesale check is made.

FILING FINANCING STATEMENTS It is not necessary to file a Financing Statement on those transactions where the selling price of the merchandise is less than $2,500 and we have Purchase Money Security Interest. A Financing Statement should be filed where the total purchase price of the merchandise plus the time price differential is in excess of $2,500. This subject is covered in detail in the Operating Guide Bulletin - "Sales Finance - Uniform Commercial Code - Retail".

REBATES A rebate chart is available for use in conjunction with our new seasonal rate charts. It can be used on all maturities except monthly and single or irregular payment plans. These exceptions will continue to be computed in the usual manner. (See Operating Guide Bulletin - "Rebates - Procedure".)

ORDERING CHARTS All rate charts, inserts and rebate charts should be ordered from System Consumer Credit in the usual manner. Keep in mind that the charts are printed in sets, including all three rates, when ordering.

PURCHASER'S CONFIDENTIAL STATEMENT (19-969)

Any discussion of purchaser credit for Farm Equipment Financing can ge geared directly to the Purchaser's Confidential Statement. This application form was designed after careful study of the particular credit factors involved in extending credit to farmers for the purchase of equipment. It provides a simple and easy means for dealers and their salesmen (who aren't trained credit men) to assemble the facts that are necessary to make an intelligent credit decision. Insist that it be used on every transaction.

SAFE GUARD YOUR DEALER AND YOURSELF

Past experience shows us that credit losses are created in periods of prosperity. This happens because basic credit fundamentals tend to be ignored in times when production and sales are at a high level. Many dealers have entered the Farm Equipment field in recent years and need credit guidance such as you can give them based on collective lending experience through good years and bad.

GENERAL CREDIT FACTORS

The factors most generally considered are being reviewed only briefly because it is assumed that all of our credit men have been taking these factors into consideration. Investigation through the references given on the Purchaser's Confidential Statement and the usual other sources will determine the applicant's habits and general reputation for paying bills. Your investigation should substantially confirm the financial statement presented to you which usually determines the financial responsibility and the ability of the farmer to stand crop failure.

You take into consideration the size of the farm, which is reflected on the application, along with the need for the equipment being purchased. There are still many farmers whose income and size do not warrant the purchase of expensive mechanical equipment.

You keep in mind your customer's total income as related to the prospective purchase and normal expenses. You take into consideration the equity of the farm, the stability and other borrowing power it may represent. Farmers with small equities or tenant farmers are not generally good risks for equipment financing.

PERIODS OF INCOME

Assuming that all other factors are favorable, the most important element of farmer credit still remains, that is, to properly arrange terms on the unpaid balance. It is obvious from some of our collection difficulties recently that the terms of repayment have not been properly arranged. Years ago, credit to farmers was generally extended with one payment due in the fall because the farmer was dependent upon one principal money crop. Today, most farmers derive some income throughout the year from various sources. It is essential that contracts be set up to obtain some repayment out of each and every source of income.

New Bulletin

We have a past due account today on a dairy farmer who was set up to pay half of his note in November, 1949, and the other half in November, 1950. Our application and investigation in this case clearly showed that this farmer received his income monthly and the contract should have been set up for monthly repayments. The result is that we have a slow collection case and a customer whose credit rating will be affected because of improper scheduling.

MATCHING PAYMENTS WITH INCOME This is the most important space on your farm application. Terms cannot be intelligently arranged without knowing the source of income and the amount of income at each period throughout the year. It is essential that payments be arranged to conform to the income periods.

DEALER RELATIONSHIP It is not enough for us to know how farm equipment should be sold. Unless the dealers with whom you do business can be sold on the fact that matching payments to income will increase their sales and decrease collection problems and repossession, you will not be able to successfully service these dealer accounts. Your success in handling this class of paper through dealers will depend to a large extent on your ability in educating dealers along the lines of proper credit selling.

SUBJECT GEORGIA REGULATIONS

TOPIC

 Date 5-3-68

Revision of Page 1 Dated 9-1-67

The General Assembly has enacted legislation, effective 10-1-67, regulating the sale and financing of motor vehicles and consumer goods and/or services. This legislation is covered under two Acts:

1. HB 225 - Motor Vehicle Sales Finance Act.
(Covers any device or vehicle including automobiles, motorcycles, motor trucks, trailers, and all other vehicles operated over the public highways and streets of this state and propelled by power other than muscular power, but does not include traction engines, road rollers, implements of husbandry and other agricultural equipment and such vehicles as run only upon a track.)

2. HB 224 - Retail Installment and Home Solicitation Act.
(Covers personalty or work or labor purchased or furnished primarily for personal, family or household use. Includes materials and labor used when improving real property.) The portion of the Retail Installment and Home Solicitation Act that exempted property improvement transactions where a deed to secure debt was taken has now been amended (April, 1968). Property Improvement contracts now come under the Retail Installment and Home Solicitation Act, whether secured or unsecured. This places us in a more favorable position with regard to rates. R R R R

The full text of these acts has been furnished to the senior consumer credit officer in each of our cities and the following comments are intended to cover only the main provisions - as briefly as possible. Both Acts are covered in this bulletin since many of the requirements are similar. Changes are being made to existing bulletins, where necessary, to cover changes in operating procedure or policy resulting from these acts.

RETAIL INSTALLMENT CONTRACT (Instrument creating a purchase money interest)

1. Our contracts have been revised to conform to both Acts with respect to size of type, wording designed to protect the buyer, description of the transaction and other requirements.

2. Contract must be completed "as to all essential provisions prior to signing by the buyer." If merchandise is delivered after the contract is signed, the identifying numbers and due date of the first installment may be inserted at time of delivery.

3. Buyers must be furnished by seller with a completed copy of the contract at the time it is signed. Buyer's signature on a contract conforming to the Act will be considered as evidence of compliance with this provision.

NEW BULLETIN

FINANCE CHARGE LIMITATION

Both Acts limit the amount of finance charge (time price differential) exclusive of official fees, insurance premiums, delinquency charges, attorneys' fees and court costs.

1. Motor Vehicles - The rates on motor vehicles are based on the year model of the vehicle and the year in which it is sold, as follows:

   a. Class I - - - $8 per $100 per year
   Any new motor vehicle designated by the manufacturer by a year model not earlier than the year in which the sale is made - i.e. 1967 model sold in 1966 or 1967.

   b. Class II - - - $11 per $100 per year.
   Any new motor vehicle not in Class I and any used motor vehicle designated by the manufacturer by a year model of the same or not more than two years prior to the year in which the sale is made, i.e. new 1967 model sold in 1968 or any used current year model plus the two preceding year models.

   c. Class III - - - $15 per $100 per year
   Any used car not in Class II and sold not more than four years after the year model given the vehicle by the manufacturer, i.e. 1964 or 1963 models sold in 1967.

   d. Class IV - - - $17 per $100 per year
   Any used motor vehicle not in Class II or Class III and sold more than four years after the year models given the vehicle by the manufacturer, i.e. 1962 or older models sold in 1967 or thereafter.

2. Consumer Goods/Services

   $12 per $100 on first $400.

   $10 per $100 on the excess over $400.

A new graduated rate chart is being printed for use when the maximum rate is to be charged.

The above rates pertain to contracts payable in successive monthly payments that are substantially equal in amount. When payments are unequal or irregular, the finance charge may be at a rate that will provide the same yield as is permitted on monthly payment contracts.

NEW BULLETIN

As in the past, our rates will be determined by costs of operation and competitive conditions, but in no case can the total finance charge (including dealer reserve) exceed the maximums permitted under these Acts.

MINIMUM FINANCE CHARGE

In some instances where small balances are concerned, the charge (percentage-wise) allowed by these Acts will not cover the costs of handling the loan. The Acts have provided for minimum charges as follows:

1. Motor Vehicle

   $25 minimum charge.

2. Consumer Goods and Services - The minimum charge in this Act is based on the principal balance as follows:

Principal Balance	Minimum Charge
0 - $25	$ 5.00
$25.01 - $50	$ 7.50
$50.00 or more	$12.00

LATE CHARGES

Both Acts provide for the collection of late charges in the amount of 5% of the payment or $5, whichever is less. This charge can only be collected once on a given payment, and only then if the payment is not made within 10 days of the due date.

OFFICIAL FEES, ATTORNEYS' FEES AND COURT COSTS

Both Acts allow for the collection of official fees (the amount actually to be paid for recording and releasing the recording), attorney's fees (reasonable attorney's fees provided the contract is referred for collection to an attorney who is not a salaried employee of the bank) and court costs (the actual amount of the costs).

INSURANCE

The "costs" of insurance coverage, provided for in the contract, must be shown on the contract.

1. Physical Damage - A new automobile contract has been developed to show the coverages provided and the amount of premium included for these coverages.

2. Life, Disability and Property * - We have revised our consumer goods contract, and our attorneys feel we can show the percentage per year for these coverages rather than the dollar amount of the premiums. This eliminates the need for revising our rate charts to show the actual premium.

* Property insurance on domestic contracts only.

NEW BULLETIN

REFINANCING AND EXTENSIONS

1. Motor Vehicles - When refinancing a motor vehicle account, the vehicle may be re-classified, at the time of refinance, into the new class according to the year model. When refinancing however, do not take an acquisition charge on the old contract and do not charge more than the appropriate percentage on the new loan regardless of the amount financed.

   Although a special method of computing extension fees is prescribed for vehicles, we will continue to charge 1% per month of the unpaid balance with a minimum fee of $2.00.

2. Consumer Goods and Services - We will continue to refinance and extend these accounts as we have in the past.

PREPAYMENT OF CONTRACTS

Both Acts require that upon prepayment the rebate must be based on the total charges. This means dealer reserve must also be rebated on the same basis as our interest and discount, (see new bulletin - ACCOUNTING AND GENERAL OPERATIONS - REBATES - DEALER RESERVE - PROCEDURE - Dated 9-1-67).

ACQUISITION CHARGES

Both Acts allow deduction of an acquisition charge from the Interest and Discount before applying the appropriate rebate percentage.

1. Motor Vehicles

   Acquisition charge $25.

2. Consumer Goods and Services

   Acquisition charge $15.

HOME SOLICITATION SALES

Whenever the sale of goods and services is made in a home other than that of the seller (usually the home of the buyer), there are some special regulations regarding the sale and subsequent financing.

1. The buyer may cancel the sales agreement by so notifying the seller by registered mail post mailed not later than midnight of the day following the date of sale.

2. In the event of such cancellation, the seller must return all deposits, down payments or goods traded in within 10 days.

NEW BULLETIN

3. The seller is entitled to 5% of the sale price or $25, whichever is less, as liquidation damages. The seller is also entitled to collect or retain the cost of picking up goods delivered, however, this fee cannot exceed $5.00.

This provision should present no problems in financing as long as we adhere to our policy of doing business only with responsible and ethical dealers.

ADD-ON CONTRACTS

There are no specific provisions in the consumer goods and services act relating to add-on financing. We will continue to use our add-on plan, with a revised contract, with one major exception. The contract must be completed prior to signing by the buyer - which means the dealer will have to call the Bank for a pay-off prior to completing this contract.

TRANSFER OR ASSIGNMENT OF CONTRACTS

We will continue to be able to take an assigned contract free of any defenses the buyer may be able to assert against the seller.

However, the defenses of the buyer, allowed under these Acts, may be asserted against any holder of a contract bearing charges in excess of those allowed by these acts.

We must be absolutely sure that the charges on all contracts we purchase from dealers do not exceed those allowed under these Acts. The penalty for violation is quite severe.

CORRECTION OF ERRORS

Any violation in connection with the computation of the finance charge may be corrected within ten (10) days after the date the contract was executed and neither the seller nor holder is subject to any penalty.

REPOSSESSIONS AND DEFICIENCIES

There are new provisions in these Acts regarding disposition of repossessions in the event the holder intends to pursue a deficiency balance. This is covered under a new bulletin (COLLECTIONS - SALES FINANCE - DEFICIENCY CLAIMS - Dated 9-1-67).

SUMMARY

Prior to October 1, 1967 calls must be made upon all Domestic, Property Improvement, and Automobile dealers to explain the provisions of the new Acts and deliver new contracts and rate charts (where applicable). An initial supply of materials will be sent to you and you may order more through the Purchasing Department and System Consumer Credit Department in Atlanta in the usual manner.

Any questions that may arise as a result of these Acts or any operational problems that occur should be referred to System Consumer Credit, Atlanta, so uniform policy can be developed for the entire system.

SUBJECT NEW BUSINESS REPORT

TOPIC

 Date 7-13-50

New Bulletin

The New Business Report form (reproduced on reverse) has been in use in our offices for some time.

PURPOSE
The purpose of the New Business Report is to outline for future reference the exact plan of operation discussed with each new dealer at the time he is signed up. This is particularly important where the purchase of paper is to be handled by an individual other than the individual signing up the dealer.

WHEN TO PREPARE
A NEW BUSINESS REPORT SHOULD BE MADE UP IMMEDIATELY AFTER CONCLUDING ARRANGEMENTS WITH A NEW DEALER.

A SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT, USING THE SAME FORM, SHOULD BE MADE UP WHENEVER A CHANGE IN RATE OR PLAN IS MADE.

It is not necessary to prepare this report covering routine calls on a dealer except as mentioned above.

DISTRIBUTION
This report form is padded in sets of three. The original should be sent to Atlanta immediately to the attention of Mr. P.M. Welch. After review, this copy will become a part of our general file maintained on each dealer account. The copy marked "Local Installment Office" should be made a part of your credit file on each dealer account after it has served the initial purpose of getting the dealer set up. The triplicate copy has been provided for the benefit of those offices that have a separate New Business Department and need not be used unless it is required for this purpose.

DISTRIBUTORS
We would like to know in every case the distributors that are involved in connection with each dealer's account. When this form is reprinted a space will be provided to show the name of the distributor. In the meantime, include this information in the block "Merchandise to be Financed".

REMARKS ON REVERSE
Where a dealer is signed up at his own place of business, particular attention should be paid to the kind of store the dealer is operating and the impression received as to ability to operate successfully, class of paper expected, etc. The new business man can supply invaluable information to the Credit Department in appraising an account.

SUBJECT PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT

TOPIC NOTE - AGREEMENT

 Date 9-1-67

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT FINANCING - APPLICATION AND NOTE" Dated 11-26-57

Extensive revisions have been made to our Property Improvement Note (form #19-913 Rev. 9/67) to comply with the new Georgia "Retail Installment and Home Solicitation Sales Act." Changes have also been made to make this instrument more readily acceptable and more flexible from the standpoint of recording.

NOTE - AGREEMENT
This is a dual purpose instrument which if recorded on the Public Real Estate Records does not create a lien, but gives notice that a debt related to the property exists. Generally, any attorney handling the closing of the sale of the property would advise that the debt be paid rather than risk litigation.

Additionally, the wording retains a security interest in the "goods" being financed, classifies them as removable personalty, and qualifies as a Financing Statement, which may be filed on the Personal Property Records with instructions to "cross index" to the Real Estate Records.

Before handling any phase of a Property Improvement transaction, it is essential that this instrument be carefully read and completely understood.

WHEN TO RECORD AND/OR FILE
Whether or not to record the Property Improvement Note on the Real Estate Records and/or file it as a Financing Statement is a matter of credit judgment on each transaction, considering the need for strengthening what would otherwise be a completely unsecured obligation.

Generally, the note should be recorded if -

1) the total note amount exceeds $1,500, or

2) there is reason to believe that the property might be sold during the term of repayment, i.e. customer subject to transfer, or

3) collection problems and deterioration of credit are encountered.

Whenever possible the note should be recorded on the Real Estate Records. If this is not possible, the note may be recorded as a financing statement. However, a financing statement merely protects against other creditors and does not assure us that we will be paid in the event the property is sold. Therefore, on larger and/or more hazardous transactions it may be advisable to obtain a deed to secure debt and file as a second mortgage.

WHERE TO RECORD AND/OR FILE

The note should be recorded in the Real Estate Records and/or filed as a Financing Statement in the Office of the Clerk of Superior Court of the county in which the land is located.

There have been some instances where Clerks of Court have been reluctant to record these notes on the Real Estate Records for various reasons. The new note provides for a brief "legal description" of the property for use in areas where the Clerk insists on having this information.

REQUIREMENTS FOR RECORDING AND/OR FILING

To be admissible to either record, the document to be recorded must carry original signatures.

For the Real Estate recording to be effective, the note must be executed as a deed to land, i.e., there must be two witnesses to the customer's signature, one of whom must be a notary public who must affix his seal and date of expiration of office. The snap-out set of forms provides for two bank copies. The "Bank-Original" should be sent out for recording and the "Bank-Duplicate" be retained pending return of the original from the Clerk of Court.

For filing as a Financing Statement both customer and dealer must sign and the addresses of each must be entered and all blanks must be completed, particularly descriptions of the goods to be used in the improvement, description of the land to be improved and the name of record owner or lessee of that land. The Clerk must have two additional copies for filing as a Financing Statement, one to retain and one on which to enter filing data and return to you. Consequently additional copies must be made for this purpose or separate standard forms of Financing Statements (form #19-891) taken. In transmitting to the Clerk, instruct him to file as a Financing Statement covering removable fixtures and to cross-index to the real estate records.

APPLICATION

In the initial printing of the three-part note form, time did not permit incorporating a customer application. This will be incorporated in subsequent printings. In the meantime, until your supply is exhausted, you may continue to use the application portion only of the old contract. Do not use the old note. When your supply is exhausted, it will be necessary to use the "Confidential Statement" that is used with the Sales Finance Automobile dealers.

ORDERING FORMS

The Property Improvement Note (#19-913 Rev. 9/67) should be requisitioned from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta in the usual manner.

SUBJECT REPAIR PLAN

TOPIC

 Date 9-1-67

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - REPAIR PLAN" Dated 10-1-56

While repair plan business is not profitable in itself, because of the usual small balances involved, a plan to handle financing of the dealer's larger repair orders is part of the normal selling package when soliciting automobile and farm equipment paper from dealers.

TYPE OF INSTRUMENT
The repair note (form # 19-866) is a combination security agreement and note. This instrument has been revised to conform to recent legislation affecting the sale of goods and services.

RECORDING
The repair note itself is not a recordable document. However, in most cases, you will have already perfected your interest in the collateral by filing a Financing Statement or by getting on the Title under the Title Act. In the event you are not financing the collateral to be improved, you should inform the dealer that he should file a Financing Statement or file as a lienholder under the Title Act if he so desires.

Be sure to cross reference ledger cards to insure that the original contract is held until the repair note is paid in full.

TERMS
Repair Plan Notes should carry a maximum maturity of 12 months. Encourage shorter maturities whenever possible, particularly on seasonal Notes.

A down payment is not required, if the equipment being repaired has sufficient equity to cover the additional advance.

DEALER LIABILITY
Repair Plan Notes should only be handled with the full recourse endorsement of a responsible dealer. The assignment on this instrument is a full recourse assignment.

PURCHASE REQUIREMENTS
An extensive credit investigation is not necessary since Repair Plan Notes are handled on a full recourse basis and will come from dealers with whom you are already doing business. In most cases, you will already have an account with the customer covering purchase of the automobile or equipment from the dealer. Where this is true, the only investigation necessary is a check through your files. Prior lien holders should be contacted for their experience.

CLASSIFICATION
Because the percentage of repair plan business will be small in relation to any dealer's outstanding, classify in the same manner as the major portion of the outstanding, i.e., Auto, Farm, etc.

Each Repair Plan transaction should be identified in the collateral section of the discount thusly: '61 Chevrolet - Repairs - A1C#12345 (cross reference to original contract number).

SUBJECT SUBSTITUTION AGREEMENT

TOPIC

 Date 7-23-65

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - SUBSTITUTION AGREEMENT" Dated 10-31-56

The Substitution Agreement reproduced below has been revised some time ago to conform to the Uniform Commercial Code.

Appliance dealers, particularly, frequently exchange merchandise because of mechanical difficulties or customer preference, without changing the original time payment schedule. In these instances, there is no security interest against the new merchandise unless a new instrument is taken. Your dealers should be supplied with a small quantity of this form and be instructed to obtain a Substitution Agreement whenever merchandise covered by a Conditional Sales Contract is exchanged and the original time schedule remains the same. Outside adjustors should also be supplied with the form so that they may protect both the bank and the dealer's interest if they find substituted merchandise during the course of their collection calls and physical verifications.

PERFECTION The same rules govern the perfection of a security interest in the new merchandise as apply to any conditional sale. See Operating Guide Bulletin: "LENDING GENERAL - PERFECTING SECURITY INTERESTS - POLICY".

PROCEDURE When the Substitution Agreement is received from the dealer, it should be attached to the original Conditional Sales Contract in the Note file. The customer's Ledger Card and the Wheeldex Card should reflect the change of collateral, in ink.

Line through the old merchandise and write in the new (including serial number) and show the date of the Substitution Agreement. It will not be necessary to order a new Payment Card Book.

ORDERING FORMS The Substitution Agreement (19-694) may be requisitioned from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta, in the normal manner.

SUBJECT UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE

TOPIC DEALER RELATIONS

 Date 3-30-65

New Bulletin

In the purchase or discount of retail contracts, it is not necessary to file a financing statement if possession of the chattel paper itself is taken. This possession of the chattel paper is subordinate to a prior security interest only if possession was taken with knowledge of the prior security interest, or taken other than in the normal course of business.

Most lenders handling floorplan for dealers will file financing statements covering the floorplan. These statements may be in limited form or quite inclusive; i.e., they may cover (1) inventory of a specific nature only, (2) all inventory, (3) inventory and proceeds, or (4) inventory, proceeds, and chattel paper. Also, it is probable that some may file a financing statement covering chattel paper only. Our approach has been to file a financing statement on all dealers for whom we handle floorplan, limited to the floorplan only, unless individual circumstances indicate the need for a more inclusive statement.

When two or more secured creditors claim an interest in inventory, the first to file a financing statement takes priority with the following exception. A purchase money security interest in inventory takes priority over previously perfected security interest, if the one taking the purchase money security interest gives notice to the prior secured party of the intent to acquire that interest and a financing statement is filed before the inventory is delivered to the borrower.

RETAIL Our policy is not to file a financing statement covering chattel paper.

1. It is not necessary to check the records in the clerk of court's office or take any other action to determine whether or not some other lending institution has filed a financing statement. Our security interest in the chattel paper we purchase or discount is a perfected security interest providing we take possession without knowledge of a conflicting interest.

2. If we receive actual knowledge that another party has a security interest in the chattel paper itself (not merely as a part of proceeds), we must take specific steps to protect our interest before we begin or in order to continue discounting chattel paper. Knowledge may be received by direct notice from another security interest holder, the chattel paper having been branded or marked, our actual viewing of a financing statement on record (this may occur when we handle wholesale), notice from a reporting agency, or advice of the fact from the dealer himself. Once we obtain knowledge that the chattel paper is pledged to another, we should:

   (1) Determine and list collateral covered in the financing statement on file.

   (2) Call on the dealer and discuss the advantages of our approach.

In such cases, the dealer may not have understood all that would result from the security agreement he signed, and will want to correct it immediately by doing one of the following:

(1) Contact the creditor and obtain a full or partial release of collateral (specifically chattel paper) and have it filed to clear the record.

(2) Obtain from the creditor a letter subordinating to us their security interest in the chattel paper purchased by us.

Unless the dealer is weak financially, we can continue discounting retail paper for a reasonable period of time to permit one of the above arrangements to be made by the dealer. A close follow-up must be maintained to assure that a proper release is filed or that we obtain the letter of subordination.

WHOLESALE Our policy is to file a financing statement covering the type inventory we will floorplan. On established dealers, we have filed and have also checked the clerk of court's records to determine if another creditor has filed a financing statement. On prospective dealers we will check for other filings before the line is established and file a financing statement ourselves.

1. If we are the first to file, no further action is required to protect our interest in the wholesale. It is important to keep in mind that our financing statement(s) on file must cover all of the types of inventory we floorplan.

2. If another creditor has filed a financing statement prior to ours:

   (1) Immediately send a letter to the creditor advising of our intent to acquire purchase money security interests in the types of inventory we intend to floorplan. After sending this letter, we may floorplan only inventory in which we have a purchase money security interest. We will not be able to advance money on units the dealer already has on his floor.

   (2) Follow with the dealer to get the prior security interest cleared of record if possible, or if not, the interest must be subordinated to ours.

3. If we learn of another creditor filing subsequent to the time of our filing, we must follow to determine if this represents a split in floorplan and, if so, sell the dealer on permitting us to handle his entire requirements.

OPERATING BULLETIN

SECTION SALES FINANCE

SUBJECT UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE

TOPIC RETAIL

 Date 4-13-65

Very little change in our existing procedures was necessitated by the Uniform Commercial Code. The various legal forms in use were revised only where necessary and the changes in existing procedures were made, to take advantage of the additional privileges permitted for the benefit of the bank and the dealer. Additional privileges to benefit the bank at the dealers' expense were not taken.

While our various plans of operation continue with the same basic rights and privileges to both the dealer and the bank, certain provisions of the law must be understood and the procedures set out therein followed in our handling of retail discount.

There are two areas to be considered in determining our collateral protection as related to conflicting interests. First, our rights in the chattel paper (conditional sales contracts or notes); and secondly, our rights in the merchandise which is sold to the retail customer.

RIGHTS IN THE CHATTEL PAPER There are two methods by which we can perfect our interest in chattel paper: (a) by taking possession of the chattel paper; or, (b) by filing a financing statement covering the chattel paper.

In all of our dealer relations we take physical possession of the chattel paper when we purchase or discount it, and therefore our security interest in the paper itself is perfected in the best possible manner. When we perfect our interest by taking possession, we have a claim superior to others even though they may have perfected by filing a financing statement prior to the time we took possession. The only time that we would not come ahead of a prior perfected security interest holder would be when we had actual knowledge of the prior interest. Actual knowledge may occur by the conditional sales contracts being stamped or otherwise branded to show the prior interest, or by our receiving direct notification of the prior interest. When such knowledge is received, we must obtain a release from the prior secured party or discontinue purchasing or discounting contracts for that dealer.

IMPORTANT - Each contract purchased should be examined to be sure that it is not branded to show another's interest.

RIGHTS IN THE MERCHANDISE SOLD TO THE RETAIL CUSTOMER As discussed in the bulletin: Lending General - Uniform Commercial Code - General, classification of the collateral, as well as its intended usage, will determine the method of perfecting a security interest. It is of equal advantage to the dealer and the bank, that we take reasonable precautions to protect against potential claims in the collateral by third parties.

AUTOMOBILE AND MOBILE HOME DEALERS Conditional sales contracts originating from these dealers will generally cover vehicles governed by the Georgia Motor Vehicle Title Act. Steps and procedures to perfect or otherwide protect our interest in such collateral is discussed in the bulletin: Lending General - Georgia Motor Vehicle Title Act.

APPLIANCE, FURNITURE, BOAT AND MOTOR DEALERS The merchandise sold by these dealers will most often be consumer goods. The fact that the security interest in these consumer goods arises under a conditional sales contract establishes that it is a purchase money security interest. A purchase money security interest in consumer goods is perfected without filing a financing statement, with two exceptions (motor vehicles and fixtures). These exceptions will infrequently affect our purchases from this type dealer. Therefore, as a matter of practice, we will not file financing statements on contracts when we are perfected by a purchase money security interest.

Occasionally, sales by this type dealer will involve consumer goods which are to become "fixtures"; or, goods which will be used for business purposes and thus will be "equipment" rather than consumer goods.

(a) If the collateral becomes a fixture, the purchase money feature does not perfect and it is necessary to file a financing statement to do so. The financing statement must show the description of the real estate and be filed in the County Clerk's office where a mortgage on the real estate would be recorded.

(b) If the collateral is for business use (this will be indicated on the conditional sales contract by a check mark in the block indicating business), it will be necessary to file a financing statement to perfect.

For detailed policy on perfecting in these type situations, refer to Operating Guide Bulletin - Lending General - Perfecting Security Interest - Policy.

FARM EQUIPMENT DEALERS It will be best to consider conditional sales contracts from these dealers as falling into one of two groups, determined by the selling price of the equipment covered.

(a) Farm equipment with a selling price (cash price, plus time price differential) of $2500 or less. As in consumer goods, a purchase money security interest will be a perfected security interest and it will not be necessary to file a financing statement.

(b) Farm equipment with a selling price (cash price, plus time price differential) of over $2500. Our purchase money interest will protect us to the extent that we have 10 days in which to file a financing statement, however, we must file a financing statement within the 10 day period to have a continuously perfected security interest.

BUSINESS EQUIPMENT OR OTHER EQUIPMENT DEALERS Most contracts developed from such sources will cover equipment, as opposed to consumer goods, and it will be necessary to file a financing statement to perfect a security interest in such collateral.

PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT DEALERS Most contracts will represent unsecured notes. We can gain substantial protection by recording these notes on the real estate records in the county in which the property is located. Refer to Operating Guide Bulletin: Sales Finance - Property Improvement Financing - Application and Note.

One change, as a result of the Code, is the more specific privilege of taking a security interest in and reclaiming fixtures. For this reason, our note grants a security interest in identifiable goods described on the note. Usage of this may be somewhat restricted, because to have such a security interest take priority over an existing mortgage holder, it is necessary that a financing statement on the fixtures be filed before the fixture is attached. (There is considerable question whether such a claim could be supported against a mortgage holder of record, prior to the effective date of the Code). However, even though we file after the fixture is attached, we will come ahead of future interests in the real estate. Such a financing statement must contain a description of the real estate and be filed in the Clerk's office where a mortgage on the real estate would be filed.

CEMETERY AND OTHER DEALER RELATIONS WHERE AN UNSECURED TYPE NOTE IS BEING HANDLED We have no security interest in collateral held by the buyer and no action is needed to perfect. However, on these dealers, we still must observe each contract or note discounted, to be sure that it is not branded or marked to indicate a prior security interest in the paper itself.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - WHOLESALE - DEALER WHOLESALE APPLICATION & SIGNATURE AUTHORIZATION" Dated 2-14-61

Few of our wholesale procedures were altered as a result of the Uniform Commercial Code; however, the methods of perfecting a security interest in wholesale collateral have been changed and they are set forth in the following paragraphs. This bulletin applies to all dealers located in Georgia. When considering floorplanning in other states, clear with System Consumer Credit, Atlanta, for requirements, procedures and forms applicable to the state involved.

In the past, we did not record floorplan instruments. Now, under the Code, exposure is increased and we must perfect our interest by filing a Financing Statement in all cases. Because of the greater exposure from tax claims and lien creditors, other secured parties will file much more frequently. Financing Statements relating to inventory will seldom apply to specific items but most often items of a specified kind or will be "all inclusive". The first to file will have priority in any claim to the collateral with one exception.

The one exception is, that although another secured creditor has filed a Financing Statement on a dealer's inventory or any part thereof, we can establish a preferred position on certain items if we meet all of the following conditions:

(1) We have a purchase money security interest in the collateral.

(2) We give notice to the prior secured creditor, before the dealer receives the merchandise, in satisfactory form (see sample letter on page 2).

(3) We file a Financing Statement before the dealer receives the merchandise.

When we are the first to perfect, with respect to after acquired inventory, others can take priority over us in the same manner.

PERFECTING A SECURITY INTEREST To perfect our security interest we must:

(1) File a Financing Statement in the clerk of court's office. Generally, this should be filed in the county where the dealer has his primary place of business. If the dealer has a place of business in two or more counties and there is any question as to the primary place of business, file in each county. If, however, the dealer does business in his individual name or under a trade style, file in the county of his residence.

   a. When filing in more than one county, use a separate Financing Statement (19-891) for each county.

(2) Determine if any other party has a Financing Statement on file covering the type collateral we intend to floorplan. This can be done only by checking the records in the clerk of court's office in the county where you plan to file your Financing Statement. Each clerk will keep alphabetical indexes by name of debtor on all filings. Remember that each dealer warrants in our Security Agreement that there are no Financing Statements already on file. This question must be expressly asked of each dealer.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - WHOLESALE - DEALER WHOLESALE APPLICATION & SIGNATURE AUTHORIZATION" Dated 2-14-61

If another statement is on file prior to ours, one of these three steps must be followed:

(1) Satisfy the prior security interest holder and be positive that a termination statement is filed. (If the debt is satisfied, but no termination statement filed, the prior creditor could make future advances and take priority over us.)

(2) Give written notice (see illustration below) to the prior secured party of our intent to obtain purchase money security interest in certain types of inventory. This will protect us only on the items in which we could establish a purchase money interest. NOTE THAT FURTHER TRANSACTIONS CAN BE HANDLED ON THE BASIS OF THIS LETTER ONLY IF WE HAVE A PURCHASE MONEY SECURITY INTEREST.

(3) Discontinue our wholesale line.

Such inventory collateral consists or will consist of types or items of property described as follows: _____

After sending this letter, the decision as to future handling must be made with emphasis on the dealer permitting us to handle his entire banking relationship. Split floorplan has never been condoned, and now it is even more important that we not permit such an arrangement.

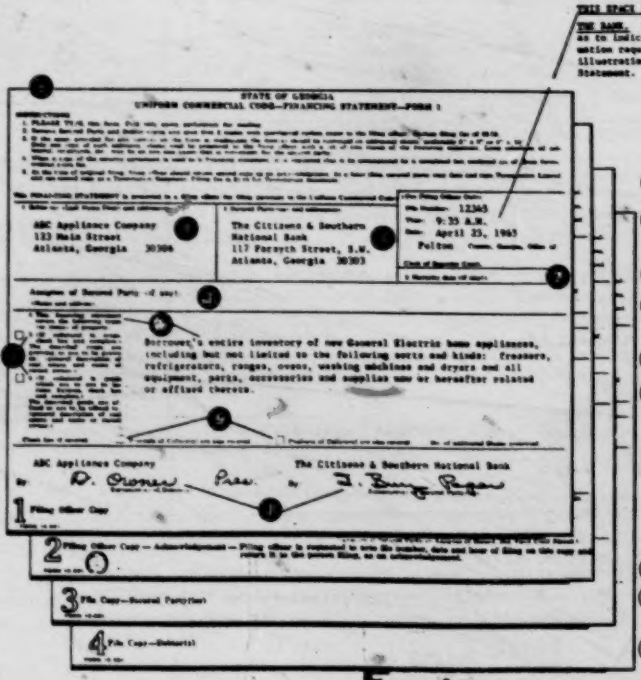
FLOORPLAN FORMS AND AGREEMENTS FOR USE UNDER THE CODE

DEALER WHOLESALE APPLICATION (19-939). This form is no longer to be used for dealers located in Georgia or any state which has adopted the Uniform Commercial Code.

FINANCING STATEMENT (19-891). This form must be obtained from each dealer and filed to provide us with a perfected security interest in the described collateral. Completing this form is simple, but care must be exercised. Follow the "Instructions" at the top of the form for proper distribution and use of the four parts of this form. Filing fee is $2.50.



Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - WHOLESALE - DEALER WHOLESALE APPLICATION & SIGNATURE AUTHORIZATION" Dated 2-14-61

SECURITY AGREEMENT, Retail Inventory - Floorplan - (19-939 Revised 1/64.) This form has replaced the DEALER WHOLESALE APPLICATION (19-939) and now includes a "Signature Authorization" for use at the time the dealer is first set up (see illustration on page 5).

This form must be obtained from each dealer for whom we floorplan. Only one will have to be obtained from the dealer, unless the description of the type or category of collateral is changed. This Security Agreement gives us an interest only in the type of inventory described which is being purchased from a distributor or manufacturer in the dealer's normal operation. If the dealer changes his line or adds a new one which we are to floorplan, a new Security Agreement must be obtained.

The Security Agreement must be properly completed and signed. The description of the goods should be specific as to type but not overreaching - i.e.

> "Borrower's entire inventory of new General Electric home appliances, including but not limited to the following sorts and kinds: freezers, refrigerators, ranges, ovens, washing machines and dryers; and, all equipment, parts, accessories and supplies now or hereafter related or affixed thereto."

This description may be expanded to include all makes and models, such as:

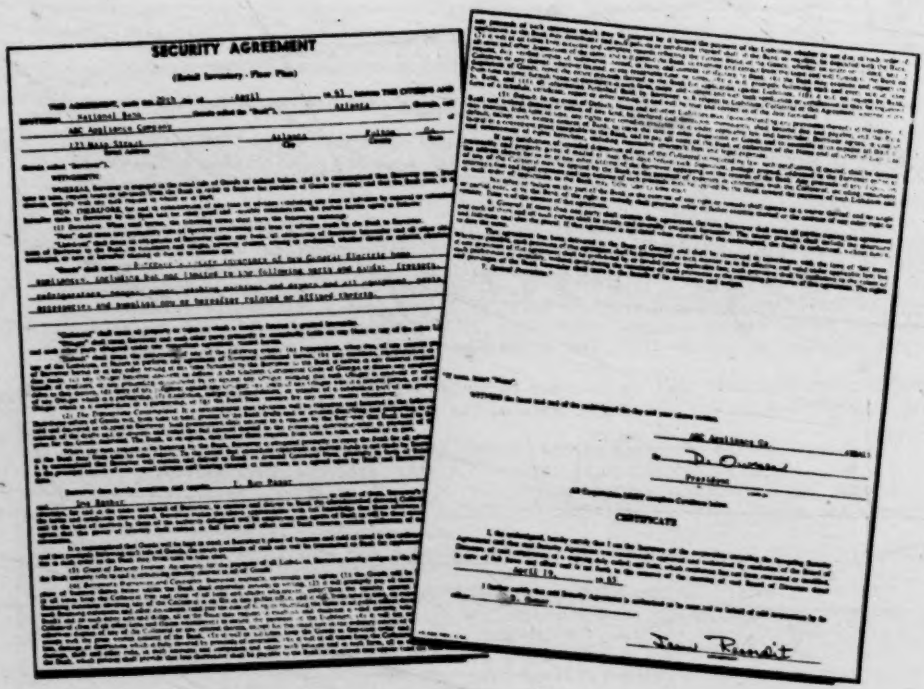
> "Borrower's entire inventory of new and used appliances and electronic equipment, including but not limited to the following sorts and kinds: ranges, refrigerators, freezers, air-conditioners, hot water heaters, washers, dryers, televisions, record players and radios; and, all equipment, parts, accessories and supplies now or hereafter affixed thereto."

The degree to which we wish to tie up the dealer's inventory must be governed by the relative strength of the dealer and the consideration of any competitive disadvantage.

If a situation develops in which we need greater protection, we may claim proceeds by adding in the space provided for special provisions in paragraph 7 of this Security Agreement, the following ---

> "Paragraph (3) hereof is amended to read as follows --- Grant of Security Interest. As security for the payment of all Liabilities, Borrower hereby assigns to the Bank, and grants to the Bank security title to and a continuing security interest in all goods together with all proceeds arising out of their sale or other disposition, including but not limited to monies, items, instruments, documents, chattel paper and accounts."

Whenever such an addition is made, we should have the borrower initial the addition.



SECURITY AGREEMENT

(Retail Inventory - Floor Plan)

ABC Appliance Co.

CERTIFICATE

Before taking this additional protection, we should consider not only the improved collateral protection but also the business retention aspect. If we attempt to over-secure ourselves, we will give competition an additional selling advantage.

NOTE - Exhibit "A" (The Collateral Note - Floorplan) should be attached to each Security Agreement.

- Whenever possible, arrangements should provide for us to make wholesale disbursements directly to the distributor or manufacturer, thus supporting our purchase money interest.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - WHOLESALE - DEALER WHOLESALE APPLICATION & SIGNATURE AUTHORIZATION" Dated 2-14-61

SECURITY AGREEMENT, Equipment and Inventory (19-908, Rev. 1/64). In floorplan financing, there may be times when it is not possible to pay a distributor or manufacturer for the inventory floorplanned. For example, when signing up a dealer who has previously been flooring with another lender or when a dealer pays the distributor or manufacturer directly and then requests that the merchandise be floorplanned with us. In such cases, particularly when disbursement is made directly to the dealer, the dealer must sign a Note and Security Agreement for each invoice involved even though we normally operate under a Signature Authorization with that dealer.

In all such instances, do not use the Security Agreement (Retail-Inventory Floorplan) since it does not offer the necessary protection. Instead, use Security Agreement (Equipment and Inventory), 19-908. If no equipment is to be pledged, the word "none" should be typed in the space near the top of this form (see illustration on page 7). Wording of this agreement itself conveys a security interest in all inventory. For competitive reasons, we may wish to limit the security interest to specific types of inventory which we will floorplan. This may be done by entering a special provision in the space provided on the reverse of the agreement and headed "Additional Provisions Of Agreement". Such wording as the following may be entered:

"IT IS UNDERSTOOD AND AGREED THAT "GOODS AND PROPERTY" IN WHICH THIS SECURITY AGREEMENT CONVEYS A SECURITY INTEREST IS LIMITED TO BORROWER'S ENTIRE INVENTORY OF PHILCO HOME APPLIANCES, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO THE FOLLOWING SORTS AND KINDS: FREEZERS, REFRIGERATORS, RANGES, OVENS, WASHING MACHINES AND DRYERS AND ALL EQUIPMENT, PARTS, ACCESSORIES AND SUPPLIES NOW OR HEREAFTER RELATED OR AFFIXED THERETO."

Whenever any such "Additional Provisions" are made, the borrower or dealer should initial both at the beginning and at the end of the provision.

When floorplanning and disbursing directly to the dealer, a copy of the invoice unquestionably marked "paid" must be obtained. If any question remains, verification that the dealer has made payment in full should be made with the supplier concerned. The hazard involved is obvious - the dealer may have purchased the merchandise from the supplier on "open account" and then floorplanned with us, thus "double financing" the merchandise.

COLLATERAL NOTE - FLOORPLAN, (19-868, Rev. 1/64). This is a revision of the old Wholesale Note - Bill of Sale to Secure Debt - and will be used in the same manner as in the past. One will be prepared on each individual order and can be signed by a Bank employee authorized in the Security Agreement or in a subsequent Signature Authorization. The Wholesale Ledger Sheet on the reverse side will be completed and maintained as set forth in the Operating Guide Bulletin - ACCOUNTING - WHOLESALE - NEW LOANS.

(1) Be sure to fill-in "NONE" if no equipment is to be taken.

SIGNATURE AUTHORIZATION (19-840, Rev. 1/64). The use of a Signature Authorization form to eliminate the necessity of a dealer signing a Note and Security Agreement for each invoice floorplanned has been our standard practice for many years. Now, the Security Agreement, Retail Inventory - Floorplan (19-939), contains a signature authorization. It is therefore not necessary to obtain a separate authorization at the time the dealer signs the above Security Agreement. Use this separate Signature Authorization (illustrated below) in the event of changes of bank personnel after the original Security Agreement is signed.

NOTE - Do not use this form when the Equipment - Inventory Security Agreement (19-908) is used. This Agreement requires the dealer's signature in all cases.

The Signature Authorization is to be used for all dealers and only one such form need be signed per dealer, regardless of the number of suppliers involved. In the case of incorporated dealers, the Authorization must be signed by an officer of the corporation and the "Certificate" on the reverse must be properly completed.

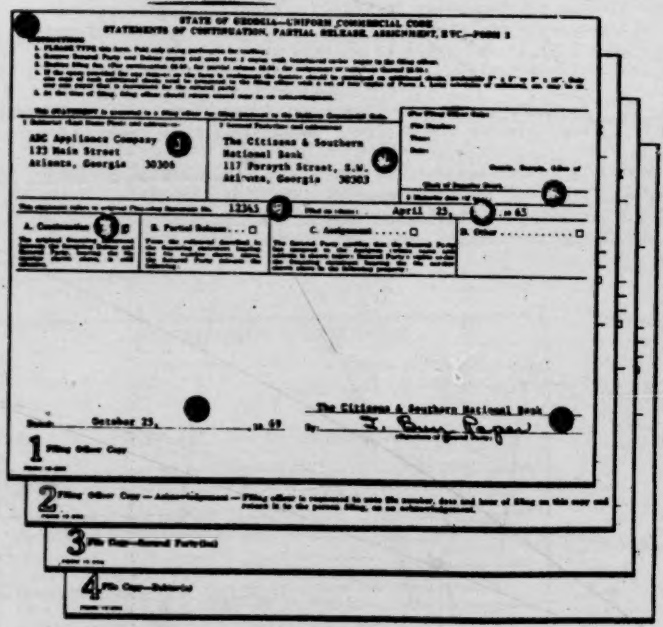
CONTINUATION STATEMENT (19-892). This is the instrument to be used in continuing our perfection upon expiration of the original Financing Statement. For follow-up of filing Continuation Statements, the latest date that our statement was filed should be noted in each individual dealer file. As future ADL's are prepared, show under Wholesale Comments the date our statement was filed. Follow the "Instructions" at the top of the form for proper distribution and use of the four parts of this form. Filing fee for Continuation is $2.50.



1. Type in the Dealer's and the Bank's name and complete mailing address.
2. Maturity Date - Leave blank - do not fill-in. (When this space is not completed, our filing will give us continued protection for a second 5 year period.
3. Financing Statement Number and Filed On (date). These two items are to be taken from the information placed on the original Financing Statement by the County (see illustration on page 3).
4. Mark for Continuation.
5. Only the Bank need sign.
6. A Continuation Statement may be filed at any time within the six months preceding the expiration of the original Financing Statement By filing within this period, we assure that our protection is continuous.
7. Follow the "Instructions" at the top of the form for proper distribution and use of the four parts of this form.

TERMINATION STATEMENT If for any reason we cease to floorplan for a dealer, we want to release our filing after all of our Wholesale floorplan has been liquidated.

To do this it will be necessary to use, as a Termination Statement, the blue second copy of the original Financing Statement. Date and sign the Termination Statement and return to the county where it was filed together with the fee of $1.00. It is essential that this blue copy of the original Financing Statement be kept in the Dealer File when it is returned so that we can release our perfection when necessary.

OTHER FORMS Other forms pertaining to wholesale financing have not been affected by the Code and their use is discussed in related Operating Guide Bulletins covering wholesale.

FACTORY AUTOMOBILE RELEASES Clearance of drafts drawn on the bank by automobile factories necessitate its own handling procedures. Each automobile manufacturer requires the use of different special letters, from both the dealer and the bank, to initiate factory clearance. All requests for such arrangements should be cleared through the System Consumer Credit Department, Atlanta, so that proper procedures and forms will be used.

New Bulletin

Generally speaking, wholesale is extended to dealers that require financing of inventory until the related merchandise is sold -- arbitrarily collecting the balance due at any given time may either impair the dealer's ability to operate or force him to borrow elsewhere. Neither of these alternatives is desirable for a dealer account that is in good standing with us.

Again we would like to emphasize our policy. Dealers should be followed closely to sell merchandise before it is six months old. Where merchandise passes the six month age, continue to collect curtailments and continue to apply pressure to sell the old merchandise but do not ask for a pay off with the merchandise still on hand. This policy applies to dealers in good standing with us and is on the assumption that the merchandise is worth the remaining balance.

CURTAILMENTS Our wholesale plans call for automatic billing of curtailments at regular intervals as protection against model changes and/or price reductions. In addition, the regular curtailments serve to keep merchandise turning over on the dealers floor becuase his investment is gradually being increased. Judgement should be used, however, and upon request, curtailments may be waived where the payment would cause hardship and where the merchandise secures the remaining balance.

STATEMENT OF WHOLESALE CURTAILMENTS As a means of control and follow-up, show the date of the note in the space provided for "note number" in addition to showing the note number. Use your copy of the statement to discuss old items with your dealers as a means of getting the merchandise sold.

AMOUNT OF CURTAILMENT It has been our policy generally to collect 10% on each curtailment based on the reduced balance each time. This practice is in vogue with competing finance companies and banks. Some of you have been collecting 10% of the original balance on the invoice each time, however, and have reported no adverse criticism from your dealers as a result. Purely from an operating standpoint, it is preferable to collect 10% of the original balance each time. Those of you that have been collecting on the reducing balance may change to collecting on the original balance each time, if the change can be made without disturbing good dealer accounts. Please let me know of your dealer reaction.

EVEN DOLLARS As floorplan notes are set up, all items carried on floorplan should be adjusted so that the original balance due is in even dollars. Curtailments should be adjusted to the nearest dollar so that we do not have the extra detail of posting cents in connection with wholesale financing.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - WHOLESALE - CHECKING RECORD" - Dated 1-28-47

The "Record of Wholesale Checking" form #19-976, Rev. 3-66, is designed to assist you in wholesale control. The purpose of this form is to maintain an up-to-date analysis of a dealer's performance on wholesale. Losses can be avoided if wholesale checks are made with the proper frequency, made correctly, and if the results are analyzed.

HOW OFTEN TO CHECK It is impossible to provide a yardstick for frequency of wholesale checks that will apply to all dealers, however, all dealers should be checked at least once a month. Some of these dealers, depending upon their general credit and past performance on wholesale, should be checked more frequently. Review each dealer, determine the wholesale checking frequency, and enter it in this space. Once this is done, the frequency of wholesale checking becomes an automatic procedure. If circumstances arise that dictate a change in checking frequency, make the necessary change on the "Record of Wholesale Checking."

DEALER Show the dealer's complete name in this space.

DATE SENT - DATE CHECKED The date sent is entered at the time the wholesale checking report is prepared and the date checked is entered after it is returned. These dates are important as a measure of your own performance in checking wholesale. Wherever possible, wholesale inventories should be checked on the same day the wholesale checking report is prepared. Any delay in handling after the report is prepared may result in an incomplete inventory check being made and will make it possible for the dealer to cover up a "float."

CHECKED BY A record must be maintained of who completes each wholesale check. One person should not check a dealer's floorplan more than four consecutive times.

DATE REVIEWED This is the date the completed wholesale check was actually compared with the ledger for discrepancies. It is important that there should be no delay between the time the wholesale checker completes the check and the time it is completely reviewed. If there are discrepancies, prompt action must be taken.

REVIEWED BY Two people should always complete each wholesale check -- One person preparing and reviewing after completion; the other taking the actual physical inventory.

CASH SALES The adjustor should collect for all cash sales at the time of the wholesale check. As the number of days delay in payment is computed on the wholesale checking report, insert into the proper columns the total number of cash sales and also insert in the "Number of Days Delay" column the number falling into that specific category.

CONTRACT SALES The adjustor should pick up contracts on those that are classified as C&S contract sales. The number of days delay on these should be entered just as they are on cash sales.

DEMONSTRATORS Use the same procedure as on cash sales and C&S contract sales. If a unit has been on demonstration more than five days at the time of the wholesale check the adjustor should collect the balance. If this is not done, follow-up must be made to insure that the unit is returned to the dealer's floor or paid off. The day it is returned or paid off, is the day to be used in the computation of days delay. Enter the results in the same manner as cash sales and C&S Contract Sales.

OTHER EXCEPTIONS This category covers all exceptions other than those above. Examples would be -- "Returned to distributor"; "Serial number incorrect, new s/a obtained"; etc. The number of days the unit has been off the floor should be computed on the wholesale checking report, and the date the unit left the dealer's floor should be shown on the"Record of Wholesale Checking".

FINAL DISPOSITION After all spaces have been used, file Record of Wholesale Checking in the dealer credit file for future reference.

TOPIC CHECKING REPORT

 Date 6-15-66

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - WHOLESALE - CHECKING REPORT" - Dated 4-1-57

Our "Wholesale Checking Report" form (19-963 Rev. 5/66) has been revised to provide spaces for all information necessary to insure proper checking and control of wholesale.

PROPER HANDLING IS MANDATORY Proper checking of wholesale inventories is the control that makes it possible to lend money on floorplan on a more liberal basis than other types of lending. The necessity for proper handling cannot be over-emphasized. On some of the stronger dealer accounts, exceptions might be made without danger of loss, but to start making exceptions to proper safeguards is to invite losses.

PREPARATION OF WHOLESALE CHECK Use form "Wholesale Checking Report" (19-963 Rev. 5/66) illustrated on page 2. From the Wholesale Ledger, list the items to be checked in the space provided. Space is provided for both the note date and note number. Both should be used to assist in the identification of individual items.

1. Add any items recently floorplanned on which wholesale ledger sheets have not been made. Also add any automobile drafts outstanding but not floorplanned.

2. Omit the last digit of the identifying number, i.e., 1645_. Checker will fill out this number from the merchandise. Enter date wholesale check is prepared on form #19-976, "Record of Wholesale Checking." Give the Wholesale Checking Report to outside collector to make the physical inventory.

3. Type total balance outstanding in the space indicated.

DUTIES OF CHECKER Checker must complete the check promptly. The Wholesale Checking Report has printed instructions for the checker which must be followed. After completion, the report is to be returned to the man in charge of wholesale in the local office.

INSIDE HANDLING OF WHOLESALE CHECKING REPORT Immediately upon receipt of Wholesale Checking Report, compare numbers secured by checker with those in Wholesale Ledger. Record irregularities and other pertinent information as wholesale checks are verified to the ledger. Any pertinent information appearing on the wholesale check should be noted in the space provided under each item i.e., 1-26-66 - on demo J. Smith; 1-26-66 serial number reported as 16267; 1-26-66 sold 1-24 cont. in bank; 1-26-66 sold 1-20; 1-26-66 mileage 112; etc.,etc.

Handling in this fashion acts as a double check in case the wholesale check gets misplaced before irregularities are cleared up and is also valuable as subsequent wholesale checks are verified to the ledger.

TOPIC CHECKING REPORT

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - WHOLESALE - CHECKING REPORT" - Dated 4-1-57

The wholesale ledger sheet should at all times reflect the exact status of the merchandise covered. When the check is in order in all respects, the person reviewing the report should complete the necessary entries to the "Record of Wholesale Checking", initial and date the "Wholesale Checking Report" in the appropriate space.

SOLD AND UNPAID The checker has instructions to call the office if he is unable to collect for any missing items. If it is necessary to delay collection, ledger sheets should be immediately marked under each item to indicate that it is sold and the date it was sold. It is the responsibility of the Officer-in-Charge to hold the Wholesale Checking Report on his desk until sold items are collected, and proper action has been taken, if unusual delays in getting payoffs occur.

SLOW PAYMENT OF WHOLESALE Our Standard Wholesale Plan calls for merchandise to be paid for as soon as it leaves the dealer's place of business, subject to a reasonable time necessary to clear through the dealer's bookkeeping procedure. The checker must obtain the date sold in all cases. Any delay in paying over three (3) days must be discussed with dealer. Repeated delays after such discussion lead to the consideration of removing the wholesale line of credit.

UNPAID PENDING INSTALLATION Dealers sometimes wish to delay payments until they have collected from their customers. Normally this should not be permitted. A dealer should have sufficient working capital to handle his own sales in progress.

Payments may be delayed pending installation where we hold a conditional sales contract sufficient to cover the wholesale balance. Wholesale ledger sheet should be so marked.

ITEMS "ON DEMONSTRATION" Too frequently merchandise "on demonstration" remains away from the dealer's store in excess of the time required for demonstration. Without proper control, merchandise which has been sold may be reported to be on demonstration to avoid prompt payment. Under normal conditions, five (5) days is a sufficient demonstration period and the checker should collect the balance due in full for items having been on demonstration longer than this period. In all cases, the checker should obtain both the date the item went out on demonstration and the name and address where it is being demonstrated. If too great a number of items are on demonstration in any one month, or if the same items appear on demonstration two months in succession, the checker should verify each item at the locations where demonstrated and another complete wholesale check should be made within five (5) days, physically verifying each item on demonstration.

DIFFERENCES IN IDENTIFYING NUMBERS Wholesale instruments offer protection only if numbers are correctly stated. If differences are discovered, obtain a new Security Agreement covering the correct numbers and correct the numbers on the ledger card and original wholesale note. This procedure applies only where errors have been made; the wholesale plan does not permit substitution.

Replaces Bulletin: "SALES FINANCE - WHOLESALE - CHECKING REPORT" - Dated 4-1-57

DELAY IN COLLECTION If any difficulty is encountered in collecting for sold and unpaid items and the delay is over 2 or 3 days, another complete wholesale check should be made immediately to determine if funds were raised by selling additional merchandise.

FREQUENCY Wholesale inventories should be checked at least once a month. On weaker dealers, check more frequently. The frequency of wholesale checks should be considered when reviewing the dealer's credit file for approval of lines and a notation of the frequency should be placed in the space provided on the Wholesale Checking Record (19-976) and Dealer Purchase Guide (19-994). Do not check any dealer at the same time each month.

FINAL DISPOSITION OF WHOLESALE CHECKING REPORT (19-963) The Wholesale Checking Report should be initialed and dated in the space provided at the bottom of the page by the man purchasing the dealer's paper after all discrepancies are cleared up and notations made of the disposition of all questionable items. The Officer-in-Charge of the department should then review each report, date, and initial in the space provided. Send those reports to System Consumer Credit, Atlanta, with wholesale outstandings of $15,000 or more at the time the Wholesale Checking Report was issued. File all others in your wholesale file and hold for a period of three (3) months. Those sent to System Consumer Credit will be reviewed and returned to you for filing as above.

ORDERING FORMS The Wholesale Checking Report may be requisitioned from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta, in the normal manner.

SUBJECT CARDHOLDER DEVELOPMENT

TOPIC

 Date 4-01-70

NEW BULLETIN

Experience has proven that a worthwhile percentage of individuals receiving unsolicited charge cards ultimately become active users. We also know that a satisfied customer in one area of our bank is a better prospect for additional services than an individual with whom we have no relationship. Based on these fundamentals, we propose to expand our program of personal and direct solicitation of cardholders on a permanent, systematic and sustained basis with the ultimate goal that:

EVERY CREDITWORTHY C&S CUSTOMER WILL HAVE AND USE THE C&S CHARGE CARD.

Records are being reviewed in each CAS city to obtain lists of bank customers who do not have charge cards. These lists will be screened, investigations updated where necessary and a complimentary card will be sent to those who qualify. Each banking office and department will be expected to assist in evaluating credit and setting lines of credit for the customers they are presently servicing.

In addition, a day-to-day solicitation program must be maintained to promote Charge Account Service -

As new checking and savings accounts are opened

As personal ILD and L&D notes are made or renewed

As Sales Finance transactions are investigated and approved

As residential real estate loans are made, either for holding or servicing

As personal banking is discussed with officers and employees of firms using corporate services.

When our normal credit investigation or customer relationship reveals an apparently qualified prospect who does not have a CAS card, we must Obtain a CAS application and discuss the amount of credit needed for cash and purchasing requirements, or Request issuance of a complimentary card with the amount of credit based on estimated requirements.

This program is intended to make better use of information already available on individual customers in each department and banking location, to have the results of new credit information serve a dual purpose, to better coordinate the extension of credit between CAS and other departments and to provide better customer service. Although centralized record keeping and authorization are necessary, CAS is an important part of our package of services for individuals and each banking office will benefit from the further development and servicing of C&S customers.

Each banking location will be responsible for the development of prospects, appraisal of credit data already available, development of additional information (investigation) if needed, and setting a realistic line of credit. After approval of the initial line, CAS will have the primary responsibility for servicing, collection and control, calling on the banking location for assistance where necessary in the interest of improved customer relations or coordinated credit and collection handling. CAS will also have the responsibility for reviewing new lines to the degree necessary to insure that approvals are in keeping with current credit requirements.

PROCEDURES

The CAS manager in each city will work with banking locations and departments to set up local procedures that will accomplish our goals in the most effective way. In general, we would expect these procedures to include the following:

1. The application and photo copies of all data substantiating the approval of the line should be forwarded to CAS along with the amount of line and type of card being requested. Full information is needed by CAS for intelligent authorization and collection follow-up.

2. All "handout" applications should be stamped to show the banking location, and wherever practical customers should be encouraged to return the completed application to that location.

3. Where a complimentary card is requested, the approving officer may wish to write a letter saying that the card is being mailed.

4. A continuing training program covering the most effective use of our new personal checking account form should be maintained, and the CAS application portion of this form may be used in discussing the CAS line requirement or as a basis for issuing a complimentary card.

5. All rejections should be reported to CAS for review and statistical analysis.

KEY "SELL" PHRASES

To solicit new cardholders and to activate non-users -

Shopping convenience throughout Georgia - many establishments extend credit only on the C&S card - member of Interbank, the largest bank credit card organization in the world - credit at many locations for almost any purpose with only one bill - a budget leveler - pre-approved cash reserve - Instant Money at all CAS member banks - identification for cashing checks - optional payment plan - low minimum payments - pre-established credit for major purchases - one card replaces several - no membership fee - as many cards as needed for all members of family - no need to carry large sums of cash when traveling - replenish checking account by mail - automatic transfer to savings account - a tool for family money management - flexible.

SUBJECT COLLECTIONS

TOPIC CREDIT CARD - LOST OR STOLEN

 Date 3-19-68

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - COLLECTIONS - CREDIT CARD - LOST OR STOLEN" Dated 12-15-62

Although only a very few of the credit cards reported as lost are later used fraudulently, proper precautions must be taken to protect the customer, our merchants, and ourselves. The possibility of a stolen card being used fraudulently is, of course, greater than for a lost card; consequently, our liability can be more substantial. Here, especially, immediate precautions must be exercised to protect our merchants and to minimize our losses. This bulletin sets forth the procedures to be followed upon receiving notification of a lost or stolen card.

CARDHOLDER RESPONSIBILITIES We take the position that the cardholder is responsible for all charges made prior to our receiving notification of a lost or stolen card. Our right to enforce payment for those charges is included in our old Customer Agreement under item 7, which states:

> "That if my credit card is stolen or lost I will promptly notify you in writing, and unless and until you receive such notification from me I shall be responsible to you for any and all advances you make through the use of this credit card."

The newest credit card application is less explicit:

> "... to repay all advances made through the use of the card until C & S is notified in writing of the loss of the card."

The card itself carries this wording:

> "The registered holder named on the reverse side of this card assumes full responsibility for and agrees to pay all advances made to the account of the registered holder through the use of this card prior to surrendering it to the issuer or to giving the issuer notice in writing that the card has been lost or stolen."

The full extent of a customer's liability is just beginning to be determined in court tests, however.

While logic must be used in relation to the position of the cardholder involved, we take the position that we are right in requesting that such advances be paid. Even if we do not have a signed agreement, our approach should be tactful but positive towards repayment of any advances made prior to our notification.

PROCEDURES TO BE USED UPON NOTIFICATION The following procedure should be used when a card is reported as lost:

1. Refer all telephone, written, or personal notification to a designated senior credit or collection man.

2. Fill out (in duplicate or triplicate, as need exists) Lost or Stolen Credit Card Report, Form # 29-4090, to obtain as many facts as possible.

3. A copy of the Lost or Stolen Credit Card report should be placed in the customer's credit file.

4. Insert a red flasher card in front of the ledger card showing that the card was reported as lost or stolen, the date, and the initials of the person handling the matter. Also, note this on the ledger card. Where authorization journals are used, note on the authorization journal the fact of loss or theft. Send CAS Master File Correction or Transfer Request 29-4120 to Data Processing. On the next day's journal, the account will appear as code C, closed, so no authorizations will be made.

5. Other locations should prepare a CAS Notice of Account Change, 29-4073, to get a new credit card for the customer. Be sure to add the necessary suffix to the account number when ordering the new card. See bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - ACCOUNTING - ACCOUNT CHANGES, for the proper procedure in ordering new cards on lost or stolen credit card accounts. The length of time the suffix letter "A" remains on the account number (both permanent and temporary card accounts) is also discussed in that bulletin.

STOLEN CARDS The same procedures apply to stolen cards that apply to lost cards with one exception. Upon receipt of notification that a credit card has been stolen, the account should be entered on the next Stop Charge Notice to the merchant even though charges have not been received. If the circumstances relating to the stolen card seem suspicious to the person handling the situation, a Stop Charge Notice should be issued immediately. The Credit Manager or Collection Manager should maintain a log of stolen cards showing date, account number, and customer name. This will be an aid in determining "normal" activity and in detecting sudden increases in thefts. Such increases may influence frequency of issue of stop-charge lists. Also, this information could be of value to local law authorities.

CHARGES AFTER NOTIFICATION Immediate action is required when charges are received after we have been notified of a lost or stolen card.

1. Contact the customer upon receipt of the first charge. If contact cannot be made immediately, or if he states that he did not make or authorize the charge, issue a Stop Charge Notice to the merchants notifying them of the lost card.

2. Have the customer execute an affidavit (see page 4).

3. Every effort should be made by CAS collection personnel to establish the identity of the party who made the charges.

4. The matter should be referred to local law enforcement authorities if we cannot determine the identity of the fraudulent user and the amount is in excess of $100. A copy of the Lost or Stolen Credit Card Report will serve this purpose.

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - COLLECTION - CREDIT CARD - LOST OR STOLEN" Dated 12-15-62

The possibility exists of a dishonest report by the cardholder that his card has been lost or stolen. He may have made such a report fully intending to use the card afterwards and blame parties unknown. On the other hand, collusion may exist between the cardholder and a subsequent third party user. Careful questioning of the cardholder and a complete review of the file and all available information are mandatory.

SUBJECT CREDIT - APPROVAL

TOPIC APPLICANTS UNDER TWENTY ONE YEARS OF AGE

 Date 12-15-62

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - APPLICANTS UNDER TWENTY ONE YEARS OF AGE" Dated 11-3-61

Underage applications deserve special handling for two primary reasons. First, they represent future customers of the Bank. Some of them have never used credit before, and we will have a part in the formation of their attitude toward their credit standing. Secondly, many of our merchants have numerous customers in this age group; therefore, we must learn how to establish and control this type of account. While there are inherent dangers, we know the intelligent selection of applicants can advance our program to permit the servicing of those accounts that are desirable. Through the servicing of selected underage applicants, we are not only training them in the wise usage of credit, but we are also developing a Bank relationship for the future.

This bulletin covers applications from minors who are employed and have a source of income. Many students are underage and there are credit problems peculiar to the handling of student accounts. A separate bulletin will be issued on this subject at a later date.

TELEPHONE APPLICATIONS We must be prepared to handle "point of sale" applications which are called in by merchants seeking approval on initial sales to minors who do not have an established CAS account. Therefore, we must have basic "ground rules" so that approvals may be made quickly while still giving adequate consideration to the special credit factors involved. The following minimum standards are designed to permit the selectivity of risk for approval of initial sales only. The sale may be accepted if --

1. The merchant calling in the application is a Converted Merchant or a Quality Merchant.

2. The sale is for a reasonable amount.

3. Income is sufficient. Does the applicant appear to be sufficiently self-sustaining to pay for the item?

4. The parents are known to be reliable, or the address of the applicant is recognizable as being in a reasonably good neighborhood.

5. The merchant is familiar with the applicant or his family. This recommendation should be considered in the decision.

After approving the initial sale, we should request the merchant to send us the completed, signed application in the usual manner. Since this approval of the initial sales does not necessarily mean that we will have sufficient information or background to establish a line of credit, we should complete the investigation with emphasis on the credit factors peculiar to underage approvals.

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - APPLICANTS UNDER TWENTY ONE YEARS OF AGE" Dated 11-3-61

CREDIT FACTORS TO BE EMPHASIZED When approving underage applications, it will be necessary to obtain more complete information than is normally required. Certain credit factors will have greater significance in light of the applicant's age and should be evaluated accordingly.

1. The names, addresses, and employment of the parents or guardian. This information will assist us in evaluating the applicant. The environment and the credit atmosphere prevalent in the applicant's home will have a decided effect on what attitude he will develop in relation to his credit.

2. Income. Do the parents contribute to any part of his support? If so, to what extent is the applicant self-sufficient?

3. What type of employment has the applicant chosen? What future does it offer?

4. What is his educational background, and what future plans does he have to continue his education?

5. Military status. If the applicant is a male, this factor must be given consideration.

These factors are more thoroughly covered in Bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - NEW APPLICATIONS, and it should be used as a guide.

LOGGING APPLICATIONS FROM MINORS All telephone applications on minors from our merchants must be coded so that we may watch the trend of the quality being received from any given merchant. Insert and circle the letter "M" (for minor) in the left-hand side of the "Date Received" column on the NEW APPLICATION CONTROL LOG (29-4072). We must be careful that the applications being received from any non-converted merchant do not include a large percentage of exceptions which can be approved only by the senior CAS officer.

CREDIT LINES As a general rule, a $200 maximum line will be sufficient for the majority of all underage applications. Recognizing that minor applicants, as a whole, are in a lower income level, an arbitrary $200 line may often be too high. Each line must be set consistent with the individual applicant's income and ability to pay.

ISSUANCE OF CREDIT CARD If the applicant is deemed worthy of credit by all standards except age, he should be issued a card. The same credit factors should be used to determine whether a permanent or temporary card is issued as in the case of applicants over 21 years of age. If a charge card would have been issued in the past then, generally, a permanent card should be issued. If, in the judgment of the senior CAS officer, the applicant would previously have been given a No Card Account then the temporary card should be issued so that every purchase will be authorized. Each underage application must be carefully reviewed and an individual decision made as to the type of charge card to be issued. We do not want to issue temporary cards to all underage applicants, just because they are underage, if credit factors justify issuing a permanent card. (See Bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - NEW APPLICATIONS, and CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - RE-EVALUATION.)

Normally, minors with reasonable income, job permanency, and previous credit experience will treat their indebtedness with the same respect as a person over 21. However, we must remember that a minor is protected by law and under certain conditions may rescind his indebtedness. Lack of experience and/or restraint in personal financial management on the part of the minor can result in an over-obligated condition which can lead to the rescinding of indebtedness.

PERSONAL INTERVIEW While it may not be possible to have every underage applicant visit the Bank prior to the approval of the account, we want to emphasize that interviews are to be encouraged and conducted if at all practical. This will give the CAS officer an opportunity to better estimate the responsibility of the applicant and to obtain more complete information than we normally obtain on a routine application. Certainly, we should interview underage individuals if there is any question as to the adequacy of background or credit information. This will be the case in a substantial percentage of such applications. During this personal contact the opportunity to create a favorable "image" of the Bank is unlimited. A few moments of your time given then, in explaining the other Bank services that are available and the future advantages of a good credit rating, may very well lead to many years of sound, profitable business. Most of the minors who are applicants will not have a checking account and this should be solicited.

INSTANT MONEY Instant Money privileges should be restricted on all underage accounts except on a personal-request basis whereby the officer in CAS may discuss the situation with the customer before the loan is granted. This information will be shown on the history card so that the authorizers will react accordingly.

The approval of an application from a person under twenty one years of age must be the sole responsibility of a senior CAS officer; his judgment will determine our later experience with this type of account. Review the Bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - NEW APPLICATIONS. The credit factors outlined in the bulletin will generally apply to an underage applicant; however, additional factors will have to be considered. Applications from persons under twenty one years of age are to be treated as an exception. They must be referred to the senior CAS officer in each city for handling.

SUBJECT CREDIT - RE-EVALUATION

TOPIC

 Date 11-3-67

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - RE-EVALUATION" Dated 11-16-62

The majority of our personal credit approval in the Installment Loan and other departments of the bank is related to the handling of an individual transaction for a set amount of indebtedness to be repaid over a predetermined period of time. Additional indebtedness or substantial changes in the time for repayment takes place only through a new loan which automatically provides an opportunity to re-evaluate credit and, when necessary, to update investigation. On the other hand, a "line of credit" type of account such as Charge Account Service, establishes a CONTINUING indebtedness without these predetermined factors of liquidation. Because the financial status of the CAS customer is also subject to change, we cannot automatically continue to extend credit indefinitely without some reappraisal. Thus, a primary objective of a re-evaluation program is to insure that credit is extended on open CAS accounts, consistent with current credit policies. (See Bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT-APPROVAL - NEW APPLICATIONS.)

In developing a re-evaluation program for CAS customers, it is obvious that too frequent review, or review not related to the amount of credit extended, will unnecessarily increase our costs of operation. Taking into consideration the factors of costs and loss exposure, it is impractical to review every account. Consequently, based on past experience, TWELVE SPECIFIC FACTORS have been established which will determine when an account should be re-evaluated. These factors essentially cover: (1) a request by a customer or a merchant that will alter the original line of credit, (2) a change in the status of the cardholder, or (3) any activity or information that may indicate a change in the credit-worthiness of the customer.

Under no condition do any of these factors call for automatic suspension or curtailment of a credit line; they do, however, indicate that an account should be reviewed to determine that it meets current credit standards. When an account evidences weak or poor credit, prompt action is essential. Through effective attention in the early stages of difficulty, an account can often be salvaged and sound customer relationship maintained. The action to be taken can only be determined by re-evaluation of the customer's credit.

Re-evaluation does not necessarily mean that a complete up-to-date credit investigation be made. Rather, it assures that the account is brought to the attention of senior personnel and reviewed in a systematic manner. Many times this will require only a brief review of the customer's record with nothing further necessary. It does, however, encompass making a credit decision, based on sufficient facts to warrant the approval, modification, or termination of a line of credit. This bulletin deals with the factors which call for re-evaluation and the procedure to be followed in making re-evaluation of an account.

FACTORS REQUIRING RE-EVALUATION

The factors which automatically call for the re-evaluation of an account are discussed in detail in the paragraphs which follow. An account should be re-evaluated immediately if any of these factors is detected. Since these factors may appear at different points in the day-to-day servicing of CAS accounts, a Re-evaluation Worksheet must be initiated by the individual recognizing the danger signal. The worksheet insures that re-evaluation will be handled systematically and that danger signals will not be "lost in the shuffle."

1. REQUEST FOR INCREASE IN LINE OF CREDIT A request for line increase will normally originate as a direct customer request or as a request from a member merchant. Many such requests will occur on accounts of customers who have not previously designated that a particular line be established. Such accounts will include those opened as the result of:

   (a) a specific sale by the merchant
   (b) an application completed by a merchant on behalf of a prospective cardholder
   (c) the conversion of a merchant's receivables
   (d) an application on which the customer did not indicate a desired line.

   Since a line must be set for each account opened, in most of the above cases we have arbitrarily assigned what we think is an appropriate line, even though the customer may have qualified for a higher limit. When requests for line increases are received for these accounts, it is usually possible to authorize the amount of a specific sale based on the credit information on hand. However, lacking sufficient information, a re-evaluation should be made as soon as possible and notification given to the customer.

   Some requests for increased lines will be received from customers who fail to recognize the type of credit best suited to their immediate needs. It should be kept in mind that there are times when installment loan credit better serves the customer than an increased CAS line.

   Requests for increased lines usually involve customers who have an active balance or who contemplate activating their lines; they represent accounts which will, in the majority, maintain active, profitable balances. The proper servicing of those requests is important and the handling of declinations, especially, calls for the use of good judgment by senior personnel.

   The responsibility for originating a Re-evaluation Worksheet rests with the person handling the request, whether it be by telephone or mail.

   OVER CREDIT LINE IN EXCESS OF 30 PER CENT An immediate review should be made of each account that exceeds the assigned line by 30% or more (see Bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - COLLECTIONS - OVER-LIMIT ACCOUNTS). Although the line of credit is basically a guide for control purposes and may or may not represent the maximum amount that the customer can handle satisfactorily, over-limit accounts have contributed significantly to our losses. Each over-limit account must be re-evaluated and prompt followup executed in order to ascertain the action required to minimize any possible loss. Re-evaluation of over-limit delinquent accounts must be especially expedited.

The responsibility for initiating the Re-evaluation Worksheet must be placed on the person detecting the over-limit condition. This condition will be primarily detected as sales ticket media are filed or an authorization call is received on an account which is for an amount that will cause the account to exceed the established credit line by more than 30%.

3. PAST-DUE ACCOUNTS An effective, sound approach to re-evaluation of lines of credit on past-due accounts in early stages of delinquency can prevent a build-up of indebtedness and reduce the probability of a serious collection problem. This, more than any other single factor, can help to reduce subsequent losses.

Increased losses on "marginal credit" customers indicate the need for careful consideration of basic credit factors during re-evaluation. This is particularly true on those customers in lower income brackets and/or unstable occupations, those who have a history of short-time employment, the non-home owner who resides in a below-average residential area, the frequent mover, and the habitual loan company borrower or those who persistently trade with so-called "high rate" companies. These are frequently the customers who become past-due without likelihood of recovery.

While the past-due status of an account is one of the most significant indicators that a customer may be in trouble, and without immediate attention may represent a loss, the fact that an account is past-due is not in itself necessarily an indication of the paying ability or potential of the customer. The precedence established by many retail stores of being lenient in their schedule should not be over looked. Often such poor repayment habits have been condoned for the customer who possesses above average means. Intelligent evaluation is necessary if these customers are to be recognized and collection effort handled tactfully.

A substantial number of accounts fluctuate between a current and five-day past-due status without ever becoming a collection problem. Also a considerable number of accounts become 35 days past due but pay shortly after receiving their statement. The greatest risk, of course, are accounts with balances over $100. Because of the number involved, these accounts need not be re-evaluated simply because they are past-due unless other factors apply. Re-evaluation of past due accounts must, because of the large number involved, be limited to those representing the greatest risk. Re-evaluate all past-due accounts that:

(a) become 65 days or more past due.
(b) have been rescheduled regardless of the reason.

In addition to the above automatic demands for re-evaluation, collection personnel should be trained to recognize marginal or unsatisfactory credits, involving balances of less than $100. These should be considered for re-evaluation on the basis of the judgment of the collection personnel.

The responsibility for originating a Re-evaluation Worksheet on past-due accounts should rest with the collectors or other designated personnel, depending on the size and make-up of each office.

4. IMPROPER USE OF INSTANT MONEY While the average amount of our Instant Money transactions is appreciably larger than the average amount of merchant sales transactions, past experience does not indicate that Instant Money contributes to losses to any greater degree than do merchant sales. We do know that some cardholders have abused Instant Money privileges; others have used Instant Money unrealistically, thus contributing to our over-all loss picture. Therefore, accounts which make use of Instant Money in the categories below must be re-evaluated. The person making authorization should initiate a Re-evaluation Worksheet at the time a request is received. Good customer relations dictate that the request which initiates the re-evaluation be granted whenever possible; however, if factors such as an over-limit in excess of 30%, past-due, etc. exist, a re-evaluation should be made before the request is granted.

Accounts using Instant Money in any of the following categories must be re-evaluated.

(a) Any account being used for Instant Money advances which is consistently at or near the credit line.

(b) Two Instant Money loans totaling more than $200 during one billing period if the second advance causes an over limit situation.

(c) An account that shows the customer is possibly borrowing Instant Money to pay his monthly payment.

NOTE ALL OFFICES USING NCR EQUIPMENT SHOULD INDICATE THE DATE AND AMOUNT OF ANY INSTANT MONEY ADVANCE IN THE REMARKS SECTION OF THE LEDGER CARD AT THE TIME OF AUTHORIZATION.

5. UNUSUAL ACTIVITY Any major deviation in the buying habits of a customer can be a danger signal, indicating an unwarranted buildup of indebtedness and a potential over-limit situation. This can also indicate that a card is being used by an unauthorized person. A considerable number of amount of charges in a relatively short time should be a signal for re-evaluation with previous CAS activity being taken into consideration. Unusual activity will vary from one account to another; therefore, individual judgment must be exercised. Any person detecting questionable activity, whether at the time of authorization or as sales tickets are filed, is responsible for initiating the Re-evaluation Worksheet or bringing the account to the attention of their supervisor.

Review of accounts with excessive activity may contribute to the early detection of abusers or "wild" card users who are deliberately building up an indebtedness with no intent to repay. Review should be made of the type of merchandise and the nature of purchases charged to these accounts. Luxury items of unusually large amounts, if these items exceed the assigned line, several purchases of a specific item, an unusual number of purchases for items having a high resale value, repetitive purchases on the same day or on consecutive days, numerous purchases at or near the floor limit - all indicate the possible abuse of an account. These danger signals should be related to previous activity on the account to determine if they are out-of-character with the cardholder's previously established buying patterns.

6. CREDIT INQUIRIES The number and type of businesses making inquiry on an account are important factors in determining whether the credit line is realistically based on current debt load and payment performance. A Re-evaluation Worksheet should be initiated by the person giving credit information on accounts having the following history of credit inquiries:

   (a) two or more loan companies inquiring within a 6 month period
   (b) three or more credit inquiries in a 12 month period
   (c) request for a pay-off by a lending agency.

7. PAYMENT BY A LENDING AGENCY Payment by a lending agency can indicate a perfectly normal change of the CAS balance to an installment account, freeing up the CAS line for other purchases, or it can indicate a change of credit status and the building up of excessive debt.

   Persons opening mail or otherwise reviewing remittances should initiate a Re-evaluation Worksheet whenever:

   (a) payment is received as a result of a finance company loan (check from loan company will be indication)
   (b) payments received from banks or other lending institutions.

8. LARGE CUSTOMER PAY-OFFS In many instances customers will pay off their CAS accounts with their personal checks, possibly from savings or proceeds of a loan. This may indicate that the customer has become over obligated or is in a less solvent condition than before. These possible changes in the customer's financial status should require a close appraisal of the assigned credit line, particularly on "higher line" accounts. Re-evaluation should be made with particular consideration given to the customer's established payment pattern. (He may consistently pay more than the minimum payment and frequently the entire balance.) Sometimes this re-evaluation will result in an increased limit.

   A review should be made of accounts on which pay-offs of $200 or more are received from the customer by any person noticing such pay-offs during authorizing, filing, or collecting if such payments do not conform to past paying habits.

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - RE-EVALUATION" Dated 11-16-62

9. FORMER EMPLOYEES A new account number must be assigned to the account of a former employee upon his leaving the bank. Prior to the issuance of a new credit card, a re-evaluation must be made. Since both employment and income factors will be changing, a complete credit investigation will be required.

Arrangements should be made so that Personnel Departments and Personnel Officers will notify the local CAS Department when an employee is leaving the bank and such departments and officers will secure all employee CAS charge cards. Re-evaluation should be initiated by the CAS credit manager.

10. CHANGE IN NAME If an account is to be changed in name only, due to a change in marital status of the cardholder, re-evaluation and up-dating of the credit information are required. There are possible employment changes as well as change in the person legally responsible for the indebtedness.

This re-evaluation should be initiated by the perons receiving the request for the new card in the new name. Should the request simply be the result of an error in the spelling of the name when the card was originally issued, no re-evaluation will be necessary provided a credit statement has been secured in the correct name.

11. TEMPORARY CARD ACCOUNTS Accounts are opened on a temporary card basis for credit control purposes. Closer control is achieved since the merchant must obtain authorization for each purchase exceeding $15. Otherwise the amount of the purchase can be charged back to the merchant's account, except in the case of airlines, motels and restaurants. Temporary card accounts originate as the result of --

(a) lack of sufficient credit information at the time of application
(b) desire on our part to control charge activity on an account for various reasons.

Temporary card accounts will have nine month expiry dates. Ordinarily a permanent card can be issued at the time of reissue; however, it is necessary that a re-evaluation take place. (See bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT CARD - REISSUE.)

12. NO CARD ACCOUNTS Even with the use of our permanent and temporary charge cards it is necessary to open some accounts on a No Card basis. These accounts will usually originate as the result of --

(a) requests by a merchant that we handle limited charges for a customer to whom we would not otherwise extend credit. These accounts will be accepted with recourse upon the merchant making the request.
(b) accounts acquired through merchant conversions where the customer is not credit worthy or there is not sufficient information for approval.
(c) older people who pay merchant satisfactorily but lack enough information for regular approval.

Many times these customers will request charge cards after billing and in a lot of cases it will be possible to issue one. Re-evaluation on these accounts should be initiated by the person receiving the request when a customer applies.

No Card accounts originating from conversions should be reviewed by senior credit personnel to initiate re-evaluation on these accounts which appear to be eligible for credit cards.

OTHER REASONS FOR REVIEW Together with Cycle Review (discussed below), the preceding 12 factors cover the principal situations which will require re-evaluation. There will be other factors or combinations of factors which will indicate the need for re-evaluation of the account. It is the responsibility of all personnel concerned with the day-to-day servicing of CAS accounts to initiate the re-evaluation of an account whenever good judgment dictates.

CYCLE REVIEW In addition to the 12 factors which automatically require re-evaluation, all accounts should be reviewed periodically. The best time for this is immediately prior to the billing of each cycle since the charge media can then be analyzed without referral to film. The cycle review also furnishes credit management an opportunity to determine that the 12 basic factors requiring re-evaluation are being detected and that subsequent re-evaluation is being made.

The credit manager of offices using NCR equipment should thumb the ledgers prior to the billing of a cycle to ascertain any questionable activity on accounts. In Atlanta and Macon a review of the Aged Trial Balance and/or History Card will serve the same purpose. Accounts showing questionable activity should be separated and reviewed with reference to the individual history cards and credit files as needed. This procedure should be a part of credit management's regular routine in each office.

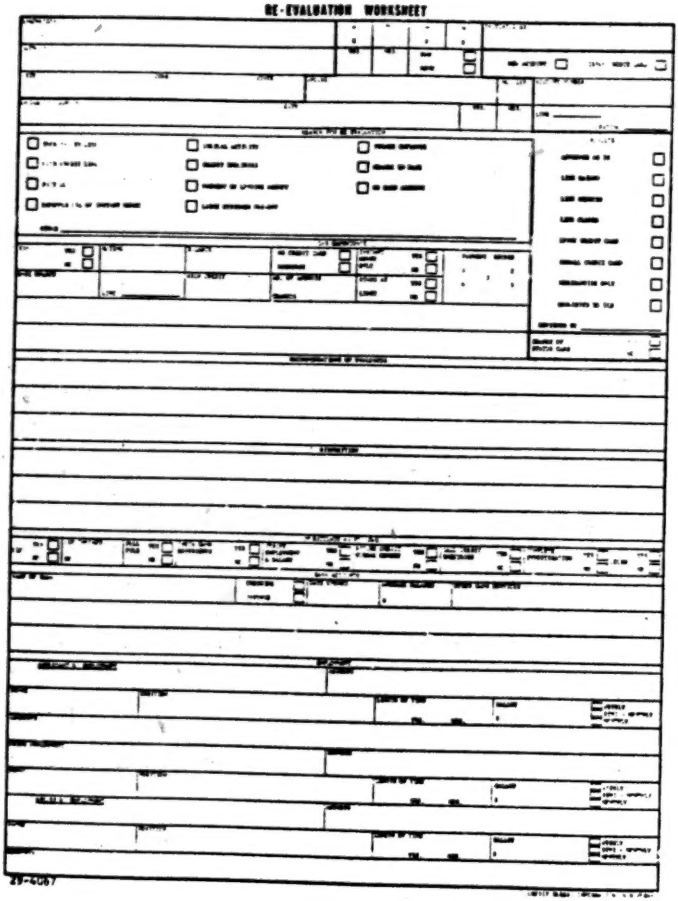
PROCEDURE FOR RE-EVALUATION

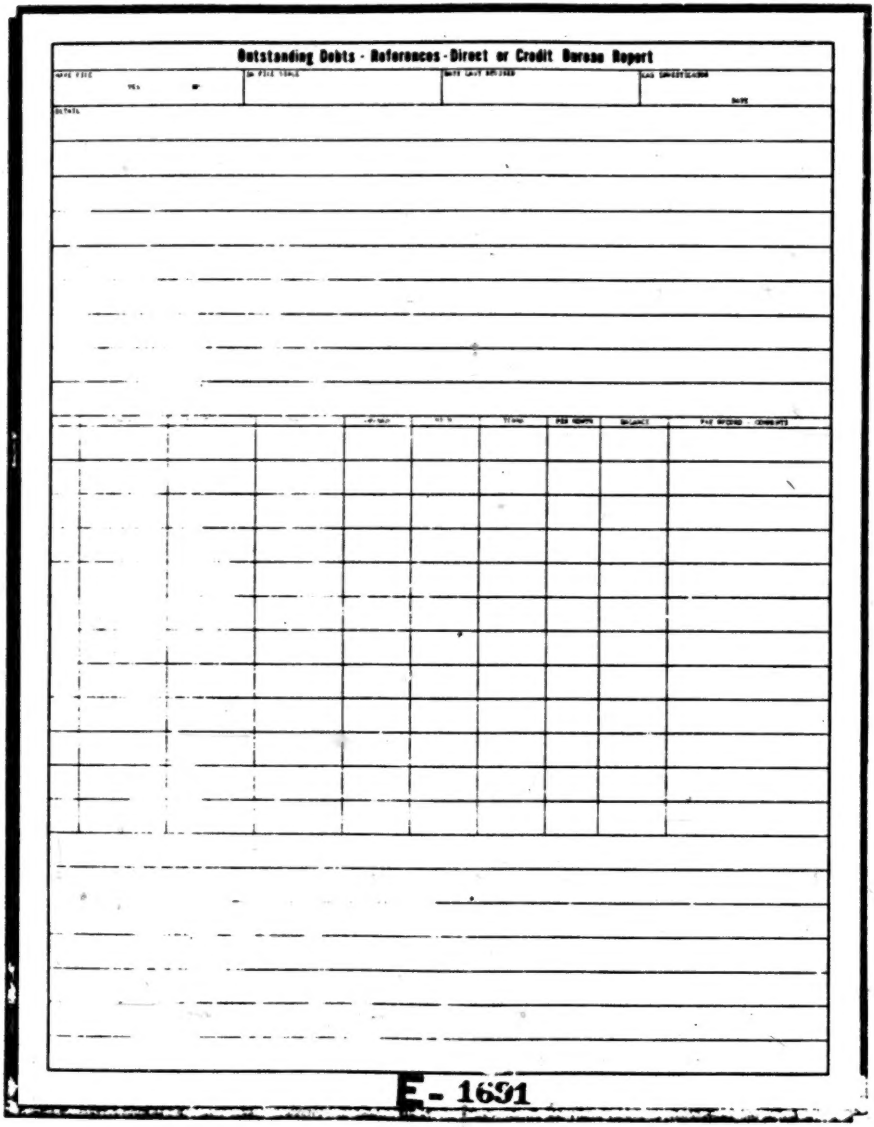
RE-EVALUATION WORKSHEET The Re-evaluation Worksheet, illustrated on pages 8 and 9, has been designed to provide a systematic method of re-evaluating CAS accounts. In most instances, a worksheet will be used and should be completed as each step is taken, whether it be a brief and simple evaluation or one requiring complete credit investigation. Procedures for the use and completion of this form are discussed below.

INITIATION OF RE-EVALUATION The following sections of the worksheet should be completed before being referred to the CAS credit man, along with the customer's credit file.

(a) Customer's personal identification information
(b) Reason for re-evaluation
(c) CAS experience
(d) Person initiating and date

RE-EVALUATION WORKSHEET





Outstanding Debts - References - Direct or Credit Bureau Report

E - 1691

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - RE-EVALUATION" Dated 11-16-62

Anyone detecting any factor(s) requiring re-evaluation should initiate the procedure by filling out that portion of the above information applicable to his phase of CAS work. If necessary the worksheet should then be checked against the ledger or history card to complete the above information before referral to the credit man.

REVIEW OF ACCOUNT The CAS credit man will review the account from the Re-evaluation Worksheet and the customer's credit file. A study of the credit information already in file and the previous CAS experience in relation to the new information which has called for re-evaluation will determine if further investigation is needed. If such is the case, the "Investigate as Follows" section of the Re-evaluation Worksheet should be completed. If specific calls are necessary, they should be so indicated on the reverse side of the worksheet.

CREDIT RE-INVESTIGATION In re-investigating credit of a CAS customer, it is necessary to make full use of the information in the file and in other departments of the bank. Additional investigation should be limited to that which is required to complete the re-evaluation. Use of Credit Bureau reports should be as limited as practicable in order to minimize unnecessary costs and work loads. Many times a direct contact with the customer will produce leads to additional information which will assist in making a decision.

It is essential that investigation cease as soon as the necessary amount of information has been accumulated to allow a decision to be made.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF EVALUATOR The worksheet should show clearly the decisions reached as a result of re-evaluation and the instructions for future handling. While no set rules can be established, direct customer contact, preferably by interview in the bank or by telephone, has proved to be the most satisfactory and successful means of handling negative changes in credit lines. The following procedures will apply to the handling of many accounts on which limitational changes are required.

(a) All past-due accounts should be referred back to collection personnel with the recommended method for handling clearly indicated.
(b) Current accounts requiring immediate revocation or suspension of credit card privileges should be referred to collection personnel (card pickup, etc.).
(c) Restrictions on use of Instant Money require immediate direct customer contact by telephone or by letter.

DISPOSITION OF RE-EVALUATION WORKSHEET All action taken as a result of the recommendations of the evaluator must be clearly shown in the Disposition Section of the worksheet. If subsequent developments require arrangements other than those recommended, it is particularly important that they be clearly indicated. When all appropriate action has been completed, the worksheet is filed in the customer's credit file

NOTATIONS ON LEDGER OR HISTORY CARDS At the time the Re-evaluation Worksheet is filed in the customer credit folder, the ledger or history card must be stamped:

RE-EVALUATED

DATE _____ BY _____

Account changes should then be clearly posted to the ledger or history card, i.e., line of credit, income and credit rating code, and special instructions or information (no Instant Money without prior approval - no credit card - credit card repossessed with date of repossession - etc.).

RE-EVALUATION ACTIVITY LOG Each account re-evaluated should be entered in the Re-evaluation Activity Log, illustrated on reverse side. At the end of the month this information is used to complete the "Card Accounts" and "No Card Accounts" portions of the customer Activity section of the Statistical Summary Report (except Atlanta and this information is gotten elsewhere) and the Re-evaluation Activity section of the Collection Summary Report.

IMPORTANT: When Posting the "Card Issued" and "Card Cancelled" collumns of the log, indicate the type of card issued or cancelled (permanent or temporary) by using the letters "P" or "T" instead of a check mark.

CHANGE IN STATUS CARD In Atlanta and Macon a Change in Status Card (29-4168) is to be completed on each account re-evaluated, then forwarded to Data Processing Department to be used in changing the status on the Aged Trial Balance and Past-Due Report.

ORDERING FORMS The Re-evaluation Worksheet, Re-evaluation Activity Log, and Change in Status Card may be requisitioned from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta. Two stamps for marking ledger or history cards have been sent to each CAS office. Additional Stamps may be ordered from the Purchasing Department, Atlanta.

SUBJECT CREDIT REQUIREMENTS

TOPIC

 Date 4-1-70

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - NEW APPLICATIONS", Dated 11-16-62

The issuance of a credit card involves setting a permanent line of credit that is subject to nominal control as long as it is used properly -- a line of credit that can be used to borrow money without question as to purpose -- a line of credit that can be used for multiple purchases at many stores. Such usage must be supported by above-average individual credit to maintain an allowable loss ratio. On the other hand, the sales needs and sales approaches of our merchants who are essential to the operation and long-range development of CAS dictate a more liberal approach under many circumstances.

To cover the full range of customer needs, we now have two types of credit cards plus a provision for handling "no card" accounts(see page 5) under some circumstances:

1. The new Interbank card which is good any place in the world where Interbank facilities are available.

2. A local card for customers that will require closer control than the Interbank cardholders.

These cards will carry an expiry date. The use of the temporary (green) cards will be discontinued as those cards now in use expire.

All applications should be reviewed in relation to basic credit factors that apply to all extensions of unsecured credit, keeping in mind that in traditional unsecured credit, we update our credit information in relation to each new request - with a continuing revolving line of credit, reevaluation of the line depends upon recognizable changes that take place in our customer's credit capacity.

CREDIT FACTORS

1. The applicant should be a stable resident. Be extremely careful in approving applications that indicate --

   a. Frequent changes of address.

   b. Transient types of residence, such as hotels, furnished apartments, trailer parks.

   c. Below average sections of town.

   d. Newcomers to the community. They should be thoroughly investigated at their previous address.

2. He should be over 21 years of age. Exceptions to this age limitation will be subject to special considerations and are covered in Operating Guide Bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - APPLICANTS UNDER TWENTY-ONE YEARS OF AGE.

3. Income must be sufficient to pay the minimum payment after paying basic living costs and known fixed obligations. Other credit factors being equal, the amount of income is the major guideline in setting a line of credit. Obviously the lower income families must allocate the major portion of their income to basic living costs and have less available for discretionary spending. In the lower income brackets, special attention should be given to the number of dependents and other fixed obligations.

4. Income should be reliable.

   a. It should come from an established employer or other stable source.

   b. If employed, he should have been on his present job at least two years unless one of the following is applicable:

      (1) He has had at least two years of continuous employment with his previous employer.

      (2) He has made changes that increased his earnings or stability, he has the ability to pay, and his other credit factors are satisfactory.

      (3) He has a satisfactory payment record and other income or substantial assets.

      (4) He is on his first job and has a good educational background.

   c. Persons in the groups listed below are as a general rule unpredictable credit risks. If the applicant is in one of these occupations, extra care should be used in verifying stability and amount of income, extent of indebtedness, and paying habits.

      (1) Employees in hazardous or unstable occupations, such as taxi drivers, farm laborers, musicians, dance instructors, models, dance hall hostesses, seasonal workers, outside workers, and employees who are paid daily for their work.

      (2) Business people who only rent desk space or telephone service, and individuals in business for themselves in their homes who cannot furnish bank references and evidence of the reliability of their businesses or incomes.

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - NEW APPLICATIONS", Dated 11-16-62

(3) Persons, such as tutors, masseurs, fortune tellers, and music teachers, whose income consists exclusively of fees earned at home.

(4) Salesmen who work exclusively on a commission basis for an unknown firm, a relative or an employer who is questionable or unreliable.

(5) Transient employees, construction workers temporarily employed for a specific job or by an out-of-town company, demonstrators, campaign fund workers, and solicitors.

5. Payment record should give no indication of unusual collection problems for us.

a. 30-day retail store accounts, doctors, dentists, etc., should be paid within the limits normally permitted by the creditors involved.

b. Contract, loan, and installment payments should be paid with the promptness that we normally expect of our own installment customers.

c. Any suits, judgments, bankruptcies, collection accounts, or repossessions can be excused only if this is warranted by the facts or probable circumstances surrounding those actions.

d. Any deficiency in payment record should be more than offset by above average stability of income and other credit factors.

6. Application and the investigation should show no evidence that his total debt might be in excess of normal ability to repay. A more complete application, further investigation, personal interview, or rejection is necessary if --

a. Loan companies (not sales finance companies) are listed as references or are detected during the investigation as present or prior creditors of the applicant.

b. High-markup credit jewelers or similar merchandisers show up predominantly in his credit background.

c. The Credit Bureau has received a number of inquiries pertaining to the applicant within the past 12 months.

d. Credit lines and borrowings indicate the possibility of debt pyramiding.

7. Applicants already using one or more C&S services should be given special consideration. The fact that your applicant has a C&S checking or savings account does not necessarily make him a good credit risk, BUT let's be real sure that a present banking customer is not rejected without a complete investigation and careful consideration of the credit factors involved.

AMOUNT OF CREDIT LINE

The credit line of a CAS account serves as a guide in the day-to-day approval of purchases and cash advances. The initial line is subject to periodic review and may be raised or lowered based on our experience, customer requirements, and current credit factors.

From a beginning as a local shopping card with the convenience of small amounts of instant money, the use of CAS has grown to include more major purchases and to replace other forms of unsecured cash credit. Today we need to set a realistic line of credit to cover these expanded needs and depend on our various controls to stay within the limits set.

Ideally, we would like to sit down with each customer and discuss the amount of line that would be adequate to level out purchases and to do away with the need for other small unsecured loans. This can be done as applications are approved in our various banking locations, along with selling the concept of one flexible payment account to replace a multitude of small accounts.

Applications received through the mail from merchants, as part of converting a merchant's receivables or in sending out unsolicited cards, do not provide the best base for setting a realistic line. In the absence of direct customer contact, the credit man must set the maximum line that is possible based on available data. Assuming that credit factors of stability of income, amount of debt and paying habits are acceptable, the amount of income will generally determine the amount of the credit line. As a guideline, consider your customer's probable ability to pay a specified minimum payment.

As a further checkpoint, it is generally possible to set a credit line equal to one month's income. All lines should be set in multiples of $100.

In today's economy, with more than 40% of the wives working, a realistic credit line should take total family income into consideration unless uncertainty as to the permanence of the second income exists.

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT - APPROVAL - NEW APPLICATIONS", Dated 11-16-62

C&S INTERBANK CARD

Wherever credit factors permit, the Interbank card should be issued. The Interbank card is the most useful to our customer, but by the same token, authorization procedures and the expanded area of usage make it possible to charge substantially over limit or ability to repay. All credit factors by the above criteria should be favorable and income factors should be sufficient so that a credit line of at least $500 can be authorized.

The Interbank card carries an automatic expiry date of five years and should be restricted to those customers that can reasonably be predicted to maintain their credit rating through prompt payment.

C&S LOCAL CARD

The credit criteria for the local card is generally the same as for the Interbank card except that because more control is possible through local authorization procedures, we can be somewhat more flexible in credit and income requirements. This card should be used for line of $400 or less or for larger lines where some credit weakness might preclude the issuance of an Interbank card. The local card with an expiry date of 12 months should fit most of the following circumstances:

1. Credit history may be limited, but no evidence of derogatory information.

2. Applicants (usually young) with limited employment history.

3. Applicants with some credit weakness that may or may not develop to the degree of withdrawing credit privileges.

Where amount of income is the only reason for not issuing an "i" card and other factors meet our requirements, the local card will be issued for 5 years. (This takes the place of our present permanent non-Interbank card).

The local card, issued intelligently, will enable us to extend credit to the maximum number of people with the assurance that the account will automatically come up for review at a specified date and normal re-evaluation procedure should be followed at that time.

NO CARD ACCOUNTS

The "no card" account is expensive to handle in relation to potential income and can become a crutch, substituting for insufficient credit information and an unwillingness to act upon the available facts. The "no card" account is an adjunct to our merchant conversion program and should be restricted to those accounts which do not qualify, credit-wise, as CAS accounts but which the merchant requests that we open so that the customer may continue to charge with him only. Such accounts are usually accepted on a recourse basis and no charge card is issued.

There may also be a small number of accounts acquired at the time of conversion where the customer's credit is satisfactory but where the customer does not want a CAS card. These accounts must be opened so that the merchant can continue to do a credit business with the customer. Such accounts will, for the present, still have to be opened on a No Card Account basis. In rare instances, a telephone application from a converted merchant might be approved on a recourse-no card basis; however, every effort should be made to issue a card of some kind or reject the application.

SECTION CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE

SUBJECT EMPLOYEE ACCOUNTS

TOPIC

 Date 6/24/70

Replaces Bulletin: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE-EMPLOYEE ACCOUNTS-Dated 3-19-68

Employee accounts through Charge Account Service are another very fine fringe benefit offered by C&S. This is a family account for family needs. Certainly we should utilize this to the fullest extent necessary in the joint interests of the bank and ourselves. Generally, we have the same money needs as our customers, and the same fundamentals of credit that we expect of our customers should apply to us.

INSTANT MONEY

Instant Money loans are available to officers and employees under the same general conditions enjoyed by other CAS customers. There is one main difference-there is no fee, UNLESS the cash is obtained from an Instant Money Machine. In that case, the amount of each fee is $1 for each advance $25 or less, and $2 for each advance of more than $25. Of course, it is subject to the 1/2% billing charge immediately.

Money is obtained by presenting the C&S charge card to any Instant Money teller. If within the line of credit, the amount requested will be paid in cash, or if preferred may be deposited to the employee's checking account. Amounts of $50 or less will be handled automatically. Larger amounts will require a phone call, as on any other CAS customer for authorization. Without the card, an employee can still obtain Instant Money just as other CAS customers sometimes do. In such instances, proper identification must be shown, and telephone authorization must be obtained from CAS, regardless of amount requested.

LINES FOR OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES

NEW EMPLOYEES

1. CAS will make the credit investigation for the Personnel Department on all new employees. Personnel will furnish a work sheet with certain, pertinent information including salary, position, and department. The spouse's income, if any, is taken into consideration here. These work sheets should be given only to authorized CAS personnel in order to assure the proper confidentiality.

2. After the investigation is completed, the worksheet will be photostated and reviewed for credit. The CAS credit line will be assigned and the original with the line shown on it will be returned to Personnel. Normally, these should be back on the same day or not later than the following day.

3. In the event the credit report does not give sufficient information on which to base judgment or if there is any question, CAS will refer to the applicant's application and/or Retail Credit report in the Personnel Department.

4. Those applications will be reviewed exactly as any application for credit in CAS in line with all aspects of proper credit usage. As a base, one month's salary will be used for line of credit dependent on other credit factors. (As a general rule, a $200 maximum line will be sufficient for minors or first time employment until they demonstrate ability to handle credit.)

5. CAS will prepare a "dummy" work sheet for credit card processing and hold these in a pending file until new employee reports to work. Personnel will furnish each new employee with an application form, have them signed and return them to CAS. These will be matched off against the pending work sheets and they will then be released for issuing the credit card. This will eliminate the possibility of CAS issuing credit cards should the applicant not be employed. Personnel will counsel the employee about his line of credit and N then a charge card will be sent to the employee. A disclosure form with special employee rate information must accompany the card.

INCREASE IN LINES

1. CAS will refer to the Personnel Files of any employee who requests increase in line. If the credit information is reasonably current, CAS will make a copy of this report If the credit information is not up to date, CAS will draw a new credit report.

2. CAS will also check for any existing Emplcyee Loans and if such exists, will make a photostatic copy of the application. This is to review complete debt picture. When needed, employee will be talked to and counseled with by CAS personnel.

3. The spouse's income, if any, will be taken into consideration.

4. After the decision is made, a copy of the work sheet will be returned.

OFFICERS LINES

1. In order to maintain privacy concerning officer salary, CAS will automatically assign a new officer a line of $700 unless there already exists a higher line.

2. Any request for increase in line will be judged against guides of $1,000 for A.V.P. and $1,500 for V.P. If necessary to secure additional information, the Manager of CAS will check with the Personnel Officer and if appropriate, the personal financial statement will be reviewed. The officer will be contacted directly where needed for proper decision.

3. The spouse's income, if any, will be taken into consideration.

COLLECTIONS

1. The CAS Collection Manager will personally handle all contacts with employees concerning past due payments and over-limit situations. Any of these matters should be referred to him. These accounts will be handled in the same manner as the regular accounts.

2. Collection efforts on officer accounts will be handled through an officer of this department.

3. When an officer or employee leaves the bank, the account should be re-evaluated. General circumstances will determine whether the account should be terminated or reassigned a regular account number and placed in the regular customer's billing cycle.

4. Officers and employees will be contacted on past dues and temporary overlimits in the same manner as regular customers. However, if they allow their accounts to become 65 days past due - or overlimit more than normally accepted (after being informed that the line cannot be increased by CAS) - the Personnel Department will be informed of this adverse information.

5. Rescheduling of an employee's account should be approved by the Collection Manager, with an information copy sent to the CAS Manager.

   Rescheduling of an officer's account should be referred to the CAS Manager.

GENERAL

1. All officers and employees should be made aware of the CAS Employee Representative within the CAS Department. These are the people to contact concerning these accounts. They are the only ones who should have access to the Personnel Files.

2. All credit and other confidential information maintained in CAS will be kept in locked files under close security at all times.

3. The Personnel Department should inform CAS on any of the following:

a. Any derogatory information received from the Retail Credit Report or reference after the account is established.

b. Photostat copies of any employee loans.

c. Any excessive over-draft situations.

d. Any derogatory progress reports, memorandums, etc., which indicate the possibility of the employees job stability being affected.

4. CAS will tell the Personnel Department of any adverse information such as listed above.

5. Part-time employees will be handled specially because of excessive turnover, etc., during early part of employment.

a. No account will be established during first four months of employment.

b. After four months a temporary card will be issued with $100 line of credit.

c. At expiration of temporary card (12 months), a regular employee account will be established based on normal credit factors, if temporary account handled satisfactorily.

BENEFITS TO THE EMPLOYEE

The Employee gets:

1. A revolving line of credit that covers both purchases and cash.

2. A line that will probably accommodate all of his family's normal needs, based on his ability to pay the minimum payment each month.

3. If the balance is not liquidated monthly, a service charge of only ½% of the balance, which is only 1/3 as much as a regular CAS customer is charged.

4. An opportunity to cut expenses of service charges on other revolving credit, PBA, and similar accounts by paying them off with Instant Money.

5. Because of Instant Money availability, an opportunity to start or increase his savings programs.

BENEFITS TO THE BANK

The Bank gets:

1. Better employment relationships from having served the employees' needs better.

2. Reduction of paperwork and counseling when salary advances are required.

3. Reduction of paperwork on small L&D or small Installment Loans for employees - Instant Money should almost eliminate these.

AFFILIATE AND ASSOCIATE BANKS

The Executive Officers and Presidents of Affiliate and Associate Banks should have their officers and employees submit applications and requests for increase in lines directly to CAS. This will require that CAS secure information from Associate and Affiliate Banks on their officers and employees the same as outlined herein for C&S Bank Personnel. The exact same procedure will then be followed. C&S Affiliates and Correspondent Associates in non-CAS cities may work with the nearest CAS office in extending the newly added Instant Money feature to their employees.

Replaces Bulletin: "CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - INSTANT MONEY (SMALL L&D & ILD NOTES)" Dated 12-13-65

Changes have been made in our CAS and L&D rate structure to make it easier to sell our customers on the advantages of a flexible revolving credit plan for unsecured cash advances instead of the traditional time or installment note. From our standpoint, cost and income factors make it almost mandatory that advances of $500 or less be handled through CAS rather than on an installment or time note.

Without being arbitrary, it should be possible to sell the majority of our small borrowers and many of the larger borrowers on the convenience and flexibility of a revolving credit line.

1. Once a line of credit has been established, cash advances may be obtained without delay. It is not necessary to spend valuable time negotiating each advance.

2. Funds may be obtained through any teller or by mail - in cash or by deposit to your customer's checking account.

3. Payments are as low as 5% of the balance each month or any larger amount that your customer wishes to pay. Service charges are made only for the time the money is being used.

4. Both money credit and charge account purchases appear on the same statement - an excellent help to the monthly budget.

5. Balances in excess of $600.00 carry a preferred rate of 1% on the amount over $600. This is a plus feature for the larger borrower.

In the process of substituting the use of Instant Money for other types of loans, we have a number of possible situations that need to be defined in order to have a uniform approach in our internal and customer relationships.

CUSTOMER HAS A CREDIT CARD AND AMOUNT OF LINE IS ADEQUATE

Obtain authorization from the CAS authorization center and complete the transaction as outlined in CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - INSTANT MONEY - PROCEDURES.

CUSTOMER HAS A CREDIT CARD BUT AN INCREASE IN LINE IS NEEDED

The account should be discussed with a CAS credit manager to obtain the benefit of CAS file information and past experience. If information is adequate to approve an increase in line, the CAS credit manager will record the increase in line that is agreed upon. If further customer information and/or investigation is required, whatever is necessary will be handled at the banking location having the customer contact. Upon approval of the increase, an authorization number should be secured and disbursement made in the usual manner.

Photo copies of any additional credit data should be forwarded to CAS to support the increase in line.

NEW ACCOUNTS

New accounts should be opened in accordance with Charge Account bulletins: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CARDHOLDER DEVELOPMENT and CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT REQUIREMENTS.

Instant Money may be disbursed as soon as a favorable credit decision has been reached by the following steps:

1. Call the New Accounts section of CAS and advise them that we have made an Instant Money loan to a new account. Give them the customer's name, street address, city and state, your office and your name. They will give you an account number immediately.

2. Manually complete the Instant Money ticket including the following information in the appropriate position:

   a. Account Number
   b. Name
   c. Street Address
   d. City and State
   e. Your Initials (under approved by)
   f. New Account (in authorization block)

3. On the CAS application form, enter the new account number, the amount of the advance and your initials. Attach this to your discount sheet or other supporting credit data and forward to the New Accounts section of CAS that day. Since the account must be entered in the computer file before a charge can be accepted it is particularly important that there be no delay in CAS receiving these supporting papers.

RENEWAL OF L&D NOTES

L&D notes should not be transferred to CAS by way of Instant Money unless a CAS card can be issued conforming to CAS credit requirements. If installment terms are needed for collection purposes, Installment Loan Department collection procedures are better designed for this purpose.

"NO CARD" ACCOUNTS

CAS should not be intentionally used for Instant Money unless a CAS card can be issued conforming to CAS credit requirements. In rare instances, an Instant Money advance might be made before an investigation is complete and it later develops that a card is not warranted. In those instances only, CAS will mark the account for liquidation and handle as a collection item. These accounts are called "no card" accounts.

TOPIC PROCEDURES

 Date 7/23/70

NEW BULLETIN

When a customer requests an Instant Money loan, the lender should follow this procedure:

1. Ask for the customer's C&S Card.
2. Imprint the Instant Money ticket on the Charge Account Service Imprinter using the customer's card if he has it.

   If he does not have his card, ask customer for identification. Then phone CAS to get the customer's CAS account number. In Atlanta, call the extension given in "Credit Information" listed under Charge Account Service in the Inter-Office Phonebook according to the customer's last name.

3. Fill in the Instant Money ticket. You will need authorization on:
   a. On all requests over $50.
   b. On all requests when the customer does not have a card.
   c. When the customer has the green, temporary card.

   You need no authorization on amounts $50 and under on a regular card as long as it is not listed on the "Stop Charge" list.

4. Atlanta branches will call the computer by using this procedure on the touch-tone equipment:
   a. Dial "4" on rotary dial.
   b. Wait for signal to begin inquiry - a "beep". (For busy signal or on third ring without response, hang up and dial again).
   c. Key in your identification number (caller code).
   d. Key in Inquiry Code (301 for authorization).
   e. Key in Bank number.
   f. Key in CAS Account Number.
   g. Key in Branch Merchant Number.
   h. Key in dollar amount.
   i. Key in "End of Inquiry" (#).
   j. Double-check the account number as the computer answers.

   NOTE: A special situation arises when a cardholder from another CAS city visits Atlanta and requests Instant Money. Procedure is the same if authorization is not required. If authorization is required, and the computer is called, the computer will respond "Account Number Not On File". This is because the account number is in a series assigned to another city, and the computer can not locate the account unless it is preceded by the proper bank code. When this occurs, phone CAS and they will give an authorization number.

NEW BULLETIN

5. Complete the Instant Money ticket by putting your initials in the approval box and writing the authorization number you took from the computer in the authorization box. Then enter the amount advanced to the customer.

6. Inform the customer of the Instant Money fee ($1.00 on $25.00 or less, $2.00 on amounts over $25.).

7. Get your customer to sign the Instant Money ticket, then give him his money and C&S card.

8. Place the Instant Money ticket in the Draft/Deposit Envelope. (Wherever possible, use just one envelope for all Instant Money tickets issued for the day).

9. Fill out the CAS Draft/Deposit Envelope - listing as "net sales" the number of tickets and total dollar amount. The same dollar amount is then entered as "net amount". The Draft Envelope is then put through with other teller's work.

OTHER INTERBANK CARDS (NOT C&S)

Cash advances (Instant Money loans) made on an Interbank card other than a C&S card must be at least $50, and all must be authorized.

Instant Money requests from customers using an Interbank card issued by a bank other than C&S will be handled as follows:

1. Ask for identification. (Be reasonably certain - if in doubt, refer to an officer).
2. Phone CAS and give: (a) customer's name, (b) bank where customer's card issued, and (c) customer's account number.
3. CAS will obtain authorization from issuing bank and will phone teller immediately. Because this will take a few minutes, invite the customer to be seated and briefly explain that we are calling the other city.
4. From this point on, use normal Instant Money routines.

INSTANT MONEY BY MAIL

A procedure has been established for mail requests for Instant Money. If you receive a mail request, refer it to Charge Account Service.

TOPIC PROCEDURE

 Date 11-28-61

New Bulletin

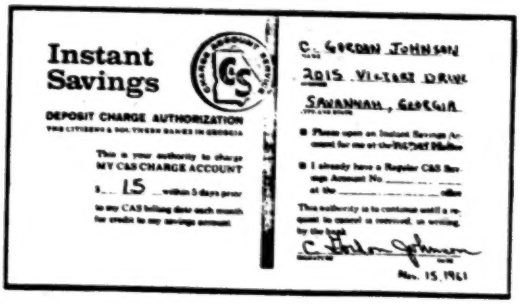
The full potential of Charge Account Service as a Tool for Family Money Management became a reality several months ago with the inauguration of Instant Savings, the companion of Instant Money.

The main problem in family money management is the difficulty of "sticking with" a plan month after month. CAS solves this problem. Merchandise and services can be purchased and, through the flexible payment feature, paid for in a manner that best suits the family budget. Instant Money is available to meet temporary cash needs, and Instant Savings provides for regular savings.

With Instant Savings, CAS customers can buy a savings account through systematic and regular monthly deposits to their savings accounts which are, in turn, charged to their CAS accounts. The automatic aspect of saving while paying, even during periods of heavy purchasing (Christmas, Easter, back-to-school, etc.) makes this CAS feature very important to CAS customers.

This bulletin describes the procedure used by the CAS Department and the Savings Department in processing Instant Savings applications.

CAS DEPARTMENT PROCEDURE Instant Savings Deposit Charge Authorizations are routed to the CAS Department for processing to determine whether the authorization can be approved.



Instant Savings

DEPOSIT CHARGE AUTHORIZATION

This is your authority to charge MY CAS CHARGE ACCOUNT

$ 15 within 5 days prior to my CAS billing date each month for credit to my savings account.

Please open an Instant Savings Account for me at the [illegible] Office

I already have a Regular CAS Savings Account No. _____ at the _____ office

This authority is to continue until a request to cancel is received, in writing, by the bank.

The following procedure should be used in processing authorization:

1. Log in the authorization in the New Application Control Log (29-4072). In the column labeled MERCHANT'S NAME, write in Instant Savings and indicate whether the customer already has a CAS account. In the column labeled REMARKS, indicate whether a new savings account is to be opened.

With this, complete information will be readily available on all authorizations resulting from Instant Savings.

2. Determine whether the customer has a CAS account. If he does, find out if the account qualifies credit-wise for Instant Savings. An account should qualify for Instant Savings if it meets the standards for normal charge privileges. In addition, compare information in his credit folder with that on the Instant Savings application and make additions or corrections in the credit folder where necessary. If he does not have a CAS account, make a credit investigation to see if a CAS account should be approved (see BULLETIN: CHARGE ACCOUNT SERVICE - CREDIT-APPROVAL - NEW APPLICATIONS).

3. If the CAS account qualifies, or if a new CAS account is approved, indicate this approval on the New Application Control Log. Stamp APPROVED and enter the initials of the person making the approval on the Instant Savings authorization. Check the customer's cycle billing date and record it in the lower left corner of the Instant Savings authorization. On the customer's ledger card, stamp INSTANT SAVINGS, enter the amount to be deposited, indicate the office that has the savings account, and enter the initials of the person approving the Instant Savings account. If a new CAS account is opened as a result of the Instant Savings authorization, also enter the words NEW ACCOUNT under the words INSTANT SAVINGS on the ledger card, and also indicate this on the CAS application when it is received. Be sure to show in the customer's credit folder the amount authorized to be deposited, the office that has the savings account, the savings account number, the date of approval, and the initials of the person approving the authorization. Forward the Instant Savings authorization to the Savings Department at the branch or office which has the account. They will notify the customer of this approval.

4. If the CAS account does not qualify, or if a new CAS account cannot be approved, indicate the rejection on the New Application Control Log. On the Instant Savings authorization, stamp DECLINED, show the specific reason for the rejection in the lower left portion of the authorization form, show the date of rejection, and enter the initials of the person rejecting it. Then, make a note on a scratch sheet (25-1255) of the customer's name, address, CAS account number (if appropriate), savings account number (if appropriate), Savings Department designated, date of rejection, initials of the person rejecting it, and the specific reasons for the rejection. Send this note to the Savings Department concerned.

Throughout the month, the CAS Department will receive from Savings Departments in deposit envelopes (29-4012) the Instant Savings Deposit Advice and Statement of Credit tickets (29-4167), shown on page 3, for the automatic charges to customers' CAS accounts. These tickets should be processed through the merchant proof operation, and the total amount of the tickets enclosed in each envelope should be posted to the Instant Savings Control (which is set up in order to compile information for month-end reports). Then, the tickets should be processed just as sales tickets and Instant Money tickets are handled.

INSTANT SAVINGS
DEPOSIT ADVICE & STATEMENT OF CREDIT

AS AGREED, WE HAVE CHARGED YOUR CAS ACCOUNT TO COVER THE AUTOMATIC DEPOSIT TO YOUR INSTANT SAVINGS ACCOUNT

NO. 72980

THE BALANCE IN YOUR INSTANT SAVINGS ACCOUNT (INCLUDING THIS AUTOMATIC DEPOSIT) IS: $ 15

AMOUNT OF DEPOSIT: $ 15

In the event normal charge privileges are revoked or restricted on a CAS account that has Instant Savings in effect, immediately notify the Savings Department that handles the savings account so that they can suspend the deposits to the customer's savings account. Later, if normal charge privileges are reinstated, notify the Savings Department concerned to resume deposits, as appropriate.

SAVINGS DEPARTMENT PROCEDURE The branch or office Savings Department designated to handle the account and/or contact the customer should be the one most convenient for the customer. If he already has a savings account with us, the office servicing that account should be designated. If the customer requests a specific office, his wishes should be honored. In the event the customer fails to designate an office, the one nearest his neighborhood should be disignated.

The Savings Department will receive complete information on each Instant Savings authorization request from the CAS Department. These requests (both approved and rejected) should be processed as rapidly as possible.

Approved Authorization.

1. If the customer already has a CAS account and a savings account, verify both account numbers, write a personal "thank you" letter to the customer, and file the application in a permanent tickler file by cycle billing date. (The form "thank you" letters shown in this bulletin are suggested as guides for your use; if you wish to add a more personal touch, please do so.)

> Your first Instant Savings deposit is an important step toward the steady growth of your savings account. Even in months of unusual expense, your savings program can continue regularly without interruption by using the flexible payment feature of your C&S Charge Account.
>
> It will not be necessary for you to bring your passbook to the Bank. For your convenience, your future automatic deposits will appear on a separate monthly Instant Savings statement showing your new savings balance. This new statement, plus your regular CAS statement, enables you to review both purchases and savings at a glance.
>
> We appreciate this opportunity of working with you in reaching your savings goal through this unique feature of Charge Account Service. Thank you for your account.
> Sincerely yours,

2. If the customer has a CAS account but no savings account, verify his CAS account number; follow the standard procedure for opening a new savings account and prepare a savings passbook (as appropriate); write a personal "thank you" letter (top of page 5), enclosing the passbook, signature cards (single and joint), and a return envelope addressed to the Savings Department; and file the authorization in a permanent tickler file by cycle billing date. To avoid sending the customer a new passbook with a zero balance, the initial Instant Savings charge and deposit should be made immediately to open the account. The first automatic charge should not be made until the following month so that the customer will not receive two Instant Savings charges in one month on his CAS statement.

4. If the customer has neither a CAS account nor a savings account, follow the standard procedure for opening a new savings account and prepare a savings passbook (as appropriate); write a personal "thank you" letter to the customer (below), enclosing a CAS application for the customer to sign (if a signed CAS agreement was not received with the Instant Savings Authorization), his savings passbook, signature cards (single and joint), and a return envelope addressed to the Savings Department; and file the Instant Savings authorization in a permanent tickler file by cycle billing date. Rejected Authorization. All rejections must be handled with extreme care, exercising tact and diplomacy. To achieve maximum benefit and preserve customer good will, all rejections should be handled immediately by direct contact (in person or by telephone) with the customer. It should be explained as carefully as possible why we cannot approve a CAS account or permit the expanded usage of an existing CAS account. As an alternative, the customer should be presented with another method of savings, perhaps by automatic deductions from his checking account.

New Topic

Rather than have the customer feel that he is being turned down "cold" with no rebuttal, he should be encouraged to come into the Bank so that his request can be discussed more completely. We must convey to the customer our desire to do business with him in a manner satisfactory to him and the Bank.

Deposit Charges to Customer's Account. In some of the larger Savings Departments, a year's supply of Instant Saving Deposit Advices are prepared when the authorization is received. These deposit advices are placed in the tickler file and are used monthly in charging the deposit to the customer's CAS account. In other cities, the Instant Savings Authorization is placed in the tickler file and is pulled each month in order to prepare the deposit advice. Either of these procedures may be used at the discretion of the Saving Department.

Within five days prior to the customer's cycle billing date, pull the deposit advice from the tickler file (or prepare a deposit advice), and post the current deposit to the customer's savings ledger card. Then, indicate on the deposit advice the new ledger balance.

Batch the deposit advices in a deposit envelope (draft envelope (29-4022) for Affiliates) and enter the total number and amount of the deposit advices enclosed. The deposit envelope will be processed by the Proof Department and routed to the CAS Department.

Closing of Savings Account. If a CAS customer with an Instant Savings account contacts the Savings Department to close his savings account, they should immediately notify the CAS Department of this action.

ORDERS FOR FORMS The forms and envelopes referred to in this bulletin may be ordered from the Purchasing Department in Atlanta.

THE ADMINISTRATOR OF NATIONAL BANKS

WASHINGTON, D.C. 20220

Office of the

DEC 23 1970

Honorable Frank Wille
Chairman
Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation
Washington, D.C. 20429

Subject: Proposed purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities of The Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee, Chamblee, Georgia; The Citizens and Southern Park National Bank, Atlanta, Georgia; and The Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank, Decatur, Georgia by The Citizens and Southern Emory Bank, DeKalb County (P. O. Atlanta), Georgia.

Dear Mr. Wille:

This is in reply to your letter of October 19, 1970, requesting a report, pursuant to Section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, on the subject proposal.

The Citizens and Southern Emory Bank, the applicant, with I.P.C. deposits of $29.4 million, was chartered in 1950. It operates two branch offices in addition to its head office. The primary service area of the applicant includes the northern portion of the City of Decatur and a major sector of the west central unincorporated area of DeKalb County. The population of the total area is 79,000 persons which is an increase of 43% in the last 10 years.

Competition is afforded by the Citizens Bank of Clarkston, a small independent bank; two branches of the Fulton National Bank; two branches of the First National Bank of Atlanta; and one branch of the Trust Company Bank of DeKalb whose merger into the Trust Company of Georgia is pending. The First National Bank of Atlanta has pending two applications for branches in this area.

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee, with I.P.C. deposits of $15.2 million, was organized in 1959. It operates one branch also in Chamblee. The primary service area of the Chamblee bank includes the City of Chamblee, the adjacent City of Doraville, and a major sector of northern DeKalb County, as well as a small sector of Gwinnett County. This area has a current population of 53,000 persons representing a 154.5% increase in the last 10 years.

Competition comes from the Northeast Commercial Bank, First National Bank of Doraville, Peachtree Bank and Trust, and DeKalb County Bank. With the exception of the latter, each of these unit banks is associated with or in the process of being merged into large Atlanta city banks. There are six applications pending to establish branches within the primary service area of this bank.

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker, with I.P.C. deposits of $18.8 million, was organized in 1919. In addition to its head office it operates one branch, also located in Tucker. The primary service area of this bank includes the unincorporated community of Tucker and adjecent unincorporated portions of DeKalb and Gwinnett counties. The population of this area is 82,703 persons, from 29,264 in 1960.

Competition is afforded by the Northeast Commercial Bank, Peachtree Bank and Trust Company, First National Bank of Doraville, First National Bank of Tucker, and Citizens Bank of Clarkston. With the exception of the latter, each is associated with or in process of being merged into a large Atlanta city bank. There are six applications pending to establish branches within the trade area of this bank.

The Citizens and Southern Park National Bank, with I.P.C. deposits of $7.8 million, was established in 1967 and is a unit bank. The primary service area of this bank includes a sector of the west central unincorporated area of DeKalb County and a small portion of the northeast sector of the City of Atlanta. The population of this area has increased 69.9% in the last 10 years, to 71,000 persons.

Competition is afforded by the DeKalb County Bank, a small unit bank, and the Trust Company of Georgia Bank of DeKalb. Fulton National Bank has pending an application for one branch and First of Atlanta has pending applications for two branches in this area.

The Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank, with I.P.C. deposits of $3.1 million, was chartered in 1969 and has one approved but unopened branch. The primary service area of this bank includes a major portion of the south unincorporated area of DeKalb County. This area has a total population of 73,043 persons, an increase of 30,516 persons since 1960.

Competition is afforded by the Citizens Bank of Clarkston, two branches of Fulton National Bank, two branches of the First National Bank of Atlanta, and one branch of the Trust Company of DeKalb. The First National Bank of Atlanta has applications pending to establish two additional branches within this area.

All five banks involved in the proposal are located and operate in DeKalb County, a "bedroom type" county suburb of Atlanta, Georgia. All five banks are members of the "C & S System" of affiliate banks and most were established originally as a means of expanding the "C & S System" into the suburban areas surrounding Atlanta without running afoul of the restrictive Georgia branching statutes which would have prohibited expansion via branching at these locations. These restrictions now have been lifted and the proposed transactions represent an effort to make de jure branches of Citizens and Southern's affiliated satellite banks.

Consummation of the proposal will have no adverse effect on competition. Because of the affiliate or quasi-affiliate relationships among the banks involved and the close working and operating relationships between them, their combination via a purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities will represent a change in the form of their relationships only and not one of substance. Accordingly, it is believed that there will be no diminution in competition between them since, as a practical matter, none exists. No other deleterious effects on banking competition in the local market is expected, and the banking structure will be unaffected.

It is concluded that the proposed transaction will have no adverse competitive effect.

Very truly yours,

William B. Camp

Subject: Proposed purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities of The Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton, Roswell, Georgia, and The Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs, Georgia, by The Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point, East Point, Georgia.

Dear Mr. Wille:

This is in reply to your letter of October 15, 1970, requesting a report, pursuant to section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, on the competitive aspects of the subject proposal.

The Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point, with IPC deposits of $21.4 million, was established in 1946. It operates two offices in the City of East Point, Fulton County, and has 1.1% of the total IPC deposits held by commercial banks in the county.

The service area of The Citizens and Southern Bank of East point has shown a 17.4% population increase in the last ten years. Local employment is provided by light manufacturing, the Atlanta Airport and its related business, retail concerns and construction. Competition is provided by The First National Bank of Atlanta, Atlanta, Georgia, with IPC deposits of $520.7 million; the Fulton National Bank, Atlanta, Georgia, with IPC deposits of $192.1 million and three other banks each with IPC deposits between $10 and $21 million.

The Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton, with IPC deposits of $5 million, was organized in 1967. It operates one office in Roswell, Fulton County, and has .3% of the total IPC deposits held by commercial banks in the county.

The primary service area of The Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton has experienced an 84% population increase in the past 10 years. The area is presently changing from rural to residential in response to the growth of the City of Atlanta. Competition is provided by the Roswell Bank, Roswell, Georgia, with IPC deposits of $13 million and the Trust Company of Georgia Bank of Sandy Springs, Sandy Springs, Georgia, with IPC deposits of $3.9 million.

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs with IPC deposits of $16.5 million, was organized in 1959. It operates one office in Sandy Springs, Fulton County, and has .9% of the total IPC deposits held by commercial banks in the county.

The primary service area of The Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs has shown a 107% population increase in the past 10 years. The area is a bedroom community for the City of Atlanta. Employment is provided by concerns housed in adjacent office parks and in the City of Atlanta. Competition is provided by the Fulton National Bank, Atlanta, Georgia, with IPC deposits of $192.1 million; The National Bank of Georgia, Atlanta, Georgia, with IPC deposits of $83.9 million; the Roswell Bank, Roswell, Georgia, with IPC deposits of $13 million and the Trust Company of Georgia Bank of Sandy Springs, Sandy Springs, Georgia, with IPC deposits of $3.9 million.

The Citizens and Southern Holding Company, a bank holding company which is a 100% subsidiary of The Citizens and Southern National Bank, Savannah, Georgia, also owns 90% of the stock of The Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point and 5% of the stock of both The Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs and The Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton.

The two merging banks were created as independent banks because Georgia banking laws prohibited them from being established as branches of The Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point. A change in the Georgia law, effective January 1, 1970, makes it possible to operate these two banks as branches. If these banks were truly independent, this acquisition would be anticompetitive. However, the sponsorship, name services, mangement and direction have been provided by The Citizens and Southern Holding Company. The two merging banks are virtually operated and directed as de facto branches in the Citizens and Southern system. Thus, these acquisitions constitute what is essentially an internal reorganization.

Even though there is an overlapping of the service areas of the three subject banks and some branches of The Citizens and Southern National Bank, there has never existed any actual competition between the banks because of their affiliate relationship.

Accordingly, it is the view of this Office that the proposed acquisition will have no adverse competitive effect.

Very truly yours,

William B. Camp
Comptroller of the Currency

REPORT BY THE

BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM NOV 2 [illegible]

to the

Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, under the Bank Merger Act

(12 U.S.C. 1828(c)), on the competitive factors involved in the proposed purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities of

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee, Chamblee, Georgia

The Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank, Decatur, Georgia

The Citizens and Southern Park National Bank, DeKalb County, Georgia

and

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker, Tucker, Georgia

by

The Citizens and Southern Emory Bank, DeKalb County, Georgia

I. THE PROPOSAL

The Citizens and Southern Emory Bank, DeKalb County, Georgia (Emory Bank), with deposits of $37 million, has requested prior written consent of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to acquire the assets and assume the liabilities of The Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee, Chamblee, Georgia (Chamblee Bank), with deposits of $17 million; The Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank, Decatur, Georgia (Decatur Bank), with deposits of $3 million; The Citizens and Southern Park National Bank, DeKalb County, Georgia (Park Bank), with deposits of $8 million, and The Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker, Tucker, Georgia (Tucker Bank), with deposits of $20 million. Decatur Bank and Park Bank operate single offices while Chamblee Bank and Tucker Bank each operate two offices. Emory Bank presently maintains three offices, and it is contemplated the resulting bank would operate all offices of proponents.

Emory Bank is a subsidiary of Citizens and Southern Holding Company, Savannah (C & S Holding Company), and its parent The Citizens and Southern National Bank, Savannah (C & S National), both registered bank holding companies. With the exception of Tucker Bank, which was established in 1919, all of the banks Emory Bank proposes to acquire have been opened for business since January 1, 1960. According to the application, "C & S personnel in cooperation with interested residents and businessmen joined to establish under state or Federal law a bank, or, in the case of the community of Tucker, in DeKalb County, to reorganize/1965/ an existing bank. The Holding Company purchased in the bank the allowable 5% interest. An officer of C & S system, with sufficient banking experience, was recommended by C & S to the Board of Directors of the correspondent associate bank for the office of president of the bank and, if elected, left the employment of C & S to take up these duties. In most cases there also was an infusion of additional management by C & S, and such infusion continued through the years as circumstances required. Management of each correspondent associate has been responsive to the general policy decisions of C & S."

II. THE COMMUNITIES

All offices of proponents are in DeKalb County, one of the five counties which make up the Atlanta SMSA. DeKalb County is contiguous to Fulton County where more than 50 per cent of its residents commute to work. It has an estimated population of 414,100 as compared to 256,800 in 1960.

III. COMPETITION AMONG THE FIVE INSTITUTIONS

Emory Bank's main office is situated at distances of approximately 2 to 8 miles from the head offices of the other banks involved in this proposal. Although there is some overlapping of the areas served by proponents, there is no effective competition existing among them. There is potential for competition developing among them in the event the present close relationships were to terminate.

The loan to deposit ratio at the five banks ranges from 74 to 83 per cent. None of the banks operates a trust department. Interest rates paid on deposits and charged on loans are identical at the participating banks.

IV. OTHER COMPETITIVE EFFECTS

DeKalb County contains the head offices of proponents and 13 other banks including Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates (deposits $23 million), a subsidiary of C & S Holding Company. Banks which are headquartered outside of DeKalb County but operate a branch or branches therein include C & S National (deposits in excess of $1 billion), First National Bank of Atlanta (deposits $699 million), Trust Company of Georgia, Atlanta (deposits $472 million), and Fulton National Bank of Atlanta (deposits $377 million).

As of June 30, 1970, the C & S Holding Company Group operated nine subsidiary banks which together held about 20 per cent of the deposits held by all banks in the State. Further, the Group held a minority interest in several other Georgia Banks.

Nonbank financial institutions are active in the areas served by proponents.

V. CONCLUSION WITH RESPECT TO COMPETITIVE FACTORS

A close relationship has existed among The Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee; The Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank, Decatur; The Citizens and Southern Park National Bank, DeKalb County; the Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker and The Citizens and Southern Emory Bank, DeKalb County. Thus, there is no effective existing competition among proponents. There is some potential for development of competition among them in the event the close relationships were to terminate. Overall, the competitive effects of the proposed transaction would be slightly adverse.

NOTE

As required by the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)), this report is limited to a report on the competitive factors involved, and is not a recommendation as to whether the application should be approved or disapproved. The term "slightly adverse" as used in the above conclusion is defined at 12 C.F.R. 250.182 (34 Fed. Reg., July 10, 1969, p. 11414); Fed. Res. Bulletin, July 1969.

The Citizen and Southern DeKalb Bank
Avondale Estate Georgia

Application for Agent to Acquire the Assets of and Assume Liability to Pay Deposits Made in The Citizens and South Belvedere Bank, Decatur, Georgia and Establish One Branch

Basis for Corporation Approval

The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates, Georgia (DeKalb), an insured State nonmember bank with total deposits of $16,887,000, has applied, pursuant to Section 18(c) and other provisions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, for the Corporation's prior consent to acquire the assets of and assume liability to pay deposits made in The Citizens and Southern Belevedere Bank, Decatur, Georgia (Belvedere), which has total deposits of $7,442,000.[1] The transaction would be effected under the charter and title of DeKalb and, as an incident thereto, the sole office of Belvedere would become a branch of the resulting bank increasing the number of its offices to two.

Competition. The sole offices of the participating banks are .... miles apart. A geographic distribution of deposits indicates however, that business is drawn by both banks from virtually all of DeKalb County, population 353,500.

DeKalb County is a key sector in the thriving Metropolitan Atlanta Area. Its economy is diversified and soundly based with a fairly balanced mix between manufacturing and non-manufacturing activities. Prospects for future growth are favorable.

There appears little or no effective competition between the participating banks. A close relationship is maintained due to their association with The Citizens and Southern Holding Company which owns 93.83% of the outstanding stock of DeKalb and 5% of the outstanding stock of Belvedere. Policies in both banks are largely determined by the holding company. It appears, therefore that this proposal would not eliminate substantial competition, intensify the concentration or reduce the number of banking alternatives in the area.

[1] On the basis of the above information, and other information available to the corporation, the board of directors has concluded that approval of the bank's application is reasonable.

There are twenty-six offices of seventeen banks in the area, and the participating banks rank fifth and eleventh in terms of IPC deposits. The resulting bank would be the fourth largest bank in the trade area with .... of IPC deposits. It is expected that the remaining competing banks in the trade area will continue to provide aggressive competition for the resulting bank.

The Board of Directors is of the opinion that this transaction would not tend to lessen competition, tend to create a monopoly or in any manner be in restraint of trade.

Financial and Managerial Resources and Future Prospects. Financial and managerial resources are satisfactory with respect to both participating banks and are so projected for the resulting bank. Future prospects of the resulting-bank are more favorable than for the participating banks operating as independent units.

Convenience and Needs of the Community to Be Served. Present and potential customers would benefit through the increased financial resources and generally expanded services that could be offered in the immediate area by the resulting bank.

Order

Pursuant to Section 18(c) and other provisions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates, Georgia, an insured State nonmember bank, has applied for the Corporation's prior consent to acquire the assets of and assume liability to pay deposits made in The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank, Decatur, Georgia, an insured State nonmember bank, under the charter and title of the applicant, and to establish a branch at the sole existing location of The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank. Notice of the proposed transaction, in form approved by the Corporation, has been published pursuant to said Act.

Upon consideration of all relevant material, including reports on the * * * factors * * *, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Attorney General,

It Is Ordered, for the reasons set forth in the attached Basis for Corporation Approval, that the said application be and hereby is approved, subject to the following conditions:

1. That the acquisition and assumption transaction and the establishment of one branch may not be consummated before the thirtieth calendar day after the date of approval;

2. That if the acquisition and assumption transaction has not been effected and the branch established within six months from the date of advice thereof to the applicant, or unless, in the meantime, a request for an extension of time has been approved by the Corporation, the consent granted will expire at the end of said six-months period; and

3. That until the transaction becomes effective, the Corporation shall have the right to alter, suspend, or withdraw its approval should any interim development be deemed by the Board of Directors to warrant such action.

Dated at Washington, D. C., this 10th day of October, 1969.

Honorable K. A. Randall

Dear Mr. Chairman:

This is in reply to your letter of July 14, 1969, requesting a report, pursuant to the provisions of Section 18(c) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, on the competitive factors involved in the application of The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank of Avondale Estates, Avondale Estates, Georgia, to purchase the assets and assume the liabilities of The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank of Decatur, Decatur, Georgia.

1. The Banks

The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank of Avondale Estates ("DeKalb Bank"), organized in 1948, operates it sole office in an unincorporated area of DeKalb County which until 1969 was part of the city of Avondale Estates. This bank is affiliated with The Citizens and Southern National Bank of Savannah through The Citizens and Southern Holding Company (a registered bank holding company) which currently owns 93.83 per cent of the 30,000 outstanding shares of stock of DeKalb Bank. The holding company also owns varying interests in a number of other banks, and is the largest banking organization in the state. As of April 30. 1969, DeKalb Bank had total deposits of $16.4 million (including IPC demand deposits of $6.5 million), and net loans and discounts of $13.2 million. Net current operating income increased from $187,319 in 1964 to $353,172 in 1968 and averaged $248,767 during this five-year period.

The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank ("Belvedere Bank"), organized in 1965, operates its single office in the Belvedere area of DeKalb County, an unincorporated area just south of Avondale Estates. This bank is also associated with The Citizens and Southern National Bank, and 5 per cent of its outstanding stock is owned by The Citizens and Southern Holding Company which was active in its formation. As of April 30, 1969, Belvedere Bank had total deposits of $6.9 million (including IPC demand deposits of $2.6 million), and net loans and discounts of $5.6 million. Net current operating income increased from a deficit of $15,107 in 1966 to a surplus of $85,381 in 1968 and averaged $29,703 during this three-year period.

2. The Communities

DeKalb County, wherein both of these banks are located is one of five counties comprising the official Atlanta Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area. It is Georgia's most rapidly growing county, having increased its population from 256,782 persons in 1960 to an estimated 353,500 persons as of April 1, 1968. Although suburban in character, substantial gains in the county's industrial and commercial base are bringing new strength and balance to its overall economic structure, and a diversified economy is developing which is somewhat equally balanced between manufacturing and non-manufacturing activities. An increasing number of firms are also locating warehousing and distribution facilities within its confines, further contributing to the continuing growth of this suburban residential market.

3. Effect on Competition

The merging banks are unit banks both located in the unincorporated area of DeKalb County, 1.8 miles apart. Although branches of the first and third largest banks in the state as well as several smaller banks have offices in the same general area, there are no banks in the intervening area. Therefore, it would appear that this merger will eliminate considerable direct competition between the merging banks.

The immediate anticompetitive effects of this merger may well be lessened by the fact that The Citizens and Southern Holding Company has had full management control of Belvedere Bank since its inception. Under Georgia law existing banks may not expand beyond their headquarters city, and bank holding companies may not acquire more than 5 per cent of the stock of any bank other than those in which they had substantial existing holdings.[1] Hence, so long as DeKalb Bank was in Avondale Estates, further expansion by Citizens and Southern could be achieved only through management control of another bank. Now that Avondale Estates' city limits are altered, DeKalb Bank can expand in the area around its present location, but even that expansion is limited.

Since Citizens and Southern acquired its interest and management control at the time Belevedere Bank was established, the situation is not unlike de novo branch banking in those states where such activity is lawful. However, the fact that Citizens and Southern can only have a 5 per cent interest means that absent this merger there is a real potential that Belvedere Bank might at some time become independent and develop its competitive potential.

4. Effect on Concentration

An appropriate market in which to measure the competitive effects of the merger is DeKalb County, wherein 16 commercial banks operate a total of 25 banking offices. Four additional offices have been approved and applications are pending for the addition of three others. In addition to the participating banks, six of these banks, including one authorized but not yet open, are affiliated with The Citizens and Southern Holding Company through its relationship with The Citizens and Southern National Bank. As of December 31, 1968, these eight banks controlled some 43 per cent of total DeKalb County commercial bank deposits. Three different banking organizations held around 75 per cent of DeKalb County deposits, and four separate banking organizations held over 80 per cent. Hence, the banking market in DeKalb County is highly concentrated. DeKalb Bank itself held about 6.8 per cent of total county deposits while Belvedere Bank held approximately 2.8 per cent of such deposits. Their combined share of these deposits would have been about 9.6 per cent, resulting in the fourth largest bank operating in DeKalb County.

Because of the existing relationship between the merging banks the increase in concentration of banking resources in DeKalb County as a result of this merger would be more apparent than real. However, these figures do demonstrate the dominant position occupied by The Citizens and Southern Holding Company in the DeKalb banking market.

A summary of this report is attached.

Sincerely yours,

Richard W. McLaren
Assistant Attorney General
Antitrust Division

Summary of the Report of the Department of Justice of the Competitive Factors Involved in the Application of the Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank of Avondale Estates, Avondale Estates, Georgia, to Purchase the Assets and Assume the Liabilities of The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank of Decatur, Decatur, Georgia

The merging banks are unit banks both located in the unincorporated area of DeKalb County, 1.8 miles apart. Although branches of the first and third largest banks in the state as well as several smaller banks have offices in the same general area, there are no banks in the intervening area. Therefore, it would appear that this merger will eliminate considerable direct competition between the merging banks.

The immediate anticompetitive effects of this merger may well be lessened by the fact that The Citizens and Southern Holding Company has had full management control of Belvedere Bank since its inception. Under Georgia law existing banks may not expand beyond their headquarters city, and bank holding companies may not acquire more than 5 per cent of the stock of any bank other than those in which they had substantial existing holdings. Hence, so long as DeKalb Bank was in Avondale Estates, further expansion by Citizens and Southern could be achieved only through management control of another bank. Now that Avondale Estates' city limits are altered, DeKalb Bank can expand in the area around its present location, but even that expansion is limited.

Since Citizens and Southern acquired its interest and management control at the time Belvedere Bank was established, the situation is not unlike de novo branch banking in those states where such activity is lawful. However, the fact that Citizens and Southern can only have a 5 per cent interest means that absent this merger there is a real potential that Belvedere Bank might at some time become independent and devleop its competitive potential.

An appropriate market in which to measure the competitive effects of the merger is DeKalb County, wherein 16 commercial banks operate a total of 25 banking offices. Four additional offices have been approved and applications are pending for the addition of three others. In addition to the participating banks, six of these banks, including one authorized but not yet open, are affiliated with The Citizens and Southern Holding Company through its relationship with The Citizens and Southern National Bank. As of December 31, 1968, these eight banks controlled some 43 per cent of total DeKalb County commercial bank deposits. Three different banking organizations held around 75 per cent of DeKalb County deposits, and four separate banking organizations held over 80 per cent.

Hence, the banking market in DeKalb County is highly concentrated. DeKalb Bank itself held about 6.8 per cent of total county deposits while Belvedere Bank held approximately 2.8 per cent of such deposits. Their combined share of these deposits would have been about 9.6 per cent, resulting in the fourth largest bank operating in DeKalb County.

Because of the existing relationship between the merging banks the increase in concentration of banking resources in DeKalb County as a result of this merger would be more apparent than real. However, these figures do demonstrate the dominant position occupied by The Citizens and Southern Holding Company in the DeKalb banking market.

Report of the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation
Under the Bank Merger Act of 1960, as Amended

Subject: Proposed purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities of The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank, Decatur, Georgia, by The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates, Georgia.

The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank, Decatur, Georgia, was organized in 1965 and now holds IPC deposits of $6.6 million. The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates, Georgia, was organized in 1948 and now holds IPC deposits of approximately $16 million. The communities in which the participating banks operate, which are less than one mile apart, are primarily residential in nature, serving as bedroom communities for persons employed in neighboring Atlanta and Fulton County.

There is no competition between the participating banks which are under the common ownership and control of The Citizens and Southern National Bank, Savannah, Georgia, and its wholly owned subsidiary, The Citizens and Southern Holding Company. Since the banks are commonly controlled and operated, and offer the same banking services at the same prices, consummation of this proposal would have no effect on competition.

The effect on competition will not be adverse.

Washington, D. C. 20429

Gentlemen:

As requested in your letter of July 14, 1969, there is enclosed the Board's report, under the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)), on the competitive factors involved in the proposed purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities of The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank, Decatur, Georgia, by The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates, Georgia.

Very truly yours

Elizabeth L. Carmichael
Assistant Secretary

Enclosure.

August 19, 1969

Report by the

BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

to the

Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, under the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)), on the competitive factors involved in the proposed purchase of assets and assumption of liabilities of

The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank, Decatur, Georgia

by

The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates, Georgia

I. The Proposal

The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates, Georgia, (C&S DeKalb), with deposits of $16.5 million, has requested prior written consent of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to purchase the assets and assume the liabilities of The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank, Decatur, Georgia (C&S Belvedere) which opened for business in 1966 and now has deposits of $7.0 million. Each bank operates a single office.

C&S DeKalb is a subsidiary of Citizens and Southern Holding Company, Savannah (C&S Holding Company) and its parent Citizens and Southern National Bank, Savannah (C&S National), both registered bank holding companies. It is understood that C&S Holding Company assisted in the establishment of C&S Belvedere and that C&S National's Pension and Profit Sharing Plan owns 5 per cent of the outstanding capital stock of C&S Belvedere while C&S National's directors and officers control an additional 25.7 per cent of C&S Belvedere's stock. The application states, "C&S Belvedere is now managed, and during its entire period of relationship with the C&S Holding Company, has been managed by C&S National hired and trained personnel."

II. The Communities

Both banks are in DeKalb County (estimated population 354,000), one of the five counties which make up the Atlanta Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area. The county has grown rapidly over the past two decades as a result of suburban residential expansion of Atlanta, and has also experienced a significant degree of commercial and industrial expansion.

C&S DeKalb is located adjacent to Avondale Estates which has a population of about 1,600. It is about 1 mile from Decatur, the seat of DeKalb County, and approximately 8 miles east of downtown Atlanta.

C&S Belvedere is situated in an unincorporated area of DeKalb County about 1.8 miles south of the business district of Avondale Estates and 2 miles southeast of Decatur. In the vicinity of C&S Belvedere is the largest concentrated shopping area in DeKalb County.

III. Competition Between the Two Institutions

While C&S DeKalb and C&S Belvedere are only 1.8 miles apart, there is no effective competition between them because of their close relationship. However, since there is some overlapping of the areas served by the two banks and because available information indicates C&S National does not control a majority of C&S Belvedere's stock, consummation of the proposed transaction would eliminate potential for competition between proponents in the event the close relationship were to terminate.

C&S Belvedere's loan portfolio equals 81 per cent of its total deposits. Instalment paper, real estate mortgages and commercial and industrial loans equal 70, 13, and 9 per cent, respectively, of the portfolio. Time and savings deposits constitute 61 per cent of C&S Belvedere's total deposits. Neither bank operates a trust department.

IV. Other Competitive Effects

The main impact of the instant proposal would be felt in the Decatur-Avondale Estates area where proponents offices are located. This area also contains offices of First National Bank of Atlanta (deposits $804 million), Fulton National Bank of Atlanta (deposits $387 million), Citizens and Southern Emory Bank, Atlanta (deposits $29 million—a subsidiary of C&S Holding Company) and First National Bank of Glenwood (deposits $14 million). The State has granted permission for the establishment of two additional banks in this area. Citizens Bank of Clarkstown would be opened 3 miles north of C&S DeKalb while First State Bank of South DeKalb would be established 3 miles south of C&S Belvedere. The proposed transaction would not have significantly adverse competitive effects on other banks.

As of June 29, 1968, C&S Holding Company's two subsidiaries in DeKalb County held almost 26 per cent of the deposits in that county. An additional 27 per cent was held by five other banks in which the holding company holds a minority interest.

As of December 31, 1968, the C&S Holding Company Group operated nine subsidiary banks which held almost 21 per cent of commercial bank deposits in the State. Further, the group held a minority interest in several other Georgia banks.

The Decatur-Avondale Estates area is served by savings and loan associations and finance companies.

V. Conclusion With Respect to Competitive Factors

A close relationship has existed between The Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank, Avondale Estates, and The Citizens and Southern Belvedere Bank, Decatur, since the organization of the latter. Thus, there is no effective existing competition between proponents. However, there is potential for development of competition between the two banks in the event the close relationship were to terminate. The overall effect of the proposal on competition would be slightly adverse.

Note

As required by the Bank Merger Act (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)), this report is limited to a report on the competitive factors involved, and is not a recommendation as to whether the application should be approved or disapproved. The term "slightly adverse" as used in the above conclusion is defined at 12 C.F.R. 250.182 (34 Fed. Reg., July 10, 1969, p. 11414); Fed. Res. Bulletin, July 1969, p. 610.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, APPELLANT

v.

CITIZENS AND SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK, ET AL.

ON APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA

JURISDICTIONAL STATEMENT

OPINION BELOW

The district court's findings of fact, conclusions of law and order (App. A, infra, pp. 1a-69a) are not reported.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the district court (App. A, infra, p. 69a) was entered on January 25, 1974. The notice of appeal to this Court (App. C, infra, pp. 73a-74a) was filed on March 25, 1974. On April 16, 1974, Mr. Justice Powell extended the time for docketing the appeal to June 24, 1974. The jurisdiction of this Court is conferred by Section 2 of the Expediting Act, 15 U.S.C. 29. United States v. Phillipsburg National Bank, 399 U.S. 350; United States v. First National Bancorporation, Inc., 410 U.S. 577.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether an arrangement whereby each of six separate and independent banks operated as a de facto branch of a larger independent bank competing in the same markets, resulting in interchanges of information, personnel and other resources and a lack of competition, violates Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

2. Whether the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 ousts antitrust courts of jurisdiction to determine the foregoing question, by vesting exclusive jurisdiction over such issues in the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

3. Whether the acquisition by the largest bank in the Atlanta area of five independent banks there, which are not acting as competitors because they have undertaken to operate as its de facto branches, violates Section 7 of the Clayton Act.

STATUTES INVOLVED

Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 38 Stat. 731, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 18; Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 26 Stat. 209, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 1; and Subsection 5(B) of the Bank Merger Act of 1966, 80

Stat. 8, as amended, 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(5)(B), are set forth in Appendix E, infra, pp. 88a-89a.

STATEMENT

The United States filed this civil antitrust action challenging (1) the relationship between the Citizens and Southern banking organization ("C&S" or the "C&S System"), the largest banking system in Atlanta, Georgia, and six legally independent banks in the Atlanta suburbs, which voluntarily operate as de facto branches of C&S, as violating Section 1 of the Sherman Act, and (2) C&S's proposed acquisition of five of these banks, pursuant to agreements entered into in 1970, as violating Section 7 of the Clayton Act. After trial on the merits, the district court dismissed the complaint (App. A, infra, pp. 1a-69a).

A. THE DEFENDANTS

1. The Citizens and Southern Banking System. The C&S System consists of Citizens and Southern National Bank ("C&S National"), its wholly-owned subsidiary Citizens and Southern Holding Company ("C&S Holding"), and eight banks operating in Georgia in which C&S Holding owns a majority stock interest (App. A, infra, pp. 2a-3a; DX 266, p. 116[1]).

C&S National, the lead bank in the C&S System, is also a registered bank holding company under federal law (App. A, infra, p. 2a). See 12 U.S.C. 1844(a). Its home office is in Savannah but it operates more than 60 banking offices in six Georgia cities, about 40 of which are located in the Atlanta area (App. A, infra, p. 2a).

[1] "DX" refers to appellees' exhibits; "GX" refers to government exhibits.

Through C&S Holding, the C&S System presently owns a majority stock interest in three state chartered banks in the Atlanta area.[2] The acquisitions challenged are to be made by two of these banks: "C&S Emory" and "C&S East Point."

As of June 30, 1970, C&S's combined assets of $1.7 billion, combined deposits of $1.4 billion, and combined loans and discounts of $1.1 billion made it Georgia's largest bank system. In the Atlanta area, C&S on December 31, 1971, had deposits of approximately $1 billion. Its 30 percent share of the total deposits held by the 31 banking organizations operating there made it the largest in the Atlanta area (App. A, infra, pp. 2a, 38a-40a).

2. C&S's Special Relationships with the Suburban Banks. Between 1957 and 1969, C&S assisted in the organization of a number of independent banks in the Atlanta suburbs. C&S acquired at least a five percent stock interest in these banks and they are sometimes referred to as the "five percent banks." From their beginnings the banks maintained not only a correspondent relationship but also an operating relationship with C&S so close that they soon began to behave as its de facto branches. See infra, pp. 10, 18-21. It is not disputed, however, that they were legally independent; that the fiduciary obligation of the management of each five percent bank was to all of that bank's stockholders and not only to C&S; that each bank retained independent decision-making power; and that to the extent their management submitted to the direction of C&S, they acted voluntarily.

[2] The three banks and their resources as of December 31, 1970, are: (1) The Citizens and Southern Emory Bank ("C&S Emory"), with four offices in DeKalb County, and assets of $42.3 million, deposits of $35.4 million, and loans and discounts of $28.5 million; (2) the Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point ("C&S East Point"), with four offices in Fulton County, and assets of $28.4 million, deposits of $23.3 million, and loans and discounts of $22.9 million; and (3) the Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank ("C&S DeKalb"), with two offices in DeKalb County, and assets of $28.4 million, deposits of $23.5 million and total loans and discounts of $22.9 million (App. A, infra, pp. 3a-4a). C&S DeKalb is not a defendant in this action since it is not a party to any of the proposed acquisitions (see p. 10, infra, n. 6).

One such bank, the Bank of Stone Mountain, was organized in 1957 with C&S's assistance; in 1959 C&S acquired five percent of Stone Mountain's stock and in 1966 the bank became known as the "C&S Bank of Stone Mountain." That bank, however, later declined to be acquired by C&S and it has since become completely independent of C&S's influence and no longer uses the C&S name. (Tr. 180-181, 184, 188, 204-224, 534A-536, 597-598, 682.)

Of the six institutions involved here, one, the Tucker Bank, chartered in 1919, was in existence long before its association with C&S. It has been operated as part of the C&S System since 1965, when C&S Holding purchased five percent of its stock and it adopted the name "Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker." (App. A, infra, pp. 5a, 15a-16a; DX 267, pp. 1-2.) It is involved only in the Sherman Act aspect of this case, because the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") disapproved its acquisition by C&S, although its relationship as a de facto branch continues.[3]

The five remaining suburban banks all were organized with C&S's assistance and it acquired a five percent interest in them at the time they were organized. Each bank has "a large number of shareholders * * * and no single shareholder owns a significant number of the shares of any such bank" (App. A, infra, p. 43a).

Sandy Springs. Sandy Springs is a community adjoining the north side of the City of Atlanta in Fulton County. The Citizens National Bank of Sandy Springs was organized in 1959 and began operating in 1960. In 1969 it converted from a national to a state-chartered bank and adopted the name Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs. It has one office, and had total assets of $22 million, deposits of $19 million and net loans and discounts of $11.7 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 5a-6a).

Chamblee. Chamblee is located in DeKalb County northeast of Atlanta. The Chamblee National Bank was organized in 1960. In 1969 it converted from a national to a state-chartered bank and adopted the name Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee. It has two offices, and had total assets of $21.1 million, deposits of $18.7 million, and loans and discounts of $10.7 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 4a).

North Fulton. The Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton, a state-chartered bank, was organized in a community in Fulton County north of Atlanta. It has one office, and had total assets of $7.7 million, deposits of $6.3 million and loans and discounts of $5.6 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 5a).

Park National. Citizens and Southern Park National Bank was organized in 1967 in Executive Park, located in DeKalb County north of Atlanta. It has one office, and had assets of $11.1 million, deposits of $9.8 million, and loans and discounts of $3.5 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 4a).

South DeKalb. Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank was organized in 1969 in DeKalb County southeast of Atlanta. It has two offices, and had total assets of $5.1 million, deposits of $4.3 million, and loans and discounts of $2.1 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 4a-5a).

B. GEORGIA BANKING LAW AND C&S's ATTEMPTS TO EXPAND.

C&S contends that it was using its close relationship with the five percent banks as a substitute for de novo expansion which was not permitted by state law. Prior to 1927, Georgia permitted statewide branching. At that time, C&S had three branches in Atlanta. In that year Georgia prohibited branching, but in 1929 it modified the absolute restriction to permit branching only in cities in which the bank's home office was located. C&S, as a Savannah-based company, was therefore unable to branch further in the Atlanta area. In 1965 Georgia authorized branching within the limits of any city where a bank had any offices; in 1970 it extended this limit, effective in 1971, to any county in which the bank has any office (Ga. Code Ann. 13-203(c) (Cum. Supp., 1972)), making the challenged acquisitions possible under state law (App. A, infra, pp. 7a-9a).

The Georgia Bank Holding Company Act, enacted in 1956, prohibited any holding company from acquiring more than fifteen percent of a bank's stock (Ga. L. 1956, pp. 309-312); a 1960 amendment further limited such companies to five percent. Ga. Code Ann. 13-207(a).[4] (See App. A, infra, p. 8a.)

[4] C&S had maintained a degree of indirect control over other banks in Georgia in which it held a five percent stock interest. C&S's direct and indirect control over ten "five percent" banks located in various parts of Georgia, including one of the banks involved here, South DeKalb, was challenged in Independent Bankers Ass'n of Georgia, Inc. v. Dunn, 230 Ga. 345, 197 S.E. 2d 129. The Supreme Court of Georgia held that the C&S System had exceeded the five percent stock limitation provided in Georgia law, and that C&S was indirectly controlling more than five percent of the stock because of "the action of certain * * * [C&S] officers and directors in acquiring such stock, selling it to selected individuals and trusts, and in treating such banks as branch banks of Citizens and Southern." Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Independent Bankers Ass'n of Georgia, Inc., 202 S.E. 2d 78, 80 (Ga.).

C. THE ATLANTA BANKING MARKETS

The Clayton Act count alleged that the proposed acquisitions may substantially lessen competition and would increase concentration (a) in the Atlanta area, consisting of the city of Atlanta and the two counties it straddles, DeKalb and Fulton; (b) in DeKalb and Fulton Counties separately; and (c) in north Fulton County. Within each of the government's proposed markets, which the district court accepted for "purposes of discussion" (id. at 30a-31a), commercial banking is highly concentrated. For example, in the Atlanta area, the top two banks had 53.2 percent of total deposits and the top four, 84.2 percent. The merger would increase these levels of concentration by two percent, would raise C&S's share as market leader from 30 to 32 percent and would reduce the total number of banking organizations in the Atlanta area market from 31 to 26. Similar effects would occur in each of the other markets.[5]

D. THE ACQUISITION PROPOSAL, COMPETITIVE REPORTS, AND THE FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION'S DECISION

In 1970 C&S applied to the FDIC, pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1828(c), for approval of its proposed acquisitions of the six "five percent" banks described above

[5] Tables setting forth concentration levels and the effect of the merger upon them in each market are contained in the district court's findings (App. A, infra, pp. 31a-40a).

(DX 266, 267).* The applications asserted that the banks to be acquired (termed "correspondent associates" by C&S) are "virtually operated and directed as de facto branches in the C&S system," that their "[s]tockholders, customers and competitors have recognized that fact," that the proposed acquisitions "can produce no anti-competitive results * * * since no change is contemplated—except as to form," and that, since no competition exists between C&S and the correspondent associates, no competition could be eliminated by the proposed acquisitions (DX 266, pp. 2-3; DX 267, pp. 2-3).

The Department of Justice, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Comptroller of the Currency submitted competitive reports to the FDIC concerning the proposed acquisitions (GX 38, DX 318, DX 317), pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1828 (c)(4). The Board of Governors and the Comptroller reported that the acquisitions would not have

* The applications actually were filed by two C&S subsidiaries: C&S East Point proposed to acquire Sandy Springs Bank and North Fulton Bank, and C&S Emory proposed to acquire Chamblee Bank, Park National Bank, South DeKalb Bank and Tucker Bank. Since a substantial majority of the two acquiring subsidiaries' stock is owned by C&S Holding, the proposed acquisitions are in substance acquisitions by C&S and have been consistently treated as such (App. A, infra, p. 6a). As each of the banks in a "non-member [of the Federal Reserve System] insured bank," FDIC is responsible for approving the acquisitions in the first instance. 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(2)(C).

anticompetitive effects. The Department, after initially also so reporting, except as to Tucker Bank, made a further investigation and then concluded that all six of the proposed acquisitions "would have a significantly adverse effect on competition" (GX 38, p. 17).[7]

On October 4, 1971, the FDIC approved the acquisition by C&S of the five affiliated banks it had assisted in organizing (GX 33B, 33C), concluding that they do not and never did compete with each other or with C&S (GX 33B, p. 2; GX 33C, p. 2). It disapproved, however, the acquisition of the Tucker Bank (GX 33D).

E. THE DISTRICT COURT'S DECISION

On November 2, 1971, within the 30-day statutory period for such suits (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(6), (7)), the United States filed this action, under Section 7 of the Clayton Act, to enjoin consummation of the five acquisitions approved by the FDIC;[8] the complaint also sought to enjoin the violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act which it alleged existed by virtue of the close working relationships and arrangements among C&S and the six "correspondent associates" (including Tucker Bank). Pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(7)(A), the commencement of the action automatically stayed consummation of the acquisitions. The district court (Moye, J.) subsequently denied appellees' motion to lift the stay prior to trial.

[7] The Department had initially reported that the acquisition by C&S of the five banks C&S had assisted in organizing would have no adverse effect on competition because they had always been "affiliated" with C&S, but that the acquisition of Tucker Bank would injure competition because it had previously been independent. The initial reports were based on the erroneous assumption that, from the time they were organized, C&S completely controlled the "affiliated" banks it sought to acquire and that the latter banks had never been independent competitors. A subsequent field investigation, prompted by information received after the initial reports were submitted, revealed that the assumption of complete control was not correct (GX 38, pp. 3-4).

Following a trial on the merits, the district court entered judgment for the appellees on both the Section 1 and the Section 7 claims.

1. The Sherman Act Claims. The district court held that the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System had "exclusive primary jurisdiction" under the Bank Holding Company Act, 70 Stat. 133, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1841, et seq.) over all questions presented under the Sherman Act concerning the legality of the relationship between C&S and the six "five percent" banks. Citing Whitney National Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U.S. 411, 419, it ruled that the doctrine of "exclusive primary jurisdiction is applicable * * * not only to questions of organization, but also to questions of operation of banks by holding companies" (App. A, infra, p. 26a).

Alternatively, it held that no violation of Section 1 had been established. It made no finding as to initial responsibility for organization of the five banks in whose creation C&S had participated, but noted that "C&S's involvement was prompted by hope that it would be the forerunner of much larger interests in the future. It is also clear that such initial C&S participation effectively precluded ab initio any real competition between the C&S system and the five percent defendant banks" (id. at 11a). It found that C&S's advice and suggestions with respect to rates, hours of operation, types of loans to discourage, and minimum loan rates were generally followed, but that these activities did not amount to collusive price fixing or market division, and hence were not per se violations of Section 1 (id. at 23a-25a).

Applying the "rule of reason," the court found no adverse effects upon competition nor any significant difference from an ordinary correspondent relationship between banks. "There is no evidence of record to conclude that the utilization by the five percent defendant banks of the services or information received by them from C&S National or C&S Holding was a result of any tacit or explicit combinations rather than the natural deference of the recipient to information from one with greater expertise or better sources" (id. at 29a).[9]

[9] The court also appears to have concluded that C&S's relationship with the five percent banks had been endorsed by the government in its jurisdictional statement in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, Inc., No. 73-38, argued April 23, 1974. It also concluded that in 1968 the Department of Justice had acquiesced in the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks by failing to challenge it after participating in an understanding reached during an investigation by the Federal

2. The Clayton Act Claims. Turning to the Clayton Act count, the district court found that the relationship between C&S and each five percent bank "from the very beginning * * * has been much closer than the normal correspondent banking relationship" (App. A, infra, p. 49a). "[T]here is no presently existing substantial competition between the five percent defendant banks and C&S National, or inter sese, or with third parties which would be affected by the proposed merger" (id. at 66a).

Among other things, it found that C&S had been intimately involved in all aspects of the banks' establishment; that the chartering agencies knew that each bank would be affiliated with a large bank, and relied on this in granting a charter; and that C&S officials had stock interests in excess of five percent.[10]

Reserve Board staff to determine whether C&S had violated the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956. The understanding provided that C&S would not be deemed to control a majority of the Board of Directors of a five percent bank by reason of its furnishing a principal operating officer, that officer's purchase of additional shares, or its placing one or two directors on the bank's board, if they were not a majority (see App. A, infra, pp. 18a-19a).

[10] The court also held that the Georgia Supreme Court's decision in Independent Bankers Ass'n of Georgia, Inc. v. Dunn, supra (see p. 8, supra, n. 4), did not affect its determination (App. A, infra, pp. 66a-68a). Following remand of that case, the State Commissioner of Banking and Finance issued an order on May 22, 1974, to implement the decision (App. D, infra, pp. 75a-87a). That order, among other things, provided that C&S must terminate supervision of the five percent banks beyond that which is available to any other bank wishing to enter a correspondent relationship; that no C&S officer or director may serve as a director or officer of a five

The court found that C&S had: furnished the president and other managing officials of each bank; selected directors; arranged for the banks to use the C&S name and logo to increase their public identification with C&S; provided accounting services; set up the same credit administration and controls as for C&S branches; provided for regular credit meetings with C&S officers and affiliates; furnished the five percent banks with C&S guides and manuals; provided an advisory director to meet with each bank's board of directors; supervised their operations through C&S's branch supervision department; and arranged for customer services to be handled as if each bank were a branch of C&S.

The court found that this relationship "is principally a matter of such intangible factors as the intentions of the principals, and that stock ownership is merely one manifestation along with various implementing operating procedures. * * * [I]t makes no difference whether this absence of competition results from a legally effective stock ownership control percent bank; that certain C&S officers and directors who acquired stock in the five percent banks under certain conditions must divest that stock; that C&S Holding must divest its stock in the five percent banks if that stock, together with stock held by C&S National shareholders in the five percent bank, exceeds five percent of the stock of the latter bank; and that signs, advertising and similar written materials disseminated by a five percent bank must distinguish that bank from C&S, if the C&S logo is used.

On June 3, 1974, the district court ruled that the Commissioner's order did not affect its decision, and it amended its original order, nunc pro tunc, accordingly (App. B, infra, pp. 70a-72a).

as in [United States v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, Inc., 1972 Trade Cases para. 74,257 (W.D. Tex.), affirmed, 412 U.S. 946], or from the more intangible factors present here" (App. A, infra, pp. 65a-66a). On this basis it concluded that none of the acquisitions violated Section 7.

THE QUESTIONS ARE SUBSTANTIAL

This appeal presents substantial questions relating to (1) the legality under Section 1 of the Sherman Act of arrangements under which price and service competition has been eliminated among a large bank and smaller independent banks, in the organization of some of which the large bank had assisted, and (2) the legality under Section 7 of the Clayton Act of the large bank's acquisition of such affiliates. These questions are of substantial importance to the banking community and to the administration of the antitrust laws.

In this case six banks have voluntarily undertaken to conduct themselves as de facto branches of a larger banking organization competing in the same markets. The banks are in law and in fact independent business entities, except to the extent that their managements have voluntarily agreed to conduct their banking activities as if they were branch offices of the larger bank. Such a mutual arrangement goes far beyond any ordinary correspondent relationship, for it eliminates all meaningful price and service competition among C&S and the six banks. Whether it be called "de facto branching" or "voluntary control," it is a combination or agreement that violates Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

C&S's assistance in the organization of five of the banks does not result in an exception from the Sherman Act for this conduct. Sponsorship or assistance of a new bank by an established bank is often a necessity for the new bank's organizers, and a sound business practice for the established bank, because it offers the possibility for developing a profitable correspondent relationship. Small banks may also become targets for acquisition by their sponsors as a means of entry into new markets. Thus, sponsorship or assistance to new banks may be both lawful and pro-competitive, provided that the banks are operated as bona fide independent institutions which do not determine their competitive conduct jointly with competing institutions. In this case, however, these conditions were not met. Instead, independent banks, which should have competed against C&S in the Atlanta area, voluntarily became its vassals in violation of the law.

Section 7 of the Clayton Act prohibits C&S from making permanent the present anticompetitive arrangement by acquiring any of the five banks. Under well-recognized criteria governing mergers between direct competitors, their elimination as independent institutions would result in a probable lessening of competition. The banks' voluntary elimination of competition among themselves prior to the acquisitions, in violation of the Sherman Act, does not constitute a defense to the Clayton Act charge.

1. The record and the district court's findings show a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

Each of the six suburban banks was, legally and factually, an independent business entity which C&S was not entitled to control. C&S holds only a five percent stock interest in the banks and, under Georgia law, cannot directly or indirectly own or control a greater percentage. Indeed, its conduct in treating its "five percent banks" as branch banks was one of the factors which led the Georgia Supreme Court to conclude that it was indirectly controlling more stock than state law permitted. Citizens & S. Nat'l Bank v. Independent Bankers Ass'n of Georgia, Inc., 202 S.E. 2d 78, 80.

The Tucker Bank competed independently long before its association with C&S. The other five banks' stock is held by individuals who may not lawfully act as agents of C&S in the banks' affairs. Moreover, C&S has always denied having the power to control the five percent banks.

In 1968, C&S National's president advised the Federal Reserve Board staff that C&S influenced, but did not control, the five percent banks, which were always free to pursue their own interests.[11]

[11] Mr. Mills B. Lane, Jr., stated that "[t]he five percent investment followed the identical philosophy of my father of influencing but not controlling the correspondent bank relationship" (GX 177, p. 8). He also stated that "I look on the use of the name Citizens and Southern [by the five percent banks] as identity with the strong institution, not with control * * *" (id. at 11). In response to a question as to what assurance C&S had that a five percent bank using the C&S

This is borne out by the record. Each bank has an independent board of directors whose members are not officers, employees or directors of C&S or of other banks. The directors and chief executive officers of the banks deny that C&S may dictate policies or practices to them, or control their actions.[12] They follow C&S's advice only when they believe it is in the best interests of their banks.[13] In the words of the regional administrator of national banks, "while they are under the aegis of the C&S national; yes, I must say they are independent organizations" (Tr. 829).

Nevertheless, the district court's findings show, as the appellees claimed, these independent banks have voluntarily submitted to C&S's direction and they conduct themselves as de facto branches of the C&S system. The district court found this direction and control so pervasive—extending even to supervision of the banks by C&S's own branch department (see p. 15, supra)—that it left no "existing substantial competition between the five percent defendant name would not engage in activities which would reflect adversely on the name, Mr. Lane acknowledged that "[t]hat is the gamble we have taken. The only misgiving I ever had about our lack of control is the use of this name" (id. at 15; emphasis supplied).

banks and C&S National * * *" (App. A, infra, p. 66a). That finding, made for purposes of the Clayton Act aspect of the case, establishes that the arrangements have eliminated all meaningful price and service competition. That finding undermines the court's conclusion that the activities of C&S and the five percent banks did not unreasonably restrain trade in violation of the Sherman Act.[14] See, e.g., United States v. Topco Assocs., Inc., 405 U.S. 596, 606-608; Northern Pac. Ry. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 5.

The district court held that the arrangements between C&S and the five percent banks were not agreements or combinations within the meaning of Section 1 of the Sherman Act (App. A, infra, p. 29a). Yet the entire course of conduct between the banks and C&S reflected in each case a mutual understanding that the five percent bank would act jointly and interdependently with C&S. There would have been no other reason for them to permit an advisory director to sit upon their boards of directors, for C&S to supply them with guides and manuals, for C&S's branch supervisor to oversee them, or for them to hold themselves out to the public under the C&S name and logo as interchangeable parts of the C&S System.

[14] This is not the district court's only inconsistency. In discussing the Sherman Act count the court stated that there was no significant difference between an ordinary correspondent relationship and the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks (App. A, infra, p. 28a), but in discussing the Clayton Act count the court concluded the relationship had been much closer than the normal correspondent relationship (id. at 49a).

It was understood by all that this arrangement was voluntary. "There was of course freedom to withdraw from the agreement," just as there was in United States v. Container Corp., 393 U.S. 333, 335. In fact, the five percent bank that C&S had helped organize at Stone Mountain did just that (see p. 5, supra). But, far from showing the absence of an agreement or combination, this freedom to withdraw confirms the factual and legal independence of the five percent banks. Thus, as in Container, the necessary agreement or combination was inherent in the banks' course of conduct, and the district court misconceived this Court's decisions [15] in failing to recognize it.

The district court also appears to have reasoned that, with the exception of the Tucker Bank, which the court did not specifically discuss, the relationship between C&S and the five other banks was lawful because C&S had provided them with very substantial assistance when they were established, and that, from the beginning, they voluntarily had refrained from competing with C&S. But, as we have shown, from the beginning they were also independent business entities which C&S could not control; C&S's hopes and the banks' joint non-competitive behavior are legally immaterial. The Sherman Act would be undermined if, as the district court reasoned, competition among independent entities was "principally a matter of such intangible factors as the intentions of the principals" (App. A, infra, p. 65a). Under the district court's standard, any separate firms in the same industry could agree not to compete and then use the resulting lack of competition to defend a merger which, because of the market shares involved, would otherwise be unlawful under Section 7.

It follows that, whether initiative for establishment of the banks came from C&S or from local businessmen, or, as in the case of Tucker, the bank had long been in existence, their voluntary decision to act as branches of C&S and C&S's agreement to treat them as such violated the Sherman Act. Without deciding who initiated the new banks, the district court found that C&S and many of the principals and stockholders at least hoped that one day C&S would have "larger interests" (App. A, infra, pp. 10a-11a). But such a hope cannot be implemented through an agreement not to compete.

Appellees contended below, at least as to the five sponsored banks, that the rule should be different because the relationships were created "at a time when full branching or ownership was not permitted to C&S" (App. A, infra, p. 22a). But this assertion simply confirms the impropriety of their resort to a "de facto" branching relationship which state law prohibited. See p. 8, supra, n.4. There is a material difference between assisting a new bank to become established as a bona fide independent institution, in the hope of one day acquiring it, and, as was done here, entering into a de facto branching relationship with such a bank upon its establishment.

New banks often require substantial financial and technical assistance from other banks in order to become established.[16] Such assistance includes aid in preparing the charter application, finding a chief executive officer, acquiring and training personnel, site location, advertising and promotions, and pension and profit sharing administration, as well as general counseling, loan participation with the new bank, and other matters (Tr. 54-64, 119-120). A large bank's usual motive for such organizational assistance is to obtain the new bank's correspondent business; as a sponsoring or assisting bank, it has a substantial advantage in this respect (Tr. 54-55, 120). A bank may also sponsor a new bank in the hope of acquiring it at a later time as a means of entering a new market.[17]

The relationship between a newly-organized bank and its sponsoring or assisting bank is not, however, exempt from the antitrust laws. They cannot agree not to compete. Rather, they may undertake a normal correspondent relationship which does not re-

[16] This is confirmed by testimony of officials from other large Atlanta banks who have assisted in the organization of new banks (Tr. 52-54, 119-120; see Tr. 909-910). The availability of this kind of assistance is a factor relied upon by bank regulatory authorities (App. A, infra, pp. 46a-49a).

[17] See pp. 29-32, infra.

strain competition between them. The relationships here went far beyond that,[18] and thus violated Section 1.

2. The district court's conclusion that the Bank Holding Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 133, as amended (12 U.S.C. 1841, et seq.) vested in the Federal Reserve Board "exclusive primary jurisdiction" over the conduct underlying the Sherman Act claim in this case is erroneous.

The district court appears to have confused the concepts of "exclusive" and "primary" administrative jurisdiction. The Board does not have "exclusive" jurisdiction. The Bank Holding Company Act does not authorize the Federal Reserve Board to approve and immunize conduct that would violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act, except for an "acquisition, merger or consolidation transaction" approved by the Board under 12 U.S.C. 1842(c). See 12 U.S.C. 1849(b). If not challenged within 30 days, such a transaction may be consummated and may not thereafter be attacked in any judicial proceeding on the ground that it alone and of itself violates any antitrust law (except the provisions against monopoly). 12 U.S.C. 1849(b).

[18] A correspondent banking relationship is essentially a vertical relationship between banks in which a large bank furnishes services to a smaller bank, and the smaller bank agrees to maintain a "correspondent balance" with the larger bank or pays it an agreed fee (see Tr. 11-44, 91-113, 153-160, GX 193, GX 194). Although the correspondent services might include a number of the types of services made available by C&S to the five percent banks, an ordinary correspondent bank would not subject itself to C&S's direction, would not regularly interchange officers and employees with C&S, would not use the C&S name or hold itself out as part of the C&S System, and would not be so linked with C&S as not to compete with banks in the C&S System.

The Act expressly provides, however, that, except for the foregoing, "[n]othing herein contained shall be interpreted or construed as approving any act, action, or conduct which is or has been or may be in violation of existing law, nor shall anything herein contained constitute a defense to any action, suit, or proceeding pending or hereafter instituted on account of any prohibited antitrust or monopolistic act, action or conduct * * *." 12 U.S.C. 1849(a).

If the district court meant that the relationships among the banks should have been first examined by the Federal Reserve Board under the doctrine of "primary" jurisdiction, and thereafter considered by the court, it also erred. First, as the court itself recognized (App. A, infra, pp. 16a-20a) in 1968 the Federal Reserve Board staff conducted an investigation of C&S's relationship with the five percent banks under the Bank Holding Company Act and concluded that no control of the kind then specified in the Act existed (see pp. 13-14, supra, n.9, 18).

In addition, the Act contains no provision calling for any determination by the Board relevant to any issues in this antitrust case. The Board's jurisdiction over relationships between a bank holding company and existing banks depends upon whether the holding company has "control" over the bank, as defined in Section 2(a) of the Act (12 U.S.C. 1841(a)), i.e., by direct or indirect power to vote 25 percent or more of the bank's stock; or by controlling, directly or indirectly, election of a majority of the bank's directors; or, since the 1970 amendments of the Act (84 Stat. 1761), by directly or indirectly exercising a controlling influence over the management or policies of the bank.

Liability under the antitrust laws, however, is not governed by questions of control of the kind decided by the Board under the Holding Company Act. It depends, rather, on relationships that eliminate or threaten to eliminate competition. Thus, in United States v. E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 353 U.S. 586, this Court's decision did not turn on whether du Pont's stock interest in General Motors gave it "control" of that company; it was enough that its interest enabled it sufficiently to influence General Motors' actions or policies to result in a reasonable probability of anticompetitive consequences. Id. at 598-605.

This court has required preliminary reference of Sherman Act issues to regulatory agencies only where the agency's decision on an issue within its jurisdiction would be directly relevant to later judicial determination of a claim or defense under the antitrust laws.[19] However, as used in the applicable provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act (see pp. 25-26, supra), "control" is not an element of the antitrust claim here, and Congress has expressly provided that determinations under that Act relating to "control" do not create an antitrust defense.

[19] E.g., Ricci v. Chicago Mercantile Exch., 409 U.S. 289.

The district court's reliance upon Whitney National Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U.S. 411, was misplaced. That case did not involve relationships between existing banks claimed to violate the antitrust laws, but rather a question of the proper forum in which to litigate the legality, under state branching law, of the organization of a new bank by a bank holding company. Opponents of the new bank sought to litigate their claims in a suit to enjoin the Comptroller from issuing a charter for the bank, without waiting for the Federal Reserve Board to determine whether the holding company acquisition would violate state branching restrictions.

This Court held that, in those circumstances, since the issues raised were "cognizable by the Federal Reserve Board," proceedings before the Board were "the sole means by which questions as to the organization or operation of a new bank by a bank holding company may be tested." Id. at 419. There was no suggestion, however, that all questions concerning relationships among existing banks must automatically be referred to the Board, particularly when, as here, the questions do not involve issues cognizable by the Board.

3. Under established market share criteria, C&S's acquisition of the five percent banks would violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act. United States v. Philadelphia Nat'l Bank, 374 U.S. 321; United States v. Phillipsburg Nat'l Bank, 399 U.S. 350. The district court rejected this analysis solely on the ground that the banks are not presently competing, concluding that it made no difference whether the absence of competition resulted from legally effective stock ownership or control, or from the voluntary arrangement of the parties.

The district court apparently believed this result compelled by this Court's summary affirmance in United States v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, Inc., supra. But, in Trans Texas the district court had found that the combining banks were not independent competitive entities, because a closely-knit group of stockholders had always controlled their competitive behavior in such a way that the banks never had the capacity to make independent decisions. The Trans Texas decision did not suggest that banks with that capacity—like the five percent banks here—could agree with another bank not to exercise it.

The standard applied by the district court here means, in effect, that, after eliminating competition between themselves in violation of the Sherman Act, firms may make their anticompetitive relationship permanent by merging. Although the district court did not expressly hold that conduct that otherwise violates the Sherman Act may serve as a defense in justification of an acquisition otherwise unlawful under the Clayton Act, its reading of Trans Texas extends that case far beyond its facts.

The court's decision here disregards fundamental stock ownership concepts upon which corporate law depends, and substitutes a standard wholly dependent on the subjective intention of unidentified "principals" to compete or not compete. The antitrust laws cannot be effectively administered on this basis.[20] The district court's approach introduces needless uncertainty and invites violations of both the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act.

4. There is no inconsistency between the United States' contentions in this case, that the operating relationships between C&S and the five percent banks violated Section 1 of the Sherman Act and that C&S's acquisition of those banks would violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act, and the position it has taken in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, Inc., No. 73-78, argued April 23, 1974. The major question in Marine Bancorporation is whether the acquisition by a Seattle bank of a Spokane bank violated Section 7 because it eliminated the Seattle bank as a potential entrant into the Spokane market. We argued that the Seattle bank could have entered the Spokane market without acquiring a major bank there, either by making a so-called foothold acquisition of a smaller bank or by sponsoring a new bank in Spokane and subsequently acquiring it. We explained that the sponsorship method required that the sponsored bank "must be operated for a period of time as a bona fide and independent institution, although it may be affiliated with its sponsor for purposes of correspondent relationships and other inter-bank services, including financial support," and that the Seattle bank "[i]n effect * * * would be establishing its own target for a foothold acquisition in Spokane, and pending its eventual acquisition, * * * could assist it in branching in the city" (Brief for the United States, No. 73-38, pp. 17, 50).

The sponsorship method we there suggested, by which the Seattle bank would have supported a new bank to be operated "as a bona fide and independent institution," is a far cry from the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks it sponsored. Although those banks were separate and independent legal entities, C&S effectively directed their banking policies, practices and operations and treated them for all practical purposes as though they were its branches. C&S made no attempt to treat those banks as "bona fide and independent" institutions. The relationship that exists between C&S and five percent banks would not constitute the kind of "sponsorship" we proposed in Marine Bancorporation as an appropriate method for entering the Spokane market.

In his brief in Marine Bancorporation, the Comptroller of the Currency argued (Br. pp. 46-48, n. 34, 100) that the sponsorship technique would not be a "reasonable business practice" because the C&S case (as well as the Trans Texas case, supra) suggested that the government might challenge both the sponsorship of the bank and its subsequent acquisition as violating Section 7 of the Clayton Act and Section 1 of the Sherman Act. In its reply brief the United States distinguished those cases on the ground that the combination of two banks operating in different markets, which would be the case in Marine Bancorporation, was "a very different situation" from "the acquisition of affiliated banks operating in the same market as the acquiring bank" (Reply Br., p. 2). The United States also pointed out (ibid.):

> Moreover, nothing in the relationship between such banks would violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act, as long as the sponsored bank operates as a bona fide independent institution, i.e., one which determines its banking practices unilaterally rather than jointly with its competitors.

Our submission to this Court in Marine Bancorporation made it clear that sponsorship would be a permissible method of entry only if the sponsored bank was operated as "a bona fide and independent institution * * * which determines its banking practices unilaterally rather than jointly with its competitors." If the relationship between the sponsoring and sponsored banks involved such a degree of influence of the latter by the former as to constitute a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, then obviously sponsorship would not be a permissible method of entry. Similarly, if the subsequent acquisition of the sponsored bank involved something more than a mere "foothold acquisition," it would not be immune from challenge under Section 7.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated, probable jurisdiction should be noted.

Respectfully submitted.

APPENDIX A

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA ATLANTA DIVISION

Civil Action No. 15823

[Filed in Clerk's Office, Jan. 25, 1974, Ben H. Carter, Clerk, by [Illegible], Deputy Clerk]

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, PLAINTIFF

v.

CITIZENS AND SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK, ET AL., DEFENDANTS

FINDINGS OF FACT, CONCLUSIONS OF LAW AND ORDER

INTRODUCTION

A. The Proceeding and the Parties

This action, instituted by the United States of America ("the Government") under Section 15 of the Clayton Act, as amended [15 U.S.C. § 25], seeks injunctive relief to prevent and restrain alleged violations of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, as amended [15 U.S.C. § 18], which would result from the consummation of contemplated mergers within the Atlanta Metropolitan Area which are described below. The Government also alleges violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act [15 U.S.C. § 1] and seeks injunctive relief under Section 4 of that Act [15 U.S.C. § 4].

The defendants, who oppose the relief sought by the Government, are:

1. The Citizens and Southern National Bank ("C&S National"), formerly the Citizens and Southern Bank, a state bank with headquarters in Savannah, Georgia, itself, a product of the merger of the Citizens Bank of Savannah and the Southern Bank of Georgia in 1906. In 1927 the Citizens and Southern Bank was converted to a national banking association which presently exists under the laws of the United States. C&S National presently has over 60 banking offices in six Georgia cities, about 40 of which are located in Fulton and DeKalb Counties. While the home office of C&S National is located in Savannah, its principal executive, actual headquarters and principal place of business are located in Atlanta, Fulton County, Georgia. C&S National is registered under the laws of the United States as a bank holding company by virtue of its ownership of The Citizens and Southern Holding Company ("C&S Holding," infra). As of June 30, 1970, C&S National had total assets of approximately 1.7 billion dollars, total deposits of 1.4 billion dollars, and net loans and discounts of 1.1 billion dollars.

2. C&S Holding, a wholly-owned subsidiary of C&S National, was organized in 1927 and is a registered bank holding company existing under the laws of the state of Georgia having its home office and principal place of business in Atlanta, Georgia. It owns a majority stock interest in several Georgia banks, including three located in the Atlanta area—The Citizens and Southern Emory Bank ("Emory"), The Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point ("East Point"), and the Citizens and Southern DeKalb Bank ("DeKalb"). The latter, DeKalb, is not a defendant, but since it is a part of the overall C&S system of banks in the area involved herein, it is relevant to note that DeKalb presently has two offices, both located in DeKalb County, and as of December 31, 1970, had total assets of 28.4 million dollars, deposits of 23.5 million dollars and total loans and discounts of 22.9 million dollars.

3. Emory, a 95 percent-owned subsidiary of C&S Holding, is a state banking corporation with its headquarters and principal place of business in a residential area of DeKalb County, Georgia, near Emory University. It presently has four offices, all located in DeKalb County. As of December 31, 1970, Emory had total assets of approximately 42.3 million dollars and total loans and discounts of 28.5 million dollars.

4. East Point, a 90 percent-owned subsidiary of C&S Holding, is a state banking corporation with its principal place of business and headquarters in the suburban community of East Point, Fulton County, Georgia. It has four offices, all located in Fulton County. As of December 31, 1970, it had total assets of 28.4 million dollars, total deposits of 23.3 million dollars, and total loans and discounts of 22.9 million dollars.

5. The Citizens and Southern Chamblee Bank ("Chamblee") is a state banking corporation with its principal place of business and headquarters located in Chamblee in the northern part of DeKalb County, Georgia. It was originally organized in 1960 as a national banking association. In 1969 Chamblee converted into a state-chartered bank and adopted its present name. Chamblee has two offices, both located in DeKalb County. As of December 31, 1970, it had total assets of 21.1 million dollars, total deposits of 18.7 million dollars and total loans and discounts of 10.7 million dollars.

6. The Citizens and Southern Park National Bank ("Park National") is a national banking association located in the Executive Park area of DeKalb County, Georgia. As of December 31, 1970, it had total assets of 11.1 million dollars, total deposits of 9.8 million dollars and total loans and discounts of 3.5 million dollars.

7. The Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank ("South DeKalb") is a state banking corporation located in the Candler-Glenwood area of DeKalb County, Georgia. South DeKalb was organized in 1969. At the time of trial it operated one office in DeKalb County and had approval to open an additional office, also in DeKalb County, which was actually opened in November, 1972. As of December 31, 1970, South DeKalb had total assets of 5.1 million dollars, total deposits of 4.3 million dollars and total loans and discounts of 2.1 million dollars.

8. The Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker ("Tucker") is a state banking corporation having its principal place of business and headquarters at Tucker, DeKalb County, Georgia. Tucker was chartered as the Bank of Tucker in 1919, and existed as such until 1965, when C&S Holding purchased five percent of its stock, and Tucker adopted its present name. Tucker operates two offices, both in DeKalb County. As of December 31, 1970, it had total assets of 26.5 million dollars, total deposits of 23 million dollars, and total loans and discounts of 14.8 million dollars.

9. The Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton ("North Fulton") is a state banking corporation and has its only office in Roswell in the northern part of Fulton County, Georgia. It has pending an application for authority to open an additional office to be located in Alpharetta, also in Fulton County, Georgia. As of December 31, 1970, it had total assets of 7.7 million dollars, total deposits of 6.3 million dollars and net loans and discounts of 5.6 million dollars.

10. The Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs ("Sandy Springs") is a state banking corporation having its only office in Sandy Springs, a suburban community north of Atlanta in Fulton County, Georgia. Sandy Springs was organized as a national banking association in December, 1959, as the Citizens National Bank of Sandy Springs. In October, 1969, Sandy Springs converted to a state chartered bank and adopted its present name. As of December 31, 1970, it had total assets of 22 million dollars, total deposits of 19 million dollars and net loans and discounts of 11.7 million dollars.

All defendant banks concededly are engaged in interstate commerce.

In September 1970, Emory entered into agreements to acquire all the assets and assume all the liabilities of Chamblee, South DeKalb, Park National and Tucker. Concurrently, East Point entered into similar agreements with North Fulton and Sandy Springs. All agreements were approved by the stockholders and directors of the banks involved, and, except for the Emory-Tucker agreement, all were approved by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC"), the appropriate federal regulatory agency. Since C&S National owns C&S Holding, and since C&S Holding owns 95 percent of the stock of Emory and East Point, the proposed transactions are, in substance, acquisitions by C&S National and will be so treated by the Court.

Within the time provided by law, the Department of Justice brought this suit pursuant to Section 7 of the Clayton Act to enjoin the five mergers approved by the FDIC and the mergers were automatically stayed. [12 U.S.C. § 1849(b)] The Government also seeks to enjoin, as a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, the operation of Chamblee, Park National, South DeKalb, Tucker, North Fulton and Sandy Springs as part of the overall C&S system, contending that there is a concerted activity of exchanging, on a formal and continuing basis, detailed information as to past, present and future competitive policies and practices which constitutes combinations between and among each of these banks and C&S National. The Court will sometimes refer to these six banks as the "five percent defendants" because C&S Holding owns five percent of the stock of each of those banks—the maximum permitted by Georgia law.

All defendant banks transact business and are located within the Northern District of Georgia which is within the geographical jurisdiction of this Court.

B. Background of this Litigation

1. History of Banking Laws in Georgia

The banks involved in this litigation are the subject of concurrent state and federal regulation by multiple regulatory authorities operating under numerous regulatory statutes. Some of the banking laws of Georgia are particularly relevant to consideration of the issues herein.

Prior to 1927, Georgia's branch banking laws contained no limitation on the geographic areas in which banks could open branches. New branches, however, required the approval of the State Superintendent of Banks. In 1927 the establishment of additional branch banks was absolutely prohibited, regardless of location, but in 1929 the laws were again amended to permit banks to open branches in cities in which their "home offices" were located.

Georgia's branch banking laws were further amended in 1965 to permit banks to branch throughout cities in which they might be located, regardless of the location of their "home office," and, since 1971, banks have been permitted to branch throughout the counties in which they are located.

In 1956 the Georgia Bank Holding Company Act was enacted. Under that law, bank holding companies were initially limited to the future acquisition of only 15 percent of the stock of a bank. Since 1960, however, Georgia law has prohibited Georgia bank holding companies from acquiring more than five percent of the stock of a bank.

In Independent Bankers Assn. of Georgia, Inc. v. Dunn, et al., 230 Ga. 345 (1973), the Supreme Court construed the five percent law [Georgia Laws 1960, p. 67 ff; Ga. Code Ann. § 13-207(b)] and held that stock owned by shareholders, officers and directors of the bank holding company must be attributed to the holding company for purposes of complying with the five percent limitation. [230 Ga. at 362]

2. History of the C&S Bank in the Atlanta Area

C&S National opened its first branch in Atlanta in 1919, at a time when Georgia law contained no limitations as to the geographic areas in which banks could open branches.

When the Georgia banking laws were changed in 1929 so as to permit branching by banks only in cities in which their "home offices" were located, C&S National, with its home office in Savannah, Georgia, was prohibited from further branching in Atlanta although its competitors with home offices in Atlanta were permitted to open branches throughout the city. Thus for the period 1930-1960, thirty-one years, C&S National was confined to the three branches it had opened in Atlanta prior to the 1927 "freeze."

In an effort to avoid the above state restrictions on branch banking, C&S National formed C&S Holding in 1927. In 1946 C&S Holding acquired the stock of East Point. In 1950 C&S National and C&S Holding organized Emory to extend C&S banking services to an area of residential and collegiate growth in DeKalb County. And in 1954 C&S Holding acquired the stock of DeKalb, which is located in the unincorporated Avondale Estates community in DeKalb County. Since the creation or acquisition of these banks, C&S National and/or C&S Holding have owned virtually all of their stock.

East Point, Emory, and DeKalb became part of the C&S system at a time when Georgia laws restricted branch banking, but contained no limitations on bank holding company expansion. The enactment of the Georgia Bank Holding Company Act in 1956, and its amendment in 1960 to prohibit acquisition of more than five percent of the stock of a bank, did not affect C&S Holding's ownership of East Point, Emory and DeKalb, but applied only to future acquisitions. After 1971, of course, C&S National could establish, and has established, branches outside the city limits of Atlanta in both Fulton and DeKalb Counties.

Due to the restrictions described above, in 1959 C&S National began its association with what were termed at trial as "Correspondent Associate Banks," usually referred to herein as the "five percent defendants." They are Sandy Springs, North Fulton, Park National, Chamblee and South DeKalb. C&S National's association with each of the above five percent defendant banks commenced at their inception. Whether the organization of these banks was the "brain child" of C&S National, or of local leaders, in each instance is the subject of some dispute between the plaintiff and defendants—but the record is clear that C&S National and/or C&S Holding participated substantially in the creation of each five percent defendant bank. The record also demonstrates that such participation was undertaken because C&S had no other legal opportunity available to it at that time to enter the market areas involved, and that C&S's involvement was prompted by hope that it would be the forerunner of much larger interests in the future. It is also clear that such initial C&S participation effectively precluded ab initio any real competition between the C&S system and the five percent defendant banks. For example, the assumption of the bank regulators that C&S National would be responsible for the management of the five percent defendants was instrumental in their chartering of those banks. And it is contrary to experience that a profit-making corporation voluntarily creates competition for itself.

The only "Correspondent Associate Bank" in Fulton and DeKalb Counties which C&S National and/or C&S Holding did not participate in the creation of is C&S Tucker. That bank became a correspondent associate of C&S in 1965 when its owners requested C&S National to provide it management. The FDIC did not approve the proposed merger of Tucker with Emory because it concluded that the 1965 acquisition by C&S Holding of effective control of the then independent Bank of Tucker was anticompetitive. As noted above, however, the FDIC did approve the proposed mergers involving Sandy Springs, Chamblee, Park National, North Fulton and South DeKalb.

Basic to the FDIC's approval of the proposed mergers were the following findings (Gx33B; Gx33C):

> "The banks involved in the proposed mergers do not compete today and never have competed in the past.
>
>
> "Under these circumstances, the proposed mergers of these . . . 5 percent banks into a majority-owned C&S subsidiary would not eliminate any existing competition between them or between either bank and any other C&S unit. Such mergers would not alter the existing competitive structure . . . in any way or add to the concentration of banking resources now held by the C&S system.
>
>
> "Furthermore, the Corporation finds no reasonable probability that [the 5% banks] would become disassociated from the C&S system in the future if the proposed mergers are denied.
>
> "If voluntary disaffiliation represents no more than an unlikely possibility, the Corporation finds itself unable to conclude that the proposed mergers would eliminate any significant potential for increased competition between the [5% banks] or between either of them and the rest of the C&S system banks."

The FDIC concurrently approved one branch application by East Point in Fulton County, and one by Emory in DeKalb County, but denied six of Emory's DeKalb County branch applications because it concluded that "competitive considerations outweigh the limited benefit that might accrue to the public from the existence of the additional facilities."

C. The Contentions of the Parties and the Issues Before the Court

In the discussion which follows the Court will first consider the Sherman Act issues and then the Clayton Act charges relating to the proposed mergers.

As a prelude, the Court notes that Section 7 of the Clayton Act [15 U.S.C. § 18] would prohibit the proposed mergers if their effect would be "substantially to lessen competition, or tend to create a monopoly" (1) "in any line of commerce" (2) "in any section of the country." In this case there is no contention that the proposed acquisitions would "tend to create a monopoly." Nor is there any issue as to what is the appropriate "line of commerce." Prior decisions of the Supreme Court foreclose any determination other than that it is "commercial banking" [1]—a determination with which defendants are

[1] United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, 374 U.S. 321 (1963), in which the Court held that "the cluster of products (various kinds of credit) and services (such as checking accounts and trust administration) denoted by the in factual and legal disagreement, although they recognize its inevitability. Thus the Section 7 issues are:

> 1. What is the appropriate "section(s) of the country" to be considered in connection with the proposed mergers?
>
> 2. Will the proposed merger(s) "substantially lessen competition" in that "section(s) of the country"?

With respect to the Sherman Act allegations, defendants not only deny any combination in restraint of trade but also contend that the relationships among the banks involved are governed by the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U.S.C. § 1841, et seq., particularly Section 3 thereof, with which defendants say they have fully complied. Additionally, defendants contend that the Federal Reserve Board ("FRB") has primary jurisdiction of the Sherman Act allegations and that the Department of Justice is not a proper party to raise a claim based thereon.

With respect to the Clayton Act charges, defendants proffer the following defenses: that there is no substantial actual competition which will be eliminated by the proposed mergers, that the proposed mergers are in fact pro-competitive, that any possible anticompetitive effects flowing therefrom would term 'commercial banking' . . . composes a distinct line of commerce." [374 U.S. at 356]; United States v. Phillipsburg National Bank & Trust Co., 399 U.S. 350, 360-61 (1970).

be outweighed by their probable beneficial effect of meeting the convenience and needs of the community to be served, and that the mergers constitute acquisitions of subsidiary corporations to which Section 7 of the Clayton Act does not apply.

I.

Are the Defendants Violating Section 1 of the Sherman Act?

Section 1 of the Sherman Act proscribes "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States. . . ."

The Government contends that the evidence shows that the five percent defendants engaged in a concerted activity of exchanging detailed information on a formal and continuing basis among themselves and between them and the C&S system. This information is said to relate to past, present and future competitive policies and practices and its exchange is alleged to constitute a combination within the meaning of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

The defendants do not deny the close operating relationships existing between the five percent defendant banks and the C&S system. The evidence clearly substantiates such relationships and the defendants' defense actually is predicated thereon. The evidence, however, does not similarly support the inference of such relationships between the five percent defendant banks inter sese. The defendants contend that C&S

National and C&S Holding either caused, or were essential catalytic agents in, the information of the five percent defendant banks, that management control relationships have continued ever since (since 1965 in the case of Tucker), that such relationships are protected by the "grandfather" provision of the Bank Holding Company Act, that the five percent defendant banks are in effect subsidiaries of C&S, and that, therefore, their formation was excluded from the coverage of the antitrust laws by Section 7 of the Clayton Act, and that, in any event, the question of the violation of Section 1 is committed to the exclusive primary jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board.

It is the duty of this Court preliminarily to dispose of challenges to its jurisdiction. As noted above, defendants assert that the Section 1 Sherman Act charges are within the exclusive primary jurisdiction of the FRB. Their position is based primarily on Whitney National Bank in Jefferson Parish v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U.S. 411 (1965), wherein the Supreme Court stated:

> "We believe Congress intended the statutory proceedings before the Board to be the sole means by which questions as to the organization or operation of a new bank by a bank holding company may be tested." [379 U.S. at 419]

Defendants cite an investigation by the FRB in 1967-1968 of the transactions whereby C&S Holding and C&S National acquired stock in and established continuing operating relationships with "C&S Correspondent Associate" banks. (The five percent defendant banks have been C&S Correspondent Associate banks as to which, according to the testimony of C&S's former Chief Executive Officer, there has always been an intention that they would become 100 percent C&S banks as soon as applicable law permitted.) That investigation culminated in an understanding between the FRB and C&S whereby C&S could purchase five percent of the stock in a bank, furnish management assistance, employee benefits, and a president as well as one or two directors and not be deemed to have control of the directors or stock of the bank involved. [Letter from Tynan Smith to Donald I. Baker, March 15, 1972, Gx 177B, quoted at pp. 15-16, infra.] Defendants assert that plaintiff participated in the above investigation, but did not institute any action as a result of said understanding despite the requirement of Section 11(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act that:

> "Any action brought under the antitrust laws arising out of an acquisition, merger or consolidation transaction shall be commenced within such thirty-day period." [12 U.S.C. § 1849(b)]

Defendants further claim that action by the Department of Justice is foreclosed by Section 9 of the Bank Holding Company Act [12 U.S.C. § 1848] which provides for a review by the Court of Appeals of orders of the FRB, which review was never sought.

Plaintiff agrees with the proposition that the FRB has primary jurisdiction to consider questions concerning the "organization or operation of a new bank by a bank holding company" [Plaintiff's brief filed April 10, 1972, pp. 1-2], but claims that that doctrine has no application to the case at hand, stating:

> "Plaintiff therefore concludes that when a question arises concerning only the organization of a new bank by a bank holding company, the answer must be initially found in the Board, subject to review in a Court of Appeals. Logically, this is the 'original exclusive jurisdiction' referred to by the Supreme Court in Whitney. That, however, is not the question involved in this case and the very broad language used in Whitney, put in its proper context, cannot support the proposition that the BHCA has ousted the district courts of their jurisdiction over antitrust violations when the defendant happens to be a bank holding company." [Plaintiff's brief, supra, pp. 6-7]

With respect to the 1967-1968 "investigation" by the FRB, plaintiff submitted on March 22, 1972, a supplement to its previous brief in opposition to defendants' motion to strike and attached thereto a copy of a letter to Mr. Donald I. Baker, Director of Policy Planning of the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice, from Mr. Tynan Smith, Secretary of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System dated March 15, 1972. Smith's letter, a response to an earlier letter from Mr. Baker, outlined the position of the Board of Governors as to the 1968 "understanding" and asserted in part:

> "There was no determination made that approval of the Board under section 3 of the Bank

Holding Company Act was required for Citizens & Southern to retain an ownership interest of 5 percent or less in the banking institutions referred to or to maintain the relationships with those banks in circumstances where Citizens & Southern did not elect a majority of the directors of any such bank. There was an understanding reached between members of the Board's staff and representatives of Citizens & Southern that in those cases where Citizens & Southern purchased 5 percent or less of the stock of a bank, in some instances furnishing a principal operating officer for such bank, as well as other employee benefits, Citizens & Southern would not be deemed to have control of a majority of the directors of such bank on these facts alone. Further, where the foregoing circumstances existed and where control of additional shares was purchased by the bank's executive officer, control of such shares purchased would not be attributed to Citizens & Southern so long as Citizens & Southern did not finance the purchase of such shares, directly or indirectly. Finally, it was understood that even though Citizens & Southern was responsible, directly or indirectly, in placing one or two directors on the boards of such banks, if that number did not constitute a majority of directors of such bank, the Board's staff would not consider that Citizens & Southern could reasonably be held to have control of a majority of the directors of such bank.

"A representative of the Department of Justice Antitrust Division was invited to attend the > conference in April 1968 inasmuch as the Department is the agency of the Government having primary responsibility for enforcement of Federal laws with particularized responsibilities relating to possible anticompetitive practices and in view of the fact that any willful violation of any provision of the Bank Holding Company Act may be referred by the Board to the Department of Justice for appropriate investigation and action." [Letter from Tynan Smith to Donald I. Baker, March 15, 1972. Gx 177 B]

According to plaintiff, the issues involved in the FRB investigation to which the above excerpts refer were "(1) had C&S Holding acquired more than five percent of the correspondent associates' stock without prior Board approval and (2) had C&S Holding controlled the election of a majority of the correspondent associates' directors without prior board approval." [Plaintiff's brief filed March 22, 1972, p. 2]

The Government in its post-trial brief (p. 64) takes the position that the exchange of information which forms the basis of its Sherman Act charge amounts to a per se violation of Section 1 of that Act. The Court believes a brief analysis of this position will be helpful in determining the exclusive primary jurisdiction issue.

Generally, only unreasonable restraints of trade violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act. Some practices such as agreements not to compete, collusive price fixing, agreements for market division, group boycotts, tie-in agreements (perhaps), and pooling of profits and losses, however, have been found to be so intrinsically unreasonable as to constitute what has come to be called per se restraints or violations of the Act. In commenting on the above, Honorable Lee Loevinger, then Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Antitrust Division, noted:

> "It is implicit in this approach to the subject that, whether the legal judgment is based upon intrinsic or extrinsic evidence, it is always intended to be both a pragmatic and a reasonable one. The law proscribes only practices which reasonable men have judged socially incompatible with the maintenance of a free competitive economy. The only difference between the categories of proscribed acts is whether evidence to establish the conclusion that they are unreasonable is inherent in the character of the acts or must be sought in the circumstantial setting. In any case, the rule of reason is implicit in every determination that any conduct is illegal as restraint of trade." [19 A.B.A. Antitrust Section 245, 250]

There is no question that banking is a regulated industry. In its brief of March 17, 1972, the Government notes:

> "Financial institutions, including bank holding companies, are subject to a myriad of statutory regulations administered by a diverse collection of regulatory bodies, including both federal and state agencies. See United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, 374 U.S. 321, 327-330 (1963). Thus, a single institution may be regulated by > the Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Comptroller of the Currency and/or any of several state regulatory agencies depending on its activities. The BHCA is simply one of many statutes which affect the operation of banks." [Plaintiff's brief filed March 17, 1972, p. 3]

Furthermore, the defendants' activities complained of by the Government were all part of the operations of the five percent defendant banks at a time when full branching or ownership was not permitted to C&S, and, in this connection, the Court notes with interest Part D of the Government's jurisdictional statement on appeal to the Supreme Court in U.S. v. Marine Bancorporation, Inc., et al., 1973-1 Trade Cases ¶ 74,496, review granted, 42 U.S.L.W. 3212 (U.S. Oct. 16, 1973) (No. 73-38), in which the Government stated:

> "D. STATE BANKING LAW AND THE AVAILABLE MEANS OF ENTRY INTO THE SPOKANE MARKET
> Washington law permits banks to open branches only in (1) the city in which their headquarters is located; (2) the unincorporated areas of the county in which their headquarters is located; and (3) incorporated communities which have no banking office. Branching into other areas is permitted by the acquisition of an existing bank or banking office. Banks in the State of Washington have, however, achieved de novo entry into areas foreclosed to de novo branching by sponsoring the organization of an affiliate bank, and later acquiring the bank. This method of expansion is a legal (Tr. 732-733) and a well-recognized practice used by large statewide banking organizations (GX I, Tr. 280-298) and recognized by the federal banking authorities (GX H).

"Since NBC's headquarters is in Seattle, it is legally barred from opening a branch in Spokane. In order to enter the city, it would have to make some kind of acquisition. Apart from entry by purchase of a large market share, the method attempted in this case, there were two significant possibilities; acquisition of a sponsored bank formed by its officers, directors or their associates as an independent firm to be assisted by NBC until acquired and converted into a branch; or acquisition of a smaller 'foothold' bank.

"In the last decade, the sponsored bank procedure has become an established method by which national banks enter new markets in Washington. The sponsored bank must first be chartered by the Comptroller as an independent bank. It must be operated for a period of time as a bona fide and independent institution, although it may be affiliated with its sponsor for purposes of correspondent relationships and other inter-bank services, including financial support. It may be acquired by its sponsor, with the Comptroller's consent, after it has become established in the banking structure of the community it serves." (Emphasis added)

The Government contends that the following aspects of the relationships between the defendants have restrained interstate trade and commerce:

1. The routine and systematic practice of furnishing to one another comprehensive information as to past, present and future competitive practices and policies with a purpose of achieving uniformity among the defendants;

2. The provision by C&S National to the five percent defendants of various manuals and memoranda;

3. The provision by C&S National to the five percent defendants of suggestions and advice on such matters as rates, hours of operation, types of loan to discourage and minimum loan rates. [Plaintiff's post-trial brief, pp. 57-64]

The Government also asserts, and the record shows, that the advice and suggestions offered by C&S National are generally followed.

These activities, however, do not amount to collusive price fixing. For example, there is no suggestion that any advice as to rates amounts to more than an expert appraisal of a market situation from the point of view of a lending institution—a type of opinion to which a lending institution would naturally be expected to pay great attention. Likewise, the Court does not view the pleadings or evidence as suggesting the existence of any agreements not to compete or for market division. Considering the relatively local nature of the banking area in which each of the five percent defendants operate, there necessarily is a "market division" in a sense established by their very physical location—a matter with which the Court is not here concerned. While the record will show that there has been some transfer of accounts to one or more of the five percent defendants geographically better located to serve an account, such evidence falls far short of any agreed market division or agreement not to compete. The Court views these apparently isolated instances as analogous to the situation where reservation clerks of one airline inform a potential traveler that another airline offers a more convenient schedule.

The practices involved here do not conform to the accepted definition or description of per se antitrust violations where no resort to context or circumstances is required (or permitted). Thus the following subsidiary questions must be resolved before a violation of Section 1 can be found under the circumstances of this case:

> Is it unreasonable for a five percent defendant bank to implement operating practices similar or identical to those in effect at other C&S banks through the efforts and background knowledge of a principal operating officer furnished by C&S in accordance with the "understanding" with the FRB?
>
> Perhaps the presence of C&S nominees on the Board of Directors contributed to the same end, but is that not what must have been contemplated? What did the representative of the Justice Department's Antitrust Division participating in the conference, out of which the understanding arose, assume would be the function of such nominees?

If the FDIC can approve, as it has, 100 percent ownership and operation of the five percent defendant banks as pro-competitive, can it be said that the lesser degree of control now exercised is per se anticompetitive?

The same type of questions can be posed as to each of the factors relied upon by the Government in support of its claims of per se illegality [see Plaintiff's post-trial brief, pp. 57-64] It would be the Court's obligation to determine the reasonableness of each of the challenged practices in the overall context of the banking situation in the area involved unless the doctrine of exclusive primary jurisdiction is applicable to oust this Court's jurisdiction of the Section 1 charges.

Whitney, supra, is authority that such doctrine is applicable not only to questions of organization, but also to questions of operation of banks by bank holding companies. The Whitney opinion certainly appears broad enough to cover the factual situation here presented. All of the five percent defendant banks, except Tucker, were new banks when the practices complained of were initially instituted. Certainly, in an industry as minutely, exclusively and as duplicatively regulated as the banking industry, there will be an infinite number of accommodations to the requirements of the different regulations, to the economics of the entire industry, to geographical aberrations, and to similar matters that point to the need for expert judgment as to whether a certain practice is or is not reasonable. The Department of Justice's acquiescence in 1968 in an understanding involving the more substantial elements of what it now claims to be Section 1 violations is indicative, to at least a small degree, that such practices were not so violently anticompetitive as to constitute per se violations. Inaction by the Department of Justice with such knowledge would have been a violation of its public duty—and the Court does not impute such negligent inaction to it.

In sum, the Court believes, and holds, that the exclusive primary jurisdiction principle set forth in Whitney is applicable here even though its implementation may require resort not only to the FRB, but also, perhaps, to other regulatory agencies.

Alternatively, having found that the matters complained of are subject to the "rule of reason," the Court finds that, if it has jurisdiction of this matter (in whole or in part—i.e., C&S Tucker) as the Government contends [Plaintiff's brief filed April 10, 1972], the Government has not sustained its burden of proof as to the unreasonableness of the practices involved or with respect to any adverse impact upon competition. There was no evidence that any customers or potential customers were being adversely affected, and the heads of each competitor organization testified that the operation of the five percent defendant banks as 100 percent C&S banks would not adversely affect them or change the competitive impact on them in any way. There is no evidence that the quality of service would have been improved absent the factors of which the Government complains. The Government has relied upon a claimed per se illegality rather than unreasonableness of the specific practices involved and, for the reasons set forth above, the Court does not believe the evidence will support a finding that such practices in fact were unreasonable restraints of trade. Indeed, the Court is constrained to find that, balancing the evidence, such practices were in fact reasonable.

Thus, the Government, in setting forth the alternatives available if the Court should issue an injunction, has pointed to the ability of other small banks to secure correspondent services from banks as far away as Birmingham. Evidence of these alternative sources of service indicates that such assistance to, or sponsorship of, a smaller bank, is desirable and necessary and not anticompetitive. The difference between a pure correspondent relationship and a correspondent associate relationship as set forth in the evidence is merely one of degree, a fine line of demarcation almost impossible for the Court to perceive. [Plaintiff's post-trial brief, p. 9] The Government refers to a correspondent relationship as a "mutually beneficial arrangement whereby the smaller bank receives needed services and the larger bank obtains both the benefit of the correspondent bank balance kept with it and the income from the sale of its services to the smaller bank's customers." [Plaintiff's post-trial brief, p. 42] According to the Government, the only difference between the services provided the five percent defendants banks and the services provided ordinary correspondent banks is that such services are provided to the former "routinely and systematically" [Plaintiff's post-trial brief, p. 42], a difference which the Court finds hard to conceive of providing the basis for Section 1 Sherman Act charges. There is no evidence of record to conclude that the utilization by the five percent defendant banks of the services or information received by them from C&S National or C&S Holding was a result of any tacit or explicit combinations rather than the natural deference of the recipient to information from one with greater expertise or better sources. In either case there is the flow of information as to rates, practices, etc., which the Government apparently applauds or at least condones in a correspondent banking relationship. Taking this into consideration, as well as the Government's previously-quoted statement in Marine Bancorporation, supra, the Court finds as a fact that the relationship between C&S National, C&S Holding, and the five percent defendant banks, and the interchange of information between them, have been reasonable under the circumstances and not in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. The Court also finds that the Government has not sustained its burden of proof to the contrary.

Therefore, the Court will dismiss the Government's charges based on Section 1 of the Sherman Act because they are (1) subject to the primary exclusive jurisdiction of the FRB, and (2) not supported by the evidence. The Court makes its findings on the merits in the interest of judicial economy, having noted the Government's contention that the exclusive primary jurisdiction doctrine is not applicable.

II.

WILL THE PROPOSED MERGERS VIOLATE SECTION 7 OF THE CLAYTON ACT?

Section 7 of the Clayton Act prohibits acquisitions such as are here involved "where in any line of commerce in any section of the country the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition. . . ."

As noted above, the appropriate "line of commerce" has been determined to be "commercial banking."

A. What is the appropriate "section of the country" against which the proposed mergers are to be tested?

The Government contends that the appropriate "section(s) of the country" are the relevant geographic markets of DeKalb County, North Fulton County, Fulton County and the Atlanta area. [Plaintiff's post-trial brief, p. 6] Defendants contend that the appropriate "section of the country" is the "localized suburban banking market" surrounding each bank sought to be acquired by C&S. [Defendants' post-trial brief, p. 9] The Court need not reach this issue, however, because the Court's disposition of the case is based upon factors which make a precise delineation of the market area unnecessary. When considering the question of diminution of competition, however, the Court will, for purposes of discussion, look to sections of the country which the Government contends are relevant.

B. Will any of the proposed acquisitions substantially lessen competition?

DeKalb County

Treating C&S National, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb as one banking organization, there are 19 commercial banking organizations operating offices in DeKalb County. In terms of total deposits and total individual, partnership and corporation ("IPC") demand deposits held by all banking offices located in DeKalb County, the top 4 banks, respectively, are C&S (offices of C&S National in DeKalb County, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb), First National Bank of Atlanta, Trust Company of Georgia, and Fulton National Bank. In terms of outstanding loans, the top 4 banks are C&S (offices of C&S National in DeKalb County, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb), Trust Company of Georgia, Tucker and Fulton National Bank. The shares of total deposits, total loans and total IPC demand deposits accounted for by the four largest banks are as follows:

Banks	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	Total Loans (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Top 2	38.3%	42.7%	34.8%
Top 3	51.8%	52.4%	47.3%
Top 4	62.9%	61.8%	58.2%

C&S (offices of C&S National in DeKalb County, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb) accounts for the following shares of total deposits, total loans and total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in DeKalb County.

Bank	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	Total Loans (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
C&S	24.1%	28.5%	20.1%

Chamblee, Park National and South DeKalb, all of whose banking offices are located in DeKalb County, account for the following shares of total deposits, total loans and total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in DeKalb County:

Banks	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	Total Loans (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Chamblee	5.7%	5.7%	5.9%
Park National	2.9%	1.5%	3.0%
South DeKalb	1.8%	2.5%	1.9%
	10.4%	9.7%	10.8%

Depending on the unit of measurement, Chamblee is the third or fourth largest bank headquartered in DeKalb County.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system (which would include offices of C&S National and South DeKalb) would account for 34.5% of the total deposits of all the banking offices located in DeKalb County, 38.2% of the total loans and 30.9% of the total IPC demand deposits. C&S would also be acquiring the third (or fourth) largest bank headquartered in DeKalb County.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the four largest banks would account for the following shares of the DeKalb County market:

Banks	Deposits	Total Loans	IPC Demand Deposits
Top 2 after mergers	48.7%	52.4%	45.6%
Top 3 after mergers	62.2%	62.1%	58.1%
Top 4 after mergers	73.3%	71.5%	69.0%

Thus, if the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system's share of total deposits, for example, would increase from about 24% to 34%, or an increase of about 40%. The share of total deposits accounted for by the top 4 banks would increase from about 63% to 73%, while that of the top 2 and top 3 banks would increase from 38% to 49% and from 52% to 62%, respectively.

North Fulton County

There are nine commercial banks operating offices in North Fulton County. In terms of total deposits and total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in North Fulton County, the top 4 banks, respectively, are Sandy Springs, Roswell Bank, Fulton Exchange Bank and North Fulton. On June 30, 1970, however, there were only five banks operating offices in North Fulton County: the four banks just mentioned and Trust Company of Georgia Bank of Sandy Springs, which is now a branch of Trust Company of Georgia. The shares of total deposits and IPC demand deposits accounted for by the four largest banks are as follows:

Banks	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/70)	Total Deposits (6/30/70)
Top 2	57.8%	66.4%	64.0%
Top 3	70.1%	78.9%	80.2%
Top 4	80.3%	90.7%	91.9%

As of June 30, 1972, the North Springs Office of C&S East Point accounted for 1.7% of total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in North Fulton County.

As of June 30, 1972, Sandy Springs and North Fulton accounted for 36.4% and 10.2%, respectively, of total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in North Fulton County. As of June 30, 1970, they accounted for 34.4% and 11.7%, respectively, of total deposits held by all commercial banking offices located in North Fulton County.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system (which would include C&S East Point's North Springs Office, North Fulton and Sandy Springs) would account for 48.3% of the total IPC demand deposits held by all commercial banking offices located in North Fulton County and the four largest banks would account for the following shares of IPC demand deposits in North Fulton County:

Banks	IPC Demand Deposits
Top 2 after mergers	69.7%
Top 3 after mergers	82.0%
Top 4 after mergers	92.0%

Thus, if the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system's [2] share of total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in North Fulton County would increase from 1.7% to 48.3%, and the C&S system's share in this area would be twice that of the second largest banking organization, the

[2] These computations consider the five percent defendant banks as completely separate entities (rather than as constituting a part of the C&S system as actually is the case), and of course, do not relate to competition as such but rather to the assignment of statistical proportions to the various entities involved.

Roswell Bank. Two of the four largest banks in the area would become part of the Atlanta area's largest banking organization. In addition, the share of total IPC demand deposits accounted for by the top 4 banks would increase from 80.3% to 92.0%, while the shares of the top 2 and top 3 banks would increase from 57.8% to 69.7% and from 70.1% to 82.0%, respectively.

Fulton County

Treating C&S National and C&S East Point as one banking organization, there are 18 commercial banking organizations operating offices in Fulton County. In terms of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in Fulton County, the top 4 banks, respectively, are C&S (offices of C&S National in Fulton County and C&S East Point), First National Bank of Atlanta, Trust Company of Georgia and Fulton National Bank. The shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits accounted for by the four largest banks are as follows: [3]

Banks	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Top 2	63.0%	55.2%	61.3%
Top 3	78.8%	73.9%	78.1%
Top 4	89.4%	87.0%	88.8%

[3] See footnote 2, supra.

C&S (offices of C&S National in Fulton County and C&S East Point) accounts for the following shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in Fulton County:

Bank	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
C&S	37.2%	30.8%	32.1%

Sandy Springs and North Fulton, both of whose banking offices are located in Fulton County, account for the following shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in Fulton County:

Banks	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Sandy Springs	.7%	.8%	.9%
North Fulton	.3%	.3%	.3%
	1.0%	1.1%	1.2%

Depending on the unit of measurement, Sandy Springs is the eighth or ninth largest banking organization in Fulton County.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system (which would include offices of C&S National in Fulton County, C&S East Point, Sandy Springs and North Fulton) would account for 38.2% of the total loans held by all banking offices in Fulton County, 31.9% of the total deposits and 33.3% of the total IPC demand deposits.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the four largest banks would account for the following shares in Fulton County:

Banks	Total Loans	Total Deposits	IPC Demand Deposits
Top 2 after mergers	64.0%	56.3%	62.5%
Top 3 after mergers	79.8%	75.0%	79.3%
Top 4 after mergers	90.4%	88.1%	90.0%

Atlanta Area

Treating C&S National, C&S Emory, C&S DeKalb and C&S East Point as one banking organization, there are 31 commercial banking organizations operating offices in the Atlanta area, six of which operate offices in both Fulton and DeKalb Counties. In terms of total loans, deposits, and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in the Atlanta area, the top 4 banks, respectively, are C&S (offices of C&S National, C&S East Point, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb), First National Bank of Atlanta, Trust Company of Georgia and Fulton National Bank. The shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits accounted for by the four largest banks are as follows:

Banks	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Top 2	60.5%	53.2%	58.0%
Top 3	76.2%	71.3%	74.3%
Top 4	86.7%	84.2%	85.0%

C&S (offices of C&S National, C&S Emory, C&S East Point and C&S DeKalb) accounts for the following shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in the Atlanta area:

Bank	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
C&S	36.4%	30.0%	30.6%

Chamblee, Park National, South DeKalb, Sandy Springs and North Fulton account for the following shares of total loans deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in the Atlanta area:

Banks	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Chamblee	.5%	.6%	.8%
Park National	.1%	.3%	.4%
South DeKalb	.2%	.2%	.3%
Sandy Springs	.6%	.7%	.8%
North Fulton	.3%	.2%	.2%
	1.7%	2.0%	2.5%

If their deposits (as of 12/31/71) were combined ($71,142,252), these five banks would be the equivalent of the sixth largest banking organization in the Atlanta area. Sandy Springs and Chamblee are, alone, the tenth and eleventh largest banking organizations in the Atlanta area, respectively.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system (which would include the offices of C&S National in the Atlanta area, C&S Emory, C&S DeKalb, C&S East Point, Chamblee, Park National, South DeKalb, Sandy Springs and North Fulton) would account for 38.2% of the total loans held by all banking offices located in the Atlanta area, 32.0% of the total deposits and 33.0% of the total IPC demand deposits. C&S would also be acquiring the tenth and eleventh largest banks in the Atlanta area.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the four largest banks would account for the following shares in the Atlanta area:

Banks	Total Loans	Total Deposits	IPC Demand Deposits
Top 2 after mergers	62.2%	55.2%	60.5%
Top 3 after mergers	77.9%	73.3%	76.8%
Top 4 after mergers	88.4%	86.2%	87.5%

From June 30, 1970, to June 30, 1972, 56 branch banking offices were opened throughout Fulton and DeKalb Counties. The major Atlanta banks, C&S, First National Bank of Atlanta, National Bank of Georgia, Trust Company of Georgia and Fulton National Bank accounted for 42 of these offices (18 in Fulton County and 24 in DeKalb County). The remaining offices were established by banks headquartered in the suburban portions of the Atlanta area. Thus the 1971 amendments to the Georgia branch banking laws have already resulted in the opening of 29 offices in the suburban portions of the Atlanta area by the large Atlanta banks.

Since January 1, 1970, C&S has submitted 12 applications for approval of banking offices in the Atlanta area to the Comptroller of the Currency. Of this number, four applications were denied, six were approved but have not yet been opened, and two are still pending. The two pending applications and three of the six approved applications are for locations in the suburban portions of the Atlanta area. Since January 1, 1971, C&S, Emory, DeKalb and East Point have opened a total of eight banking offices in the Atlanta area, five in its suburban portions.

Since January 1, 1971, the following suburban Atlanta banks have established new offices in the Atlanta area: Bank of the South, Citizens Bank of Georgia, DeKalb County Bank, DeKalb Exchange Bank, Fulton Exchange Bank, First Palmetto Bank, Peachtree Bank and Trust Company, Peoples Bank and Roswell Bank. South DeKalb has opened an additional office; North Fulton has filed an application for an additional branch which is still pending, and Sandy Springs was contemplating branching before the proposed mergers were agreed upon.

The Atlanta area is growing rapidly. Much of this growth is occurring in DeKalb County and North Fulton County and is expected to continue.

C. The Nature of the Relationships Between the Defendants

Defendants argue that, as a result of the past and present relationships between the defendants, the banks involved in the mergers here under consideration do not compete today, have never competed in the past, and that there is no reasonable probability that they will ever compete. [Defendants' post-trial brief, p. 17] The Court will examine the factual basis of that argument.

C&S and C&S Holding were intimately involved in all aspects of the organization of the five percent defendant banks which are the subject of these proposed mergers. The influence of C&S and C&S Holding was significant.

Mr. Mills Lane, who was then president of C&S, and other officers of C&S played a major role in the selection of directors for each of the five percent defendant banks. The directors of each five percent defendant bank were assured of C&S support and have relied upon it. Furthermore, C&S and its officers helped distribute the stock for each five percent defendant bank.

There are a large number of shareholders in each C&S five percent defendant bank, and no single shareholder owns a significant number of the shares of any such bank. C&S Holding, of course, directly owns five percent of the stock of each five percent defendant bank and substantial additional amounts of the stock of each such bank are owned by C&S officers and employees and officers and employees of other C&S banks and their business associates.

Approximately 50 percent of the stockholders of Park National are directors, officers or employees of C&S, Park National, or some other C&S-affiliated bank. An additional 38 percent of the stockholders of Park National are customers of C&S or one of its affiliated banks.

Approximately 44 percent of the stockholders of North Fulton are officers, directors, or employees of C&S or some C&S-affiliated bank or correspondent associate bank. An additional 50 percent of the stockholders of North Fulton are customers of C&S or one of its affiliates.

Approximately 46 percent of the stockholders of South DeKalb are officers, directors or employees of C&S or one of its affiliates. An additional 18 percent of such stockholders are officers, directors or employees of a C&S correspondent associate bank. In total, approximately 66 percent of South DeKalb's stockholders are present or former officers, directors or employees of a C&S bank.

Approximately 24 percent of the stockholders of Sandy Springs are present or former officers, directors or employees of C&S or one of its affiliate banks. An additional 28 percent of the stockholders of Sandy Springs are officers, directors or employees of a C&S correspondent associate bank. In addition, 48 percent of the stockholders of Sandy Springs are C&S customers.

Approximately 12 percent of Chamblee's stockholders are officers, directors or employees of C&S or one of its affiliate banks. An additional 16 percent are officers, directors and employees of a C&S correspondent associate bank. About 29 percent of Chamblee's stockholders are customers of C&S or one of its affiliate banks, and 41 percent are customers of a C&S correspondent associate bank.

The percentage of stock in each correspondent associate defendant bank held by the above categories of persons has not varied greatly from the time of organization until the time of trial; and there is no claim of violation of the 1968 "understanding" with the FRB.

As noted above, however, subsequent to the trial herein, the Georgia Supreme Court issued its decision in Independent Bankers Assn. of Georgia, Inc. v. Dunn, et al., supra, in which it held that the ownership of shareholders, officers and directors of the bank holding company must be attributed to it in complying with the five percent ownership limitation imposed by Georgia law.

According to an uncontroverted supplemental affidavit of Mr. Joseph A. Hall, III, dated August 1, 1973, the percentage of stock in each of the defendant correspondent associate banks owned by C&S Holding and the officers and directors of C&S, C&S Holding, and C&S affilate banks and their wives, as of the time of the affidavit was as follows:

Sandy Springs	11.75%
Chamblee	6.41%
North Fulton	13.26%
Park National	10.33%
South DeKalb	36.87%

It would appear that the Georgia Supreme Court's decision in Independent Bankers Assn. of Georgia, Inc. v. Dunn, et al., supra, will affect the following percentages of stock (the above percentages less 5 percent) in the five percent defendant banks:

Sandy Springs	6.72%
Chamblee	1.41%
North Fulton	8.26%
Park National	5.33%
South DeKalb	31.87%

In view of the fact that the decisions of the Supreme Court of Georgia in Independent Bankers were issued following the trial in this Court, the Court is left to speculate in large part as to the effect of the Georgia Supreme Court's opinion on the relations inter sese of the defendants herein insofar as they are predicated on stock ownership or control.

A survey taken in May 1971 showed that the overwhelming majority of the shareholders in each five percent defendant bank expressly anticipated that C&S would provide management for their bank and that their bank would be merged into C&S or one of its affiliate banks if and when Georgia's branch banking laws were changed to permit such mergers. Many of the directors of the five percent defendant banks assumed that such mergers would eventually be possible because the branch banking laws would be amended or the city limits of Atlanta would be expanded so as to bring into the city some of the areas where such banks are located. Similarly, the executive officers of C&S anticipated that C&S or one or more of its affiliates would merge with the five percent defendant banks as soon as possible.

C&S has made one of its own officers available to be hired as president for each five percent defendant bank and, in each case, the person supplied by C&S has had prior training and experience within the C&S system. With few exceptions each of the officers and employees for each five percent defendant bank had been previously employed or trained by C&S.

With respect to each of the five percent defendant banks, the bank regulators (state and federal) knew that such defendant would be affiliated with a large bank, presumably the C&S system, and such knowledge was instrumental in their decisions to approve the charters of those banks. The affidavit of Mr. William B. Camp, Comptroller of the Currency, states:

> "Each of the three defendant banks mentioned above—C&S Sandy Springs, C&S Chamblee, and C&S Park National—were originally chartered as national banks. The charter was issued by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency after a careful examination of, among other things, the identity of those persons applying for the charter; their business and banking experience and associations; the proposed management for the banks; the likelihood of financial success of the proposed banks; and the proposed bank's ability to serve the convenience and needs of the community in which it was to be located. In each instance, the Comptroller of the Currency in considering the application was aware of, and took account of, the fact that the proposed new bank, its directors and management would be closely associated with The Citizens and Southern National Bank ("C&S National"). This fact represented a substantial favorable element in considering each of the applications. The participation of C&S National with the new bank and the availability of C&S National management to act as executive officers of the new bank was deemed to be significant and to some extent controlling in establishing that the bank would be financially successful and could serve all of the banking needs of the potential customers. The relationships between C&S and these banks, and the contributions by C&S in the form of advice and service relationships, was instrumental in the decision for approval of the original charters for these banks by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Mr. Camp's affidavit went further:

"While C&S Sandy Springs and C&S Chamblee operated under a national bank charter (1959-1969 and 1960-1969, respectively) and during C&S Park National's entire history, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency had occasion regularly to consider the relationship between these banks and C&S National. Among other such occasions were the periodic examinations of the banks by national bank examiners. The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency was thus fully aware of the existence of the relationships between these banks and C&S National, including the various operating relationships more fully spelled out in the applications submitted on behalf of The Citizens and Southern Bank of East Point and The Citizens and Southern Emory Bank to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation respecting the proposed mergers of those banks with certain of the defendants named above. The Comptroller of the Currency considered then that existence of such relationships were in accordance with all applicable laws, and at no time objected to the existence of such relationships. While the Comptroller of the Currency at all times required of these banks, their management and their directors that all necessary operational and fiduciary responsibilities required by law in connection with the existence of these banks as separately chartered banks be adhered to, the Comptroller of the Currency understood that one of the purposes for establishing these banks was to make available to the management of these banks C&S expertise in certain portions of the Atlanta metropolitan area where C&S, by reason of Georgia branch banking laws, could not establish its own operations." [Defendants' Exhibit 152]

State Superintendent of Banks, Mr. W. M. Jackson, whose office approved the charters for North Fulton and South DeKalb, testified that his office was aware of, and found favorable to approval, the fact that C&S would provide the management for those banks and that they would be closely affiliated with the C&S system.

C&S selected, or helped select, the physical location of each five percent defendant bank. In some instances, C&S Holding purchased and held the land for the new five percent defendant bank, and sometimes this was done before the directors of such bank were even selected. C&S's market research department prepared the application for charters and made the required economic survey for each five percent defendant bank.

C&S obtained the necessary insurance coverage for each new five percent defendant bank; it assisted in selecting and procuring equipment and forms for each new bank; it supervised the promotional activities at the time each new bank was organized; and it is safe to say that, from the very beginning, the relationship between C&S and each five percent defendant bank has been much closer than the normal correspondent banking relationship. These factors have an important bearing on the nature, quality and quantity of competition, if any, between the five percent defendant banks and C&S National because, concededly, large banks do not usually furnish presidents or other managing officers from their own staffs to new banks, and large banks are not usually or normally involved in the distribution of stock for new banks or in the selection of their directors.

There are additional factors relevant to this issue. Park National has used the C&S name and logo at all times since it was organized, as have North Fulton and South DeKalb. Sandy Springs adopted the C&S name and logo in 1966 so that it would become more closely identified with the C&S system. Currently there are no visible differences between C&S's branches and the five percent defendant banks in that all of them use the C&S logo and have "Citizens and Southern" in their names. In fact, there is a conscious effort made by all parties to insure that the five percent defendant banks are identified publicly as C&S banks.

A few specific examples are illustrative.

A few years ago, Sandy Springs developed serious liquidity problems because of heavy loan losses. C&S recommended that its then president, Mr. Cook,[4] be replaced and Mr. Cook subsequently resigned. Mr. Louis J. Fortuna, who had spent 16 years as an employee and officer of C&S, was then elected the new president of Sandy Springs. When Mr. Cook resigned, the directors of Sandy Springs assumed that the new president would be someone who had been previously employed by C&S, and, despite the serious problem resulting during the tenure of the former president who also had been supplied by C&S, they never considered terminating the relationship between Sandy Springs and C&S or looking elsewhere for a president.

Likewise, when Mr. Harris retired as president of Chamblee, he was replaced by Mr. Bobby G. Morris, who previously had been employed by C&S.

The same emergency personnel "pool" that is available to C&S's branches is available to, and used by, the five percent defendant banks when vacancies are caused by sickness, vacations, resignations, or other emergencies. (The five percent defendant banks, however, must pay for each person utilized from this emergency personnel pool.)

The management and staff of all C&S banks, including the five percent defendant banks, are covered by the same employment, salary administration, and fringe benefit programs. It should be noted, however, that the five percent defendant banks are responsible for their own employment programs, administer their own salary programs and have adopted fringe benefit programs which, while similar to those of C&S, are funded by the individual banks. Officers and employees of the five percent defendant banks participate in pension and profit sharing plans which, while funded by the individual banks, are administered by C&S. If an individual is transferred from C&S to a five percent bank, his length of service at C&S is recognized for purposes of the pension and profit sharing plans. Two presidents of five percent defendant banks acknowledged that their benefits and opportunities for advancement relate to their service within the C&S system, rather than with an individual five percent bank, and that they identify their future and associate their careers with the C&S system.

The accounting policies of the five percent defendant banks are the same as those of C&S and its branches and affiliates, and the actual accounting work is done by the same people at the same place.

The credit administration and controls for the five percent defendant banks are the same as those for C&S and its branches. The officers of each five percent defendant bank attend regular credit meetings with officers of C&S and its affiliates. Certain loans made by the five percent defendant banks are reviewed (at the weekly credit meeting) for credit worthiness by C&S.

The routine credit audits performed by C&S on the five percent defendant banks are vitally important to the continued safety and stability of these banks. Small independent banks frequently develop serious problems because they lack such service and supervision. (However, it should be noted, of course, that C&S National is not the only possible source of such service and supervision.)

The officers and employees of the five percent defendant banks receive and use all of the guides and manuals distributed to and used by C&S banks and branches, including the C&S General Operating Guide, the C&S Installment Loan Audit Manual, the Personnel Policy Manual, the Commercial Loan Audit

Manual and the C&S Consumer Credit Operating Guide. Also available to the five percent defendant banks are C&S's helicopter and ground transportation services; any new sales tool, product, or service developed by C&S is automatically provided to the five percent defendants.

An executive officer from C&S generally meets with the Board of Directors of each five percent defendant bank. He is referred to as the "advisory director" and his purpose is to provide needed information about C&S banking to the directors of the five percent defendant bank, and those directors depend on him for such advice.

C&S assists the five percent defendant banks when they have capital problems. When Sandy Springs developed the liquidity problem referred to above, that bank's capital was increased by the purchase by C&S from Sandy Springs of a $100,000 capital note. C&S again provided needed capital to Sandy Springs in 1968 when it purchased a $125,000 convertible debenture. C&S provided additional capital for Chamblee by purchasing a $300,000 convertible debenture in 1968. It likewise purchased a $200,000 capital note from North Fulton.

The five percent defendant banks have been supervised by C&S's branch supervision department since that department was organized in the early 1960's. Through its branch supervision department, C&S regularly reviews the goals, objectives and performance of each five percent defendant bank, following the same procedures that it follows with its branches.

Thus it reviews the comparative performance of all banking offices, of the five percent defendants, as well as all others in the C&S system.

All banking services provided by C&S are made available to the customers of the five percent defendant banks. The customers of the five percent defendant banks can handle their banking transactions, such as cashing checks and making deposits, at all the offices of C&S National and its affiliates as well as at the offices of other C&S correspondent associate banks. Similarly, customers of C&S can handle their banking transactions at the offices of the five percent defendant banks. This multiple use of C&S banking facilities is made possible by the joint public identification of the facilities and their identical internal procedures.[5] Many persons who are customers of either a C&S system bank or a five percent defendant bank make use of the other's banking facilities, at least on occasion. Some of the check cashing and deposit transactions of the five percent defendant banks involve C&S customers who have their accounts at other C&S banks.

Mr. W. M. Jackson, identified above, testified that he routinely contacted executive officers of C&S National whenever bank examinations revealed the need for adjustments in the C&S five percent banks. Mr. Jackson testified that he felt he achieved better results by approaching C&S Holding than by approaching the presidents of the correspondent associate banks, and the Court notes that the adjustments were always made by C&S Holding. He testified also that he realized that the five percent bank would have the same policies, arrangements and support as other C&S banks. Both Mr. Jackson, and Mr. Dunn, the new superintendent of banks, testified that the public views the five percent defendant banks as C&S banks, and that testimony is well supported in the record, which includes similar testimony from officials of other banks in the Atlanta Metropolitan Area.

Despite the differences in the percentage of stock of the five percent defendant banks owned by C&S Holding and the officers and directors of C&S, C&S Holding, and C&S affiliate banks and their wives [see p. 36], it is clear to the Court that all of the defendant banks have the same strong affiliation with the C&S system, and the Court is unable to perceive any difference in degree thereof. This factor, among others, leads the Court to conclude that stock ownership is not the most important cement, nor is even necessary to the maintenance of these strong relationships which appear to be due to other more intangible matters described above.

While the persuasive weight of the testimony does not always, or necessarily even usually, coincide with the greater number of witnesses who testify on any subject, it is nevertheless a matter of interest and relevance that no witness (for either the Government or the defendants) testified that the proposed mergers would have any adverse economic or competitive implications whatever (the Government's expert witness did not testify on this point, but merely on what are the relevant sections of the country so far as this litigation is concerned). When questioned as to whether the five percent defendant banks are regarded as part of the C&S system or as independent entities, every banker who testified (including officials of banks which compete with the five percent defendant banks) expressed the view that the proposed mergers would have no effect whatsoever on competition as it relates to third parties.[6] The Court concurs.

D. Conclusions of Law as to Section 7 Issues

Section 7 of the Clayton Act [15 U.S.C. § 18] provides in part:

> "No corporation engaged in commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital and no corporation subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission shall acquire the whole or any part of the assets of another corporation engaged also in commerce, where in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly.

---

[6] As the Supreme Court made clear in Brown Shoe Co. v. U. S., 370 U.S. 294 (1961), Congress, in redrafting § 7, was specifically concerned with the "protection of competition, not competitors." [370 U.S. at 320] Thus the fact that such competition is provided, if it is, by a branch of C&S National, rather than by an independent corporation is immaterial.

The Bank Merger Act of 1966 [12 U.S.C. § 1828 (c)] provides in part:

"(5) The responsible agency shall not approve—
(A) any proposed merger transaction which would result in a monopoly, or which would be in furtherance of any combination or conspiracy to monopolize or to attempt to monopolize the business of banking in any part of the United States, or

(B) any other proposed merger transaction whose effect in any section of the country may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly, or which in any other manner would be in restraint of trade, unless it finds that the anticompetitive effects of the proposed transaction are clearly outweighed in the public interest by the probable effect of the transaction in meeting the convenience and needs of the community to be served.

* * * *

"(7) (A) Any action brought under the antitrust laws arising out of a merger transaction shall be commenced prior to the earliest time under paragraph (6) at which a merger transaction approved under paragraph (5) might be consummated. The commencement of such an action shall stay the effectiveness of the agency's approval unless the court shall otherwise specifically order. In any such action, the court shall review de novo the issues presented.

> (B) In any judicial proceeding attacking a merger transaction approved under paragraph (5) on the ground that the merger transaction alone and of itself constituted a violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of Title 15, the standards applied by the court shall be identical with those that the banking agencies are directed to apply under paragraph (5)."

Bank mergers are subject to the competitive standards of Section 7 of the Clayton Act. U.S. v. First City National Bank of Houston, 386 U.S. 361 (1967). In a bank merger case, this Court must make a de novo review of the transaction to determine whether it has anticompetitive effects and, if so, whether the merger's benefits to the community outweigh its anticompetitive disadvantages. U.S. v. Third National Bank in Nashville, 390 U.S. 171 (1968). The burden of proving the reasonable probability of a substantial lessening of competition is upon the Government as plaintiff, U.S. v. Philadelphia National Bank, 374 U.S. 321, 363 (1963). The defending banks have the burden as to the "convenience and needs" defense allowed under the Bank Merger Act. U.S. v. First City National Bank of Houston, supra, 386 U.S. at 366; U.S. v. Connecticut National Bank, 362 F. Supp. 240, 279 (D. Conn. 1973).

With respect to the degree of proof required to make out a Section 7 case, the Supreme Court stated in Brown Shoe:

> ". . . Congress used the words 'may be substantially to lessen competition' (emphasis supplied), to indicate that its concern was with probabilities, not certainties. Statutes existed for dealing with clear-cut menaces to competition; no statute was sought for dealing with ephemeral possibilities. Mergers with a probable anticompetitive effect were to be proscribed by this Act. . . ." [370 U.S. at 323]

See also U.S. v. E. I. duPont deNemours & Co., 353 U.S. 586, 607 (1957); U.S. v. I.T. & T. Corp., 324 F. Supp. 19, 30-31 (D. Conn. 1970); U.S. v. Connecticut Nat'l Bank, 362 F. Supp. 240 (D. Conn. 1973).

It being conceded that "commercial banking" is the appropriate "line of commerce", and the Court having adopted (for purposes of discussion) the Government's delineation of the relevant "section of the country" to be considered, the determinative issue is whether the effect of the proposed mergers "may be substantially to lessen competition." As noted previously, it is the mergers' effect upon competition that is important—not the corporate identity of the participants or competitors. The Court has found that there would be no diminution of competition between the five percent defendants inter sese, whether they are considered as separate corporate entities or as branch components of the C&S system, or between such five percent defendants and third parties, if the acquisitions sought were approved. The other side of the coin, of course, is the effect of the acquisitions upon competition between the five percent defendants and the C&S system of banks.

In this connection, an important judicial precedent to be considered is the opinion of the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas, El Paso Division, in U.S. v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, Inc., —— F. Supp. —— (W.D. Tex. 1972); 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257; Civil No. EP-72-CA-83 (W.D. Tex., filed Nov. 13, 1972); affirmed, 412 U.S. 946 (1973), which is almost squarely in point.

In Trans Texas, the district court did not find the mergers or acquisitions to be anticompetitive and therefore refused to enjoin them. It is also noteworthy that the mergers in Trans Texas had received, as have the proposed mergers here, the approval of the appropriate federal banking regulators. The background of that litigation is set out in the report of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System approving the Texas applications, which was quoted and considered by the District Court:

> "Majority shareholders of El Paso Bank organized First Bank in 1948, Northgate Bank in 1959 and Border Bank in 1971. El Paso Bank is a full service bank serving the entire El Paso area, whereas the other three serve primarily their own particular suburban area. All four banks are in the same market area and absent the common ownership would be competitors to some extent despite the disparities in their size.
>
> "The United States Department of Justice advised the Board that in its opinion consummation of the proposal would have a significantly adverse effect on competition. Its advice was based on its views that the subject banks were in actual competition and that there was some degree of impermanence in the control relationship.

"On the basis of the record, the Board concludes that there is no significant existing competition between the banks involved. This is due to the fact that two individuals and their business associates control a majority of the voting shares of El Paso Bank, 86% of the shares of the First Bank, 86% of the shares of Northgate Bank, and 75% of the shares of Border Bank. The two individuals themselves control over 25% of the voting shares of each of the three smaller banks.

"In view of the close relationship between the banks over a long period of time, and the lack of any evidence on the record that dissipation of the common control is likely in the future, the Board concludes that present and potential competition would neither be foreclosed by approval of the application nor encouraged by its denial. Neither does it appear that competition with and between other banks in the area would be affected in any significant way.

"Considerations relating to the financial and managerial resources and future prospects of Applicant and the banks concerned are satisfactory and consistent with approval. Since the institutions involved are presently under common control it is unlikely that consummation of the proposal will have a significant effect on the banking convenience and needs of the communities to be served, although Applicant does propose to expand the services offered by the smaller banks. These considerations are consistent with but provide little weight toward approval of the applications. It is the Board's judgment that consummation of the proposed transaction would be in the public interest, and that the application should be approved.

"On the basis of the record, the application is approved for the reasons summarized above." [—— F. Supp. at ——, 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 at p. 93,208]

The defendants in Trans Texas contended, as do defendants herein, that the proposed acquisitions were without effective competitive significance as the three banks to be acquired were "common ownership" affiliates of El Paso and that the effect of the acquisition would be merely to change the form of banking organization from its present structure to that of a group banking organization. In Trans Texas the Department of Justice took a position similar to that espoused in this case and contended that the banks involved were in actual competition with each other and that there was a degree of impermanency in the control relationship. In Trans Texas some of the problem also stemmed from the anti-branching statutes of the State of Texas. After considering the legalities of the existing control relationships (which will be considered below in the instant case) and in the absence of evidence that the common control would be likely to be dissipated in the future, the Trans Texas court held that there was no significant existing competition between the banks involved and therefore that the proposed transaction, if consummated, would have no significant adverse competitive effect on the banking community. Accordingly, the Trans Texas court denied injunctive relief.

The Trans Texas court recognized that the principal issue to be decided was the question of control, and stated that "If control does exist the Court is of the opinion that the three neighborhood banks lacked competitive capabilities and there was no actual competition among them." [—— F. Supp. at ——, 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 at p. 93,213]

The Supreme Court's summary affirmance of the district court's decision in Trans Texas is a decision on the merits and must be followed by this Court. Although the Supreme Court has noted that, "As frequently occurs in the case of summary affirmance, the decision . . . is somewhat opaque," [7] it seems to this Court that with respect to the Trans Texas case, the Supreme Court had to determine that the district court's finding of lack of competition between merging entities was sufficient to preclude application of the Clayton Act despite the fact that in Trans Texas, as in this case, the banks were separate entities and the lack of competition resulted from a control situation—in Trans Texas a third party legal stock control situation—here, a similar situation but one based on numerous implementing relationships in addition to stock ownership.

Fundamental to the decision of the District Court in Trans Texas was the underlying finding of the FRB that ". . . there is no significant existing competition between the banks involved." The reason for that lack of competition was explained in the Board's findings as ". . . due to the fact that two individuals and their business associates control a majority of the voting shares . . ." of those banks. The FRB also found, as pointed out specifically by the District Court, that "All four banks are in the same market area and absent the common ownership would be competitors to some extent despite the disparities in their size." The District Court also determined that, by reason of their common control by two individuals and their business associates, there was no actual existing competition between the banks involved.

The evidence as to the existing competition between the five percent defendant banks and C&S National and other banks in the C&S system is marshaled at pp. 22-35 of the Government's post-trial brief. There is, of course, some such competition. It was variously denominated as "friendly" or "minor" competition. It might well be denominated "rivalry" rather than "competition." But, considering the geographic dispersal or separation which exists between the five percent defendant banks, as well as between those banks and other constituents of the C&S system of banks, this is to be expected.

The Government admits that it did not challenge the initial acquisition by C&S Holding of its five percent interest in each of the five percent defendant banks because those acquisitions "were competitively insignificant when made." [Plaintiff's post-trial brief, p. 14] The Government has not carried its burden of demonstrating any substantial increase in the degree of control or change in quantity of competition between the date of the initial acquisitions and the date of the trial. The Government has postulated that if the mergers are denied, C&S may establish de novo branches in direct competition with the five percent defendants. To find a viable competitive result from such a postulate, the Court would have to speculate that (1) the five percent defendant banks actually would break away from C&S, (2) they would become successful independent banks despite their past reliance on C&S, and (3) the regulatory agencies would approve directly competitive branching by C&S. The evidence of record does not support, individually or collectively, such postulates or speculations. Furthermore, it seems to the Court that the relevant issue is not what the banks would do if the mergers were denied by this Court, but rather what they would do in the absence of any ruling by the Court, or perhaps in the absence of litigation, although the dividing line between these two statements of the appropriate issue is quite fine. In any event, it is the Court's finding that the relationship as among the defendants is principally a matter of such intangible factors as the intentions of the principals, and that stock ownership is merely one manifestation along with various implementing operating procedures. Thus stock divestiture, if required, would not necessarily or probably eliminate the relationships which negative competition among the defendants, and the evidence of record would not permit a finding that even complete divestiture would result in any substantial increase in competition among them.

Thus, the Court finds as a fact that there is no presently existing substantial competition between the five percent defendant banks and C&S National, or inter sese, or with third parties, which would be affected by the proposed merger. So far as the issues in this antitrust case are concerned, the Court is of the opinion that it makes no difference whether this absence of competition results from a legally effective stock ownership control, as in Trans Texas, or from the more intangible factors present here. It is the absence of competition which is the crucial factor in a Section 7 case, not the underlying factors producing that situation.

Amicus curiae, Independent Bankers Association of Georgia, Inc., urges the Court to find for the Government on the ground "that if this Court permits these five banks to be merged into the Citizens & Southern Emory Bank and the Citizens & Southern Bank of East Point, it will forever preclude the Georgia Commissioner of Banking and Finance from carrying out the judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia" in Independent Bankers Association of Georgia v. Dunn, —— Ga. —— (1973), Opinion on Reconsideration and Rehearing, decided November 15, 1973. The jurisdiction and function of this Court, however, relates to the enforcement of the antitrust laws of the United States—not the banking laws of the State of Georgia. The Georgia courts are perfectly competent for the latter. Thus, the defendants' disregard of Georgia's banking laws is only relevant to the issue of whether the effect of the proposd mergers "may be substantially to lessen competition." The Court has already found that substantial competition does not presently exist among the defendants. Possible past violations of Georgia's banking laws cannot change that factual finding. The Court notes that the Supreme Court of Georgia does not appear to consider such violations as may have existed as being more than technical—that is, as negativing the good faith of those involved. [—— Ga. —— (1973), Opinion on Reconsideration, p. 10] To be relevant such violation must involve the issue of potential competition or potentially increased competition. Thus, in Trans Texas the district court excluded a situation where there might be "evidence in the record that dissipation of the common control is likely in the future." [—— F. Supp. at ——, 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 at p. 93, 215] It is clear to the Court that there will be some dissipation of the common stock ownership of the defendant banks due to the Georgia Supreme Court's opinion in Independent Bankers. As has been indicated above, however, there is no evidence to show that the five percent defendants have exerted, or since the Independent Bankers decision, are exerting, any "threshhold" competitive influence [i.e., U.S. v. Penn Olin Chemical Co., 378 U.S. 158 (1964); U. S. v El Paso Natural Gas, 376 U.S. 651 (1964)] whatsoever vis-a-vis the C&S system. Furthermore, there has been no showing that substantial competition would arise among the defendants if the common ownership is dissipated to the full extent required by the Supreme Court of Georgia.

Although the Government argues that there have been successful partings of the way in the past as between downtown Atlanta banks and their suburban affiliates, the Court finds the evidence does not show that the markets involved can continue to support, ad infinitum, new independent banks in place of affiliated banks. The Government concedes the beneficial effect of the advice and assistance which the downtown banks and others provide the smaller correspondent banks. The record supports the smaller banks' need for such services. There is no evidence of the possibility or feasibility of any arrangement as among the suburban banks, with or without the downtown banks, which would provide the required services in a more competitive manner. The Court is left to speculation and conjecture on this point. Therefore, following the lead of the district court in Trans Texas [—— F. Supp. at ——, 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 at p. 93,210], this Court will consider the findings of the FDIC with respect to the mergers in this case. Weighing the findings of the FDIC (considered by this Court as in the nature of expert testimony only) with the Court's own judgment of the underlying evidence herein, the Court finds that the proposed mergers will not substantially lessen competition, but, in fact, will be pro-competitive, and therefore the Court finds for defendants and against plaintiffs.

In view of the above disposition of the Section 7 issues, the Court does not reach defendants' so-called "subsidiary" defense. Similarly, there is no need to consider the defendants' contention that any anticompetitive effects of the proposed mergers are out-weighed in the public interest by the probable effect of the mergers in meeting the convenience and needs of the communities to be served.

Let judgment enter in favor of defendants.

The statutory stay in effect against the effectuation of the proposed mergers shall expire upon the Government's failure to appeal from this order within the time permitted by law. Otherwise, the proposed mergers shall not be effectuated until the completion of any appeal taken by the Government.

SO ORDERED, this —— day of January, 1974.

ROBERT M. MOLER
Deputy Commissioner

DEPARTMENT OF BANKING AND FINANCE

STATE OF GEORGIA
Atlanta 30334

May 24, 1974

Gentlemen:

As you are aware, the Supreme Court of Georgia on November 15, 1973, finally ruled in the matter of the Independent Bankers Association of Georgia vs. W. M. Jackson, Superintendent of Banks (now E. D. Dunn, Commissioner of Banking and Finance), The Citizens and Southern National Bank, the Citizens and Southern Holding Company, et al. As a result of that decision, the Commissioner is required by the Court to take such action as he deems necessary to bring about a divestiture of what the Court has determined is direct and indirect control of certain banks in this State by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company and/or The Citizens and Southern National Bank.

In compliance with the Order of the Court and in conformance with its decisions in this case as interpreted by the Department and the Attorney General of this State, attached hereto is the final Order in this matter. For purposes of this Order, "ten five percent banks" and similar phrases shall mean:

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Thomas County, Thomasville

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Milledgeville, Milledgeville

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Hart County, Hartwell

First State National Bank, Bainbridge

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Dalton, Dalton

The Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank, Decatur

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Cobb County, Austell

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Tifton, Tifton

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Colquitt County, Moultrie

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Jackson, Jackson

"Bankable loan" shall mean loans which mature in not more than five years, or, if amortized by at least annual payments on the principal, in not more than thirty years, and which call for a rate of interest payable by the borrower which is not less than the rate of charge by the bank to other bankers outside their employment or charged uniformly to all of its own employees; collateral securing such "bankable loans" shall have an appraised value equal to not less than 120% of the amount of the loans.

While the Order is required to be directed only to the codefendants in the suit decided by the Supreme Court of Georgia under appeal from the Superior Court of DeKalb County, the responsibilities of the Commissioner under The Banking Laws demand that the Order be extended to all other banks which are found to be similarly situated. Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that

The Citizens and Southern Park National Bank, Atlanta

The Cartersville Bank, Cartersville

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee, Chamblee

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Rockdale, Conyers

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Clayton County, Forest Park

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Henry County, McDonough

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Gwinnett, Norcross

The Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton, Roswell

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs, Atlanta

Farmers and Merchants Bank of Senoia, Senoia

The Citizens and Southern Springfield Bank, Springfield

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker, Tucker

The Citizens and Southern Bank, Warner Robins

The National Bank of Fitzgerald, Fitzgerald

The National Bank of Walton County, Monroe will fully comply with the Order attached hereto as if each of these banks had been included as codefendants and that The Citizens and Southern National Bank and the Citizens and Southern Holding Company shall treat their relationship in all respects with these banks as if they had been included among the "ten five percent banks."

Any interested party who feels that any five percent bank which was not a codefendant in the Independent Bankers Association of Georgia action should not be subject to the same ORDER as herein set down may file written objections with the Department within thirty days of the date of these Orders. Such Orders shall not be effective against those banks for which objections have been filed on a timely basis. The Commissioner reserves the right to issue a valid new Order as to that bank upon the occurrence of one of the following:

(1) Failure by the person filing the objections to file written evidentiary support for his objections in detail within thirty days of the date objections are originally filed; or
(2) A determination by the Commissioner after proper hearing in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act that such bank should not be exempt from the Orders contained hereinabove.

Implementation of these Orders will require certain filings with the Department and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation pursuant to Sections of The Banking Law and the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and Regulations. Oath of Directors forms are included for reporting election by the Board to fill directors' positions vacated in accordance with the Orders, and each new director must complete a Biographical and Financial Information Report. Copies of both reports bearing original signatures should be submitted to the Department and the FDIC under a transmittal letter stating the name of the director being replaced. Similar procedures should be followed where officer positions are changed as a result of these Orders. After required divestitures of stock have been made, Change of Ownership Reports must be filed with the Department and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and forms are enclosed for that purpose. Original signatures must be contained on copies filed with the Department and the FDIC. The filing of these reports is in addition to and does not limit the requirements of Paragraph 11 of the Order.

It is the sincere desire of the Department that implementation of the Orders and proceedings can occur with a minimum disruptive effect on the affairs of the banks involved and that sound operations and management stability will not be adversely affected. In the event that serious disruptive effects cannot be avoided, the Department should be notified immediately by a request for special instructions or temporary waivers of time limitations imposed by the Order. Such requests will be considered individually with respect to each bank making the requests in light of the seriousness of the disruption and the responsibilities of the Department and all other parties under the Court Order and the interpretations rendered by the Courts.

Requests for interpretations, special instructions, and individual consultations by the Department on all matters contained herein must be submitted in writing and will not be considered on verbal presentment as with other matters under the general supervision and interpretation of the Department. With the cooperation of all parties, compliance with the directions and interpretations of the Courts should not seriously affect the operation of your institution.

Yours very truly,

E. D. DUNN Commissioner

ORDER

May 22, 1974

As directed by the Superior Court of DeKalb County, IT IS ORDERED:

1. That The Citizens and Southern National Bank and the Citizens and Southern Holding Company shall terminate any direct or indirect supervision of the ten five percent banks beyond that which is available from The Citizens and Southern National Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company to any bank that wishes to enter into a correspondent relationship with such bank or holding company. Such correspondent services shall be available to any contracting bank on an equitable basis with other banks consistent with sound banking principles.

2. That any officer or director of The Citizens and Southern National Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company or any of their subsidiaries who serves as a director or as an officer of any of the ten five percent banks shall resign from the offices held in one or the other of such banks and any officer or director of The Citizens and Southern National Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company or their subsidiaries shall be prohibited from simultaneously acting as a director or officer of any of the ten five percent banks.

3. That any officer or director of The Citizens and Southern National Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company who participates or has authority to participate in major policy-making functions of that bank and company and (1) who acquired shares of stock in any of the ten five percent banks in connection with the acquisition by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company of its five percent ownership in any of the ten five percent banks, (2) who acquired such shares from any other such officer or director who had acquired those shares in connection with the acquisition by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company of its five percent ownership of any such bank or (3) who acquired such shares in connection with a loan to him by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company, The Citizens and Southern National Bank, or their subsidiaries unless said loans are made bankable loans as herein defined, shall divest himself of shares so acquired. For purposes of sub-paragraph (1) and (2) above, shares in any of the ten five percent banks, acquired by any of the above officers or directors within a period of six months from the date of the acquisition by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company of its five percent interest, were acquired in connection with the acquisition by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company of its five percent interest within the meaning of this paragraph. "Divest" means the gift, except to a spouse or minor child, or sale of the legal and beneficial interest in shares, without the right to reacquire for as long as the divesting officer or director remains an officer or director of The Citizens and Southern National Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company. No officer or director required to divest by this Order shall retain after the divestiture any security interest in the stock as to which divestiture is required. No divestiture shall be to any other officer or director who is himself required to divest by this Order.

4. That The Citizens and Southern National Bank and the Citizens and Southern Holding Company and their subsidiaries shall terminate any loan made to any former officer or employee of The Citizens and Southern National Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company or any of their subsidiaries who shall have become an executive officer of any of the ten five percent banks where such loan was secured by or was made to enable such former officer or employee to purchase shares of stock in any of the ten five percent banks of which he became an executive officer unless such loans are made bankable loans as herein defined.

5. That The Citizens and Southern National Bank and the Citizens and Southern Holding Company and their subsidiaries shall terminate any loan made to any officer of any such banks or companies, other than those officers covered by paragraph 3 hereof, made to enable such officer to purchase, or which was secured by, shares of stock in any of the ten five percent banks if such stock was acquired within six months of, or acquired from any director, officer or shareholder of The Citizens and Southern National Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company or any of their subsidiaries who originally acquired the shares of stock within six months of, the acquisition by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company of its five percent interest in these ten five percent banks unless such loans are made bankable loans as herein defined.

6. That The Citizens and Southern National Bank and the Citizens and Southern Holding Company and their subsidiaries shall terminate all loans made to any shareholder of The Citizens and Southern National Bank which were made for the purpose of enabling such shareholder to purchase shares of stock in the ten five percent banks where such loan was made or such shares were acquired within six months of the acquisition by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company of its five percent shares in such bank unless such loans are made bankable loans as herein defined.

7. That The Citizens and Southern National Bank, the Citizens and Southern Holding Company and their subsidiaries shall make no loan to enable any officer, director, or shareholder (including husband, wife, or minor children of any of these) of the ten five percent banks to purchase shares of stock in any of the ten five percent banks unless such loan is made a bankable loan as herein defined, and no such loan may be secured by the stock being purchased.

8. That all outdoor signs, advertising and similar written materials externally disseminated by the ten five percent banks show the portion of the bank's name which distinguishes that bank from The Citizens and Southern National Bank, i.e., if The Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank uses the C&S logo, the words "South DeKalb Bank" shall be printed in conjunction with the logo letters in such manner as to be, in the opinion of the Commissioner, clearly legible. In all cases other than outdoor signs and advertising in public media, existing stock of supplies may be utilized notwithstanding the time limitations of paragraph 10.

9. That the Citizens and Southern Holding Company divest itself of its stock in the ten five percent banks if the stockholders of The Citizens and Southern National Bank, including fiduciary accounts administered by its trust department, own sufficient stock in such banks to make the total of the stock held by the Citizens and Southern Holding Company and the stockholders of The Citizens and Southern National Bank, including stocks held in a fiduciary capacity by the trust department of The Citizens and Southern National Bank or any of its subsidiary banks where the beneficiary of the trust is a stockholder of The Citizens and Southern National Bank, exceed five percent of the stock of such five percent bank. "Divest" means the sale of the legal and beneficial interest in such stock, without the right to reacquire.

10. All action herein required shall be completed on or before the following dates:

Paragraph 1	May 24, 1975
Paragraph 2	June 1, 1974
Paragraph 3	May 24, 1975
Paragraph 4	November 1, 1974
Paragraph 5	November 1, 1974

Paragraph 6	November 1, 1974
Paragraph 7	Continuous
Paragraph 8	November 1, 1974
Paragraph 9	November 1, 1974

11. The Commissioner or his duly appointed representative may make periodic examinations pursuant to the provisions of Section 13-207 of the Code of Georgia to determine compliance with this Order when in the discretion of the Commissioner such examinations are appropriate. The Commissioner may examine any transaction required by this Order to ensure that such transaction complies with this Order and the banking law of Georgia as interpreted by the Georgia Supreme Court. Such examination may include any relevant considerations, including but not limited to, the price paid and received for stock being divested, the financing arrangements for the sale and purchase of stock being divested, the intent of the parties to such transactions, the relation of the parties to the transactions to each other, the relation of the parties to the transactions to The Citizens and Southern National Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company and any other consideration deemed relevant by the Commissioner of Banking and Finance. The Commissioner of Banking and Finance may after notice and opportunity for hearing, order rescission of any transaction which he finds, after full consideration of the factors deemed relevant by him, to result in the acquisition or holding of shares by anyone in violation of this Order or the banking law of Georgia. Any transaction not ordered to be rescinded within one hundred and twenty days from the date of disclosure to the Commissioner shall be deemed valid and in compliance with this Order. The Commissioner reserves the right to amend or modify this Order based upon his findings at examinations or investigations herein provided.

APPENDIX E

Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 38 Stat. 731 as amended, 64 Stat. 1125, 15 U.S.C. 18, provides in pertinent part:

> No corporation engaged in commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital and no corporation subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission shall acquire the whole or any part of the assets of another corporation engaged also in commerce, where in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly.

Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 26 Stat. 209, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 1, provides in pertinent part:

> Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states * * * is hereby declared to be illegal * * *.

Subsection 5(B) of the Bank Merger Act of 1966, 80 Stat. 8, as amended, 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(5)(B), provides in pertinent part:

> The [Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation] * * * shall not approve—
>
> * * * * *
> (B) any other proposed merger transaction whose effect in any section of the country may be substantially to lessen competition, or tend to create a monopoly, or which in any other maner

would be in restraint of trade, unless it finds that the anticompetitive effects of the proposed transaction are clearly outweighed in the public interest by the probable effect of the transaction in meeting the convenience and needs of the community to be served.

In every case, the [Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation] * * * shall take into consideration the financial and managerial resources and future prospects of the existing and proposed institutions, and the convenience and needs of the community to be served.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia

MOTION TO AFFIRM

Pursuant to Rule 16 of the Rules of this Court, appellees move that the judgment of the district court (J.S. 1a-69a;[1] 372 F. Supp. 616) be affirmed.

[1] The abbreviations used are as follows: the Jurisdictional Statement is cited as "J.S.," the trial transcript as "Tr.," the government's exhibits as "GX," and appellees' exhibits as "DX." Citations to "Economic Report" refer to the written testimony of appellees' economic expert witness.

STATEMENT

The Citizens and Southern National Bank, the principal defendant below and appellee here, is the largest bank in Atlanta. It has achieved this position through internal expansion (that is, by outcompeting the other banks in Atlanta) rather than through mergers[2] (that is, by acquiring competitors), and it has done so in the face of state banking laws that seek to limit expansion through internal growth. Properly viewed, the present case is not a merger case at all—still less is it a price-fixing case. It is the outgrowth of C&S's continuing efforts to overcome the limitations placed by Georgia law on de novo branching.

C&S's position of leadership in Atlanta banking is remarkable given the competitive handicap under which Georgia law has placed it in relation to other Atlanta banks. C&S's home office, unlike the home offices of the other major Atlanta banks, is located in another city. C&S entered the Atlanta market at a time when Georgia law permitted state-wide branching (J.S. 9a). But in 1929 the state enacted a law forbidding the establishment of any new branches outside of the city in which a bank's home office was located (J.S. 8a). This law—an example of the type of inflexible limitation on de novo branching discussed critically in this Court's recent opinion in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, Inc. (No. 73-38, slip opinion, p. 8, n. 8, June 26, 1974)—might have prevented the further growth of C&S in Atlanta but for the existence of another method of internal expansion that was not affected by the 1929 law. C&S could form a bank holding company and could then organize new banks that would be wholly owned subsidiaries of the holding company (J.S. 9a-10a). But eventually the state decided to limit this method of expansion as well. A law passed in 1956 forbade a bank holding company to own more than 15 percent of the stock of another bank; in 1960 the law was amended to reduce the maximum amount of stock ownership to five percent (J.S. 8a).

[2] Only about 12 percent of C&S's total demand deposits in the Atlanta area are accounted for by branches that it acquired rather than created de novo (GX 78); only 5 of its 49 offices in the Atlanta area were acquired (GX 4). (These computations exclude the pre-1927 acquisitions by which C&S, whose home office is in Savannah, first obtained a foothold in the Atlanta market.) All of C&S's acquisitions, moreover, have been of banks that were experiencing serious business difficulties (Tr. 511-12; DX 267, pp. 16, 18).

The background to the five proposed acquisitions challenged in this case is a series of transactions during the period 1959-1969 by which C&S attempted to continue to grow internally in metropolitan Atlanta (beyond the corporate city limits) in the face of the severe limitations that the law of 1929 imposed on de novo branching directly and that the laws of 1956 and 1960 imposed on de novo branching through the holding company device. Since the late 1950's, C&S, like other retail businesses located in large cities, had watched as its customers moved out of the city—its market area—and into the suburbs (Tr. 513-15, 530; Economic Report, vol. 1, pp. 7-8). C&S could not hope to retain these customers' business unless it established branches in the suburbs, for most suburban residents will not drive into the city to conduct their banking business (Tr. 515). C&S's need to follow its customers into the suburbs was especially acute because C&S has always emphasized the retail side of the banking business—the catering to the needs of individuals and small firms, both as depositors and as borrowers (Tr. 523; Economic Report, vol. 1, p. 120). As a result of the 1929, 1956, and 1960 banking laws to which we have referred, C&S could not establish new branches in the suburbs either directly or through subsidiaries; but it hit upon a method of creating, in effect, new suburban branches without running afoul of Georgia law.

The method (described in detail in the district court's opinion, at J.S. 42a-55a) involved organizing ("sponsoring") a new bank in the area where C&S wanted to have a branch office, placing the bank's stock (above the five percent that C&S was permitted to own directly) in friendly hands, and staffing the bank with C&S personnel and giving it the use of the C&S name, logo, and methods of doing business. All of this was done in the expectation that if and when the state limitations on branching were relaxed the banks would be formally acquired by C&S (J.S. 10a-11a, 42a-44a, 49a-50a).[3] Pending formal acquisition, the "five percent banks," as the newly formed banks were called, while they were perfectly free to adopt divergent policies if they wanted to, could—and for obvious reasons of business advantage did—function in a manner much like C&S's branches—so much so that the banking public regarded them as such (J.S. 54a; Tr. 903, 971; Economic Report, vol. 1, pp. 112, 119). By thus conforming their business policies to those of C&S, the five percent banks were able to exploit the goodwill associated with the C&S name and to utilize the methods of banking that had made C&S the largest bank in Atlanta.

In 1971 Georgia law was changed to permit banks to branch throughout the counties in which they had offices.[4] C&S was now free to acquire the five percent banks. After the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation approved the proposed acquisitions (GX 33B, GX 33C), the Department of Justice brought this action, alleging that the acquisitions would violate section 7 of the Clayton Act. The complaint also challenged the existing relationships between C&S and the banks as violative

[3] In two earlier transactions, C&S had acquired banks that it had organized and operated in the same manner as it did those involved in this case. The Department of Justice did not challenge either acquisition (Tr. 657-59, 672-73).

[4] The law had been changed in 1960 to permit branching throughout the city in which a bank had an office (J.S. 8a), but this change of law was irrelevant to C&S's desire to establish suburban offices.

of section 1 of the Sherman Act. C&S had entered into similar relationships with some already established, rather than newly formed, banks. Its relationship with one of these—The Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker—was also challenged in the complaint as a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act. The Tucker bank is not involved in the section 7 phase of the case, since the FDIC disapproved C&S's proposed acquisition of Tucker (GX 33D).

DISCUSSION

I. Introduction

This case is a sport in the antitrust-banking field.[5]

(1) It arises only because of a peculiarity of Georgia banking law, no longer in force, that prevented C&S from opening new suburban branches, thereby forcing it to adopt the indirect method challenged in this case. Had it not been for this now-repealed provision of Georgia law, C&S would have owned the five percent banks from the outset and this case would not have been brought; the Department concedes, as it must, that for C&S to create new branches in the Atlanta suburbs, and to furnish them with information about service charges or credit terms (or even to tell them what prices to charge), would raise no issue of antitrust illegality.

(2) Were it not for a loophole in the Federal Bank Holding Company Act, plugged in 1970, the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks would clearly have been subject to the primary jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board, and the principal issues concerning the propriety of that relationship might never have become the subject of an antitrust suit.[6]

[5] The Jurisdictional Statement implicitly concedes this. The only reference to either the intrinsic or the precedential significance of the case is a boilerplate recital that the questions presented "are of substantial importance to the banking community and to the administration of the antitrust laws." (J.S. 16.)

[6] Under the 1970 amendments to the Federal Bank Holding Company Act, a bank over which another bank has a "controlling influence" is deemed a "subsidiary" of that bank (12 U.S.C. § 1841 (d)), and the Federal Reserve Board must approve their relationship (see § 1842(a)). This provision of the 1970 amendments is inapplicable to relationships commenced prior to 1970; that is why the approval of the Federal Reserve Board did not have to be and was not sought when C&S sponsored each of the five percent banks. With respect to post-1970 relationships, the required Board proceed-

(3) Although the Department of Justice has challenged other proposed mergers between previously affiliated banks, in no other case has it challenged the previous affiliation as a violation of the Sherman Act, and we shall see that the Department's challenge to the proposed mergers in the present case depends on the Sherman Act count.

In light of these considerations, the case does not merit plenary review by this Court—especially since, thanks to the Expediting Act, the case comes to this Court without the benefit of intermediate appellate review, and at a time when the Court's docket has become extremely heavy and burdensome.[7] At all events, the decision below is clearly correct; further briefing and argument are not required to dispose of the appeal. A controlling consideration is that the dispositive issues in the case are factual and the Department does not contend that any of the district court's factfindings are clearly erroneous.[8]

ing would provide an important, and arguably controlling, input into the determinations of whether an informal relationship between two banks so united them that a formal merger would not alter the substance of their relationship and whether the informal relationship represented an improper restriction of competition—the two issues in this case.

[7] For a recent study of the Court's workload problem, and a review of the earlier literature, see Gerhard Casper & Richard A. Posner, A Study of the Supreme Court's Caseload, 3 J. Legal Studies 339 (1974).

[8] The absence from the Jurisdictional Statement of any reference to the clearly-erroneous standard, though it is plain that the Department is seeking mainly to overturn the district court's factfindings, suggests that the Department has not yet taken to heart this Court's admonition in United States v. General Dynamics Corp., No. 72-402, March 19, 1974, that: "The findings and conclusions of the District Court are, of course, governed by the 'clearly erroneous' standard of Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 52(a) just as fully on direct appeal to this Court as when a civil case is being reviewed by a court of appeals." (Slip opinion, p. 21.)

It should be noted that the district court in this case did not adopt proposed findings submitted by the defendants—the practice criticized

II. The Department Failed to Prove That C&S's Proposed Acquisition of the Five Percent Banks Was Likely to Lessen Competition Substantially.

It is undisputed that from the day the five percent banks opened their doors to the present day only a negligible amount of competition between these banks and C&S occurred (J.S. 11a, 64a; Tr. 533-34; GX 33B, GX 33C). The five percent banks were created by C&S and they considered themselves extensions rather than competitors of C&S (Tr. 533, 601, 783). How, then, could the acquisition of these banks by C&S—a mere formalization of the existing relationships—affect the amount or vigor of competition in the relevant market? The answer that the government offered at trial was that, if the acquisitions were prevented, the five percent banks would eventually separate themselves from the C&S system and become substantial independent competitors. This contention framed a precise factual issue for the district court to resolve, an issue upon which the section 7 charge turned: was it likely that, if not acquired by C&S, the five percent banks would within some reasonable period of time break away from C&S and begin to compete with it? The district court, like the FDIC before it, found the answer to this factual question to be "no" (J.S. 65a). Since the Jurisdictional Statement does not challenge this finding as clearly erroneous, the section 7 appeal must fail.

In this Court, the Department, trying to convert a factual into a legal issue, seeks a rule that unless the parties to a pro-in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, Inc., supra, slip opinion, pp. 11-12, n. 13, where the Court nonetheless affirmed. The district court prepared its own findings. It should also be noted that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the banking agency that approved the proposed acquisitions challenged in this case, is extremely conscientious in weighing the competitive effects of a proposed acquisition—so much so that in one recent case it was rebuked for applying a stricter standard than the antitrust laws themselves. See Washington Mutual Savings Bank v. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, 482 F.2d 459 (9th Cir. 1973).

posed merger were under common ownership prior to the merger, they should be treated as if they were wholly unrelated and fully competitive entities, regardless of the actual facts of their relationship (see J.S. 28-29). This Court rejected that approach in United States v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, 412 U.S. 946 (1973), affirming per curiam 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 (W.D. Tex. 1972), which the government vainly tries to distinguish. In Trans Texas the government had challenged a proposed merger among several banks in which members of an informal group of 49 individuals were majority stockholders. The group was not a single entity in any formal legal sense—no contractual or other formal obligations united its members. The only cement of the relationship was loyalty to an individual who at the time of trial was 75 years old.[9] The banks both held themselves out to the public as separate entities and in fact competed among themselves.[10] Nonetheless the district court found that probability that the ties among the banks would dissolve, and hence that formal merger of the banks would result in a future reduction in competition, was too remote to justify the conclusion that the merger would violate section 7. This Court affirmed. It thereby rejected the proposition urged by the government in the present case that so long as the parties to a proposed merger have the formal legal capacity to compete, the competive effects of the merger are to be analyzed on the fictitious premise that the parties are fully independent competitors in fact.

---

[9] The Department's statement that the banks involved in Trans Texas "never had the capacity to make independent decisions" (J.S. 28) is a reversal of its position in its Jurisdictional Statement in Trans Texas. There, the Department argued that "the banks have been independent entities which made their own decisions and significantly competed with each other." (P. 17.) The Department pointed out that the members of the group "were not bound together by any written agreement; they did not claim to have any legally binding arrangement among them to vote in concert; they never held a formal meeting; and they did not act in concert to control the competitive efforts of the banks." (P. 18, record citations omitted.)

[10] For examples, see the Jurisdictional Statement in Trans Texas, pp. 8, 22.

The government's proposition is also in conflict with this Court's recent decisions in United States v. General Dynamics Corp., supra, and United States v. Marine Bancorporation, supra. Those decisions hold that statistics showing that a merger would substantially increase concentration in the relevant market establish a prima facie case of a section 7 violation, but that the defendant may rebut by showing that in the particular circumstances of the case the statistics lack their usual significance in predicting adverse competitive consequences. See, e.g., Marine slip opinion, p. 27. The defendant's burden on rebuttal was carried in General Dynamics by proof that the acquired firm's mineral reserves were too depleted to enable it to compete in the future on the same scale that it had done in the past, in Marine by proof that de novo entry by the acquiring firm into the market of the acquired firm would not have enabled the former to compete effectively in that market due to state-law limitations on branching from a branch, and in Trans Texas and in the present case by proof that the merger would be in the nature of an internal reorganization that altered the form rather than the substance of the competitive relationships among the parties to the merger.

To require the trier of facts to ignore the elaborate and effective, although informal, linkages between C&S and the five percent banks because those linkages do not amount to formal stock control under the law of corporations would be a return to the mechanical antitrust jurisprudence repudiated in the recent merger decisions. These linkages profoundly affect the competitive significance to be attached to the fact—the only fact on which the government relies to show that the challenged acquisitions are anticompetitive—that the acquisitions would increase the concentration ratio, and the district court was entitled under this Court's decisions to consider them. The major assets of the five percent banks are the goodwill associated with the C&S name and the proved methods of successful banking available to the five percent banks as participants in the C&S system. It would be unrealistic to expect them to forfeit these assets by voluntarily separating themselves from the C&S system—only once before has a bank done this, and it was under circumstances sharply different from those involved in this case.[11] It would be equally unrealistic to expect C&S to expel the banks from the C&S system and thereby compel them to operate as independent competitors. If it did so, it would have no offices in the Atlanta suburbs—we noted earlier how badly it needed them—unless it were to open new branches there. But any new branches would be competing with the former five percent banks. Thus, the effect of separating them from C&S would turn out to be the creation of new competition for C&S, which is something business firms are loath to do. Furthermore, although state law no longer interposes an absolute bar to C&S's opening new branches in the suburban areas served by the five percent banks, the banking authorities have and exercise broad discretion to deny applications for permission to branch (see GX 33A, GX 33E). There is no assurance that having expelled the five percent banks from the C&S system C&S would be permitted to establish branches in their service areas; those banks would protest vigorously against C&S's opening new branches in competition with them in the precarious state in which they would find themselves if forced to operate as independent competitors. Such uncertainty as to whether C&S

[11] The "breakaway" was the Stone Mountain bank. Unlike the five banks proposed to be acquired here, it had a pre-existing independent identity, and other distinguishing features (Tr. 534A-39, 553-54, 561, 597-99, 626, 638-43). The government's statement that Stone Mountain was "organized . . . with C&S's assistance" (J.S. 5) is completely—we hope not intentionally—misleading. The only "assistance" consisted of referring the organizers of Stone Mountain to an ex-employee of C&S for his assistance (Tr. 535). C&S did not sponsor Stone Mountain as it did the five banks that it is attempting to acquire.

would be allowed to establish branches in these areas is a potent deterrent against C&S's expelling the five percent banks, lest it find itself wholly excluded from the suburban markets (J.S. 65a).

It is possible that the five percent banks might some day separate from C&S and become independent competitive factors. But that is a "mere possibility," which the district court was entitled to disregard. United States v. General Dynamics, supra, slip opinion, p. 22.

The government contends, finally, that it is no defense to a challenged merger that the firms previously agreed not to compete with each other, in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act. There can be no quarrel with the general proposition. But its basic premise—that section 1 has been violated—has not been established here, as we shall soon see. In any event, the proposition has no relevance to the circumstances of this case. If—this seems to be the sort of case the government is thinking of—General Motors and Ford wanted to merge, and anticipating a legal challenge to the merger, agreed not to compete for a period of time preceding the public announcement of the merger, their agreement would not shield the merger from a challenge under section 7 of the Clayton Act. Nothing remotely like that hypothetical case is involved here. The five percent banks that C&S proposes to acquire were not previously independent competitors. They were created by C&S, and they have at all times operated as if they were branches of C&S.[12] Had they been

[12] Only the Tucker bank had an independent existence prior to becoming a five percent bank, and it is not involved in the section 7 aspect of the case because the FDIC denied C&S's application to acquire it. The Jurisdictional Statement implies, perhaps inadvertently but in any event incorrectly, that there was some period during which the five percent banks were independent competitive factors. It states, for example, that "soon" after their creation the banks began to behave as if they were branches of C&S (J.S. 5). The district court found that the relationships between the five percent formal branches of C&S from the outset, no antitrust question would have arisen; and they would have been formal branches of C&S from the beginning, but for the provisions of Georgia banking law. The absence of competition between C&S and the banks it proposes to acquire is not the result of a scheme to defeat a legal challenge to an eventual merger; it is the result of the fact that these banks were created, and from the outset operated, as the nearest thing to branch offices that state law permitted, in order that C&S could enter the suburban Atlanta banking markets. The establishment of the five percent banks by C&S was procompetitive, and the district court found that consummation of the proposed acquisitions will also be procompetitive (J.S. 68a).

III. The Department Failed to Prove a Per Se Violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

The section 1 count in the complaint is an afterthought.[13] It was inserted in order to buttress the government's section 7 case against the argument that the five percent banks had never been, and were unlikely ever to become, independent competitive factors. At all events, the section 1 appeal must fail for two independent reasons: (1) the government failed to prove an agreement not to compete; (2) even if such an agreement had been proved, it would not have been a per se violation of banks and C&S on which the section 1 count rests existed without change from the formation of the five per cent banks that C&S proposes to acquire (J.S. 11a; Tr. 533, 600-01). This finding is not challenged.

[13] In the reports that the Department submitted to the banking agencies, as required by the Bank Merger Act, when the acquisitions were first proposed, it made no reference to any Sherman Act problems (GX 36, GX 37, GX 38)—even though its major contention now is that the acquisitions cannot lawfully be approved because of an antecedent violation of that Act.

section 1—and the government in this case proceeded exclusively on a per se theory of violation.

(1) It is perfectly lawful under the Sherman Act for two firms in the same market not to compete with each other. It is only agreements not to compete that violate the Act. Theatre Enterprises, Inc. v. Paramount Film Distributing Corp., 346 U.S. 537 (1954). The two firms might be owned by different members of the same family who might decide—independently, without agreement—to compete against the other firms in the market rather than against each other. A small firm might decide that it could make a good profit charging the same price for its product as its largest competitors, and if it did so rather than cut prices, this would be a unilateral decision not to compete in price with that competitor. In neither of these examples would there be a violation of the Sherman Act. This is the same kind of case. The management of the five percent banks unilaterally chose to compete as C&S banks. Their choice was hardly surprising or unnatural in the circumstances. There was considerable overlap in the ownership of the common stock of the five percent banks and of C&S; the five percent banks were using C&S's name, logo, and business methods; the public regarded them as C&S banks; and C&S had much greater knowledge of competitive prices and methods, and of market conditions generally, than the five percent banks. In these circumstances, it was natural that the management of the five percent banks would decide not to compete with C&S and their failure to compete therefore gives rise to no inference that there was an agreement not to compete. The addition of the five banks to their market areas, competing there as C&S banks, was, without dispute, procompetitive.

There were, to be sure, agreements that C&S would own five percent of the common stock of the banks and that C&S would allow them to use the C&S name and methods and would render them advice and assistance. But such agreements, while they may in fact reduce the likelihood or amount of competition among the parties to them, are not agreements not to compete, and they are not per se violations of the Sherman Act. (The government in this case proceeded on a per se theory of illegality; it offered no evidence that the challenged practices in fact restricted competition unreasonably.)

This fundamental distinction is illustrated by United States v. Topco Associates, 405 U.S. 596 (1972), where competing retail grocers agreed to purchase products jointly for resale under a common trademark, and to cooperate in other ways. These agreements, which may in fact have reduced the intensity of competition among the parties, were not even challenged. Indeed, these agreements, like those in this case, fit the classic definition of a restraint ancillary to a legitimate business objective, and such a restraint is reasonable and not violative of the Sherman Act. Addyston Pipe and Steel Company v. United States, 85 F. 271 (6th Cir. 1898) (Taft, J.), aff'd, 175 U.S. 211 (1899). But the retail grocers in Topco had gone further and agreed not to sell in each other's territories—and it was this agreement that the Court held violated section 1 of the Sherman Act. In the present case there were many elements of cooperation and association between the five percent banks and C&S, but there was no evidence of a further agreement not to compete. The district court found as a fact that the evidence failed to show "the existence of any agreement not to compete" (J.S. 24a). This finding, which has not been challenged as clearly erroneous, is binding on this Court and requires that the judgment of the district court dismissing the section 1 count of the complaint be affirmed.

The section 1 charge in this case has a tortured history. The complaint alleged that the defendants had violated section 1 by maintaining "a close working relationship" (complaint, ¶¶ 34, 38-44)—an absurd theory of per se illegality, not mentioned in the Jurisdictional Statement. At trial, the evidence most favorable to the government showed merely that C&S circulated to the five percent banks the same information regarding service charges and other business practices that it distributed to its branch managers. It was understood—and ordinarily stated on the copies sent to the five percent banks—that so far as those banks were concerned the circulars were for information only.[14] The banks were perfectly free to deviate from the suggestions in the circulars, and sometimes did. Mere dissemination of price information is not a per se violation of the Sherman Act—if it were, sellers would be guilty of violating the Act every time they announced a price change publicly! In United States v. Container Corporation of America, 393 U.S. 333 (1969), the leading case on information exchanges, this Court found an agreement among competing firms to exchange information under circumstances where the probable effect of the exchanges was to stabilize the market price. Both elements are missing here. There was no agreement to exchange information—C&S distributed information about its prices to the five percent banks but the latter did not agree to furnish information to C&S in return, nor did they do so.[15]

[14] The district court found—and once again its finding is unchallenged—that "there is no suggestion that any advice as to rates amounts to more than an expert appraisal of a market situation from the point of view of a lending institution—a type of opinion to which a lending institution would naturally be expected to pay great attention." (J.S. 24a.)

[15] The Court inferred agreement in Container from the exchange of information, reasoning that it was furnished on the implied condition that the recipient would furnish like information in return when the occasion arose. See 393 U.S. at 335. Nothing of that sort was involved here; the information moved in one direction only. The district court expressly found that there was no agreement, stating: "There is no evidence of record to conclude that the utilization by the five percent defendant banks of the services or information received by them from C&S National or C&S Holding was a result of any tacit or explicit combinations rather than the natural deference of the recipient to information from one with greater expertise or better sources." (J.S. 29a.) This finding is not challenged as clearly erroneous.

And the government made no effort in the present case to establish the likelihood that the information dissemination had affected or was likely to affect the market price of banking services. The district court found that it had no effect (J.S. 27a-28a), and its finding, once again, is not challenged.

At trial, the government's theory of the Sherman Act violation was apparently that of the Container decision (see Plaintiff's Post-Trial Brief, pp. 12, 58-61; Plaintiff's Proposed Findings of Fact, p. 64). That theory has now been jettisoned[16] and the Jurisdictional Statement characterizes the unlawful conduct as an agreement on the part of the five percent banks to submit to the direction of C&S (e.g., J.S. 24, n. 18)—to become its "vassals" (J.S. 17). No such agreement was either alleged or proved. The banks never agreed to submit to C&S's direction; they never took orders from C&S. What they did do —for obvious reasons stemming from the circumstances under which the banks were created—was unilaterally to conform their business practices to those of C&S.

(2) Even if an agreement to submit to the direction of C&S had been proved—we stress that it was not—it would not be a per se violation of the Sherman Act. Any agreement creating a subsidiary could be characterized as an agreement by which the subsidiary corporation has submitted to the direction of the parent, but the government does not assert that such an agreement would be a per se violation of the Act. The relationship between C&S and the five percent banks was merely a substitute for the formal parent-subsidiary or bank-branch relationships that state law forbade; it was an attempt to establish branch offices by the only method permissible under the applicable state law. The Department would have applauded C&S's formal establishment of branches in the Atlanta suburbs as new entry that increased banking competition in those markets. Yet it treats their informal establishment as the equivalent of a price-fixing conspiracy. No authority is cited, and none exists, for using the per se concept to thwart the fundamental objective of antitrust policy in the banking industry.[17]

[16] Container is not even cited in support of the government's Sherman Act theory, except for the peripheral (and uncontested) point that freedom to withdraw from a price-fixing agreement is no defense to a charge of illegal price-fixing. The point here is that there was no agreement. The only authority that the government offers for its theory of Sherman Act illegality is Topco (discussed in the text above) and Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1 (1958)—a tying case without any conceivable relevance to the present case.

IV. There Is an Irreconcilable Conflict Between the Government's Position Here and in Marine Bancorporation.

In the Marine case, supra, the government proposed an ingenious method by which banks could branch de novo into a new market, and thereby increase the amount of competition in that market, despite state-law limitations on de novo branching. The method it suggested consists of sponsoring a new bank, placing its stock in friendly hands, and eventually acquiring the bank (see Brief for the United States in Marine, pp. 16-17, 24, 45-52). This is precisely the method by which C&S expanded into the Atlanta suburbs; that the government should accuse C&S of having thereby violated the Clayton and Sherman Acts suggests to us a profound confusion within the Antitrust Division.

When this inconsistency was pointed out by the Comptroller of the Currency in his brief in Marine, the government replied that the method of de novo branching adopted by C&S differed from that proposed by the government in two respects. First, since the acquiring bank in Marine was located in a different market from the acquired bank, it could have sponsored a new bank in the market of the acquired bank without fear that an eventual acquisition would be challenged as violative of section 7; in the present case the acquiring and acquired banks were alleged to be in the same market at the time of the proposed acquisitions. Second, the government's proposal in Marine had envisaged that the sponsoring bank would operate as a "bona fide independent" institution during the period preceding its acquisition by the sponsoring bank. (Reply Brief for the United States in Marine, pp. 1-2.)

[17] In the words of the district court: "The Government has relied upon a claimed per se illegality rather than unreasonableness of the specific practices involved and, for the reasons set forth above, the Court does not believe the evidence will support a finding that such practices in fact were unreasonable restraints of trade. Indeed, the Court is constrained to find that, balancing the evidence, such practices were in fact reasonable." (J.S. 28a.)

These distinctions are utterly spurious. The government's main argument in Marine was that a large bank in one city could not lawfully acquire a major bank in another city within the same state. This implies that if a sponsored bank grew to be a major competitive factor before it could be acquired by the sponsoring bank (and in Marine state law required that a newly created bank be in operation for ten years before it could be acquired), the acquisition would violate section 7. Furthermore, the government made no effort in the present case to show that the acquiring and acquired banks had been in the same market at the time of the original sponsorship.[18]

With regard to the second suggested distinction, it is plain that the expression "bona fide independence" as used by the government in Marine simply meant not so obvious an evasion of state law as to be unable to withstand attack by the state banking authorities.[19] It could not have meant competitive independence. With the stock of the sponsored bank to be owned by officers, directors, and other associates of the sponsoring bank, plus that bank itself to the extent permitted by state law (see Brief for the United States in Marine, pp. 16, 24), the sponsored bank could hardly be expected to compete vigorously against the sponsoring bank.[20] The government's brief quotes approvingly the description of one sponsored bank as a "satellite" of its sponsoring bank (Brief, supra, p. 16, n. 16)—a term hardly applicable to an independent competitor, although reasonably descriptive of a "vassal." Here are three other examples, drawn from portions of the record appendix in Marine and cited by the government to show how the acquiring bank could have used the sponsorship-followed-by-eventual-acquisition approach (Brief, supra, p. 16, n. 16, and p. 45, n. 36, of the meaning of "bona fide independence": [19] That is, the sponsored bank had to have enough of the trappings of independent operation to avoid violating the state law forbidding the sponsoring bank to have branches in the market of the sponsored bank. There is no reason to speculate about the legality of the relationship between C&S and the five per cent banks. That issue was resolved in Independent Bankers Association of Georgia v. Dunn, 230 Ga. 345, 197 S.E.2d 129 (1973), and in the subsequent order of the Commissioner of Banking and Finance (75a-87a). The district court found that the changes in the relationships between C&S and the five percent banks required by the Commissioner's order did not change its findings with respect to the fundamental character of those relationships (J.S. 70a-72a).

[18] The banks in fact were in separate markets at that time, when transportation between Atlanta and its suburbs was not so good as it is today and when C&S had fewer branches in parts of the city adjacent to the suburban areas involved in this case. When the five percent banks were organized, the Federal Reserve Board permitted officers of C&S to serve as directors of the five percent banks, despite the prohibition contained in Section 8 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. § 19). The Board relied on the exception in Section 8 that permits interlocking directorates when the banks are not located in the same town or in contiguous towns (Tr. 593-94, 692-93). Even today, there is considerable question whether C&S and the five percent banks are in the same market (Tr. 985, 472-74; Economic Report, vol. 1, pp. 56-87).

[20] In Marine the government suggested that the acquiring bank obtain a 25 percent stock interest in the sponsored bank (see Brief for the United States, p. 24), with the remainder to be owned by officers, directors, and associates of the sponsoring bank (see id. at 16). Under the theory that the government is advancing in the Jurisdictional Statement in this case, if those banks had not competed with each other this would be attributed to an unlawful agreement by the sponsored bank to become a "vassal" of its sponsor, an "agreement" inferred from their interlocking relationship.

The . . . selling institution . . . was organized in 1965 under the guidance of the applicant bank . . . Until two years ago, excessive loan loss was a serious problem, but with the applicant bank management virtually taking over all the affairs of the selling bank, this problem has now been solved. Decisions of consequence are presently made by the applicant bank's management. The proposed acquisition will have little if any effect on competition between the two banks . . . [T]he Columbia and Yakima Rivers offer a natural physical barrier to competitive interaction. A more important consideration is the present ties that exist between the management of the purchasing and selling banks. This has served to limit the effective competition between the two institutions. [App. 1294.] . . . Other Bank has been operated more like a branch of applicant than as an independent bank. [App. 1297.]

In 1964, during the organizational state, First received the assistance of Old National, which continues to serve as its principal correspondent and has provided a chief executive officer since about 60 days after that bank began operations . . . Due to the distance separating the offices of the subject banks, the correspondent, managerial, and other relationships existing between them, there appears to be little competition which will be eliminated by this proposal. [App. 1306.]

Tri-Cities National Bank, a satellite of the purchasing bank, opened in 1961 to provide the purchasing bank with access to the Pasco area . . . Due to the interlocking relationship between the purchasing and selling banks, consummation of the purchase and assumption would not have the effect of eliminating significant competition. [App. 1315-16.]

As mentioned before, the complaint in the present case charged that C&S and the five percent banks violated the Sherman Act by agreeing to establish "a close working relationship". Yet as the record in Marine shows, a close working relationship between sponsoring and sponsored bank is of the essence of the method of entering new markets by sponsorship in states where de novo branching is constrained. Indeed, the record in the present case shows that a sponsored bank cannot even obtain its charter unless the sponsoring bank assures the banking authorities of its willingness to extend the kinds of managerial assistance and backing that the government now deems conclusive evidence of a per se violation of the Sherman Act (J.S. 46a-49a; Tr. 520, 900-01, 818-20, 827).

The government is involved in a flagrant contradiction. Desiring to increase the number of competitors in local banking markets, it seeks to encourage de novo branching as an alternative to acquisitions. But state laws severely limit de novo branching, and this led the government in Marine to suggest the sponsorship-followed-by-eventual-acquisition method of bank expansion. This method is unfeasible if, as now contended by the government, the eventual acquisition of the sponsored by the sponsoring bank is forbidden by section 7 of the Clayton Act, and the failure of the two banks, due to their many close associations, to compete prior to the acquisition is a per se violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act. If these contentions were accepted, the result would be to stifle new entry into banking markets subject to restrictive state branch-banking laws.

V. There Are Additional Grounds for Affirmance.

There are several technical grounds on which the decision below can be supported, in addition to the factual grounds which we have already discussed. We sketch two of them[21] briefly here.

[21] We reserve the right, should probable jurisdiction be noted, to argue that the challenged acquisitions were within the exemption for subsidiaries in section 7 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. § 18).

(1) As an alternative ground for dismissing the section 1 count, the district court held that the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks was subject to the original exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board. In Whitney National Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U.S. 411, 419 (1965), this Court held that proceedings before the Board were "the sole means by which questions as to the organization or operation of a new bank by a bank holding company may be tested." C&S is a bank holding company, and the relationship between it and the five percent banks[22] arose from, and has continued unchanged since, the chartering of the banks as five percent banks. The Board, which is broadly empowered to enforce the provisions of the Clayton and Bank Holding Company Acts (see 12 U.S.C. §§ 1842(a), 1844(b), 1844(c), and 15 U.S.C. § 21(c)), twice investigated this relationship and found no impropriety (J.S. 16a-20a, 27a), and the Department of Justice failed to seek judicial review of its finding; it is barred by Whitney from challenging the relationship in a different kind of proceeding.

(2). Three of the five percent relationships challenged in this case[23] came into being prior to the effective date of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1966 (July 1, 1966). Section 11(d) of that Act (12 U.S.C. § 1849 (d)) "grandfathers" acquisitions completed prior to that date. If the government is correct that the five percent banks agreed when they were formed to become the "vassals" of C&S, those agreements constituted acquisitions within the meaning of the grandfather provision.

We point out, finally, that even if the Court should note probable jurisdiction and eventually reverse the appeal below, it would not end this case. The district court has yet to pass

---

[22] Except the Tucker bank.

[23] Including that with the Tucker bank.

on the defendants' convenience and needs defense (12 U.S.C. § 1828(c)(5)(B)). And the defendants would ask the district court to reopen the relevant market question, since it is plain that the geographical market was incorrectly defined under the standard announced (after the decision below) in United States v. The Connecticut National Bank, No. 73-767, June 26, 1974.[24] [24] In the Connecticut decision, this Court ruled that the government must produce evidence to show a realistic delineation of any local banking markets in which competition is alleged to be affected. The government cannot rely, without more, on standard metropolitan statistical areas or on political boundaries (slip opinion, pp. 13-14). The government also cannot argue, as it did in this case (Plaintiff's Post-Trial Brief, p. 6), that a geographic area need not be a banking market to qualify as a section of the country (see slip opinion, p. 16). The district court in this case accepted, for purposes of discussion only (J.S. 31a), the district court's delineation of market areas. The record shows, however, that the government failed to prove its alleged market areas as required by Connecticut. Even the government's expert witness testified that the market areas alleged by the government were too large to constitute actual banking markets (Tr. 472-74, 491-96, 500-01).

---

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the judgment of the district court should be affirmed.

APPENDIX A

Section 2(d) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 133, as amended, 12 U.S.C. § 1841(d), provides in pertinent part:

> "Subsidiary", with respect to a specified bank holding company, means (1) any company 25 per centum or more of whose voting shares (excluding shares owned by the United States or by any company wholly owned by the United States) is directly or indirectly owned or controlled by such bank holding company, or is held by it with power to vote; (2) any company the election of a majority of whose directors is controlled in any manner by such bank holding company; or (3) any company with respect to the management or policies of which such bank holding company has the power, directly or indirectly, to exercise a controlling influence, as determined by the Board, after notice and opportunity for hearing.

Section 3(a) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 133, as amended, 12 U.S.C. § 1842(a), provides in pertinent part:

> It shall be unlawful, except with the prior approval of the Board, . . . (2) for any action to be taken that causes a bank to become a subsidiary of a bank holding company.

Section 11(d) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 133, as amended, 12 U.S.C. § 1849(d), provides in pertinent part:

> Any acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in section 3(a) of this Act which was consummated at any time prior or subsequent to May 9, 1956, and as to which no litigation was initiated by the Attorney General prior to the date of enactment of this amendment, shall be conclusively presumed not to have been in violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of the Act of July 2, 1890 (section 2 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 U.S.C. 2).

Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 38 Stat. 731, as amended, 64 Stat. 1125, 15 U.S.C. § 18, provides in pertinent part:

> Nor shall anything contained in this section prevent a corporation engaged in commerce from causing the formation of subsidiary corporations for the actual carrying on of their immediate lawful business, or the natural and legitimate branches or extensions thereof, or from owning and holding all or a part of the stock of such subsidiary corporations, when the effect of such formation is not to substantially lessen competition.

OCTOBER TERM, 1974

No. 73-1933

v.

CITIZENS AND SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK, ET AL.

ON APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO AFFIRM

Appellees' contentions notwithstanding, the issues in this case are of substantial and continuing importance to competition in the banking industry. Their resolution will affect both correspondent relationships among independent banks competing in the same market, and the legality of acquisitions among such banks.

1. Appellees have ignored the fact that the district court's holding here invites widespread resort to similar de facto branching arrangements by other banks to avoid the constraints of the antitrust laws. They rely upon an erroneous characterization of such arrangements as an ordinary correspondent relationship (J.S. App. 28a), which is inconsistent not only with the court's other finding that the relationship eliminated all "existing substantial competition" among the banks (J.S. App. 66a), but also with the record and with the general understanding of correspondent relationships. True correspondent relationships are vertical, wholesale, customer-supplier arrangements by which a large bank furnishes services to a smaller bank in return for a fee or for a deposit of a correspondent balance (J.S. 24, n. 18).[1] The arrangement here, however, goes far beyond that, because it extends horizontally so as to change the "five percent banks" from independent customers for C&S' banking services, into de facto branches of the C&S system.

Moreover, the arrangement here directly eliminates price competition. For example, in February 1970, C&S National notified the five percent banks of its intent to raise its service charges on regular checking accounts in Atlanta (DX 188). At that time some of the five percent banks had service charges schedules different from C&S National (DX 302). But on April 1, 1970, every defendant bank adopted the identical charges for both regular and special checking accounts (DX 302).

Thus, this case involves not simply the exchange of past price information which affected current pricing practices, as in United States v. Container Corp., 393 U.S. 333. It shows a classic arrangement fixing actual current prices.

2. Appellees, like the district court, seriously misconceive the law of agreement under the Sherman Act. While conceding that the five percent banks are legally independent entities "perfectly free to deviate from * * * [C&S'] suggestions" (Motion, p. 16), they simultaneously contend, and the district court found, that the banks functioned as de facto branches. Such a relationship could not exist without tacit agreement by all concerned as to the day-to-day operation of the banks as integral parts of the C&S system. Whether their arrangement is characterized as "involuntary control," "de facto branching," or, to use the latest formulation, "elaborate and effective, although informal, linkages" (id. at p. 10), the record compels an inference of agreement. United States v. Singer Mfg. Co., 374 U.S. 174, 193-195.

3. The record refutes appellees' theory that the government's charges involve market extension efforts by C&S that eliminate only potential competition. The complaint alleged, and the record shows, that these arrangements were challenged because they eliminated actual competition between C&S and the five percent banks, in violation of the Sherman Act,[2] and because they were inconsistent with the standards applicable to horizontal mergers under the Clayton Act.[3]

[2]E.g., Complaint, paras. 34, 38-44, which alleged that C&S and others "entered into a combination" with each of the five percent banks and others, pursuant to which "C&S National and each of the five percent banks have, in many instances jointly determined the competitive strategy to be followed in conducting the business of each bank" and thus that the combination violated Section 1.

[3]E.g., Complaint, para. 48, which alleged "that actual competition and the potential for increased competition," was and would be eliminated and restrained, that competition in the banking markets alleged would be lessened, and that concentration would be increased.

4. There is no merit in appellees' attempt to justify the relationship between the banks on the ground that other methods of expansion were barred by Georgia law (Motion, pp. 6, 13). Georgia law required that the banks be operated as independent entities (J.S. 14, n. 10), and the Sherman Act bars agreements eliminating price and service competition between independent firms. The de facto branch relationship was thus illegal both under Georgia law and the Sherman Act (J.S. 8, n. 4). It follows that appellees' chief justification for their acquisition of the five percent banks—that the banks do not compete—rests upon an unacceptable premise, because this lack of competition is a direct result of a violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

5. Appellees suggest that this case has no future significance because any similar relationships among competing banks will be subject to scrutiny by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board under the 1970 Amendments to the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U.S.C. 1841 et seq. (Motion, p. 6, n. 6), declaring that a bank is a holding company if it exercises a controlling influence over the management and policies of the other banks. However, the Board, in determining whether a holding company relationship exists or should be authorized under the Bank Holding Company Act, applies the banking criteria of that Act, not the antitrust laws. Even if the Board were to approve, for purposes of the Bank Holding Company Act, a de facto relationship of the kind found by the district court here, that would not provide antitrust immunity (12 U.S.C. 1849(a)), and serious questions would remain about the legality of the relationship under the Sherman Act. Moreover, if the district court's decision is upheld, other banks may be expected to seek shelter from the antitrust laws by expanding correspondent relationships into "de facto branches" and then justifying the acquisition of those "branches" on that ground.[4]

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated in the jurisdictional statement and this reply brief, probable jurisdiction should be noted.

Respectfully submitted.

Solicitor General.

MOTION OF INDEPENDENT BANKERS ASSOCIATION OF GEORGIA, INC. FOR PERMISSION TO FILE BRIEF AMICUS CURIAE

The Independent Bankers Association of Georgia, Inc., a non-profit corporation composed of 209 independent banks of Georgia, moves this Court to grant it permission to file a brief amicus curiae in the above case; all of the parties not having consented to the filing of said brief.

PETITIONER'S INTEREST

Petitioner is vitally interested in maintaining an independent and competitive banking system in Georgia as provided by the laws of Georgia.

> ". . . It is the intent of this Act to prevent the extension of statewide banking by any institution and to encourage the normal growth of banking units in the local communities . . . It is the intent of this Act to restrict further the acquisition of voting shares of banks by bank holding companies." (Georgia Laws 1960, p. 67)

The decision of the District Court if upheld will bar the enforcement of the judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia in the case of Petitioner vs. Dunn, Citizens & Southern National Bank, et al, (230 Ga., 345; 197 SE 2d, 129).

This judgment resulted from an action by petitioner for a mandamus against the Superintendent of Banks of Georgia (now the Commissioner of Banking and Finance) naming as co-defendants the Citizens & Southern National Bank, the Citizens & Southern Holding Company and ten other Georgia banks in back of which the Holding Company owned five per cent of the capital stock, one being the Citizens & Southern South DeKalb Bank.

The complaint alleged that the Citizens & Southern National Bank and the Citizens & Southern Holding Company, in violation of the law of Georgia owned or controlled, indirectly or directly, more than five per cent of the voting shares of the ten named banks.

Briefly stated the evidence conclusively proved that (1) the Citizens & Southern National Bank owned all of the stock of the Citizens & Southern Holding Company, (2) whether the bank sponsored the formation of a new bank or purchased five per cent of an established bank, it made certain that additional shares of stock ranging from fifteen to fifty per cent were acquired for its officers, directors, employees and stockholders, (3) that after such acquisition the name of the bank was changed with the letters "C & S" being prominent in the new name, (4) one or more officers of the Citizens & Southern National Bank were placed on the Board of Directors of the bank, (5) no president of any bank so acquired was elected without the prior approval of the President of the Citizens & Southern National Bank, and (6) a designated officer of the Citizens & Southern National Bank exercised direct supervision over the business of the bank to the extent of recommending the salary to be paid to the president of such bank.

The trial judge denied the mandamus absolute. On appeal the Supreme Court reversed, holding:

> ". . . The independence of these ten five per cent defendant banks, which the banking Act seeks to preserve, is lost. We hold that the Citizens & Southern National Bank and the > Citizens & Southern Holding Company are directly and indirectly holding and controlling more than five per cent of the voting stock of the ten five per cent defendant banks." (P. 363)

It held that the trial judge erred in failing to issue the mandamus prayed for.

On the second appearance of the case (231 Ga., 421; 202 SE 2d, 78) the Supreme Court held that the trial judge erred in giving the Commissioner specific directions as to the manner in which the Commissioner should require compliance with the law, and held that the manner of enforcement should be left to the expertise of the Commissioner.

Thereafter, the trial judge issued a mandamus ordering the Commissioner to take appropriate action against the Citizens & Southern National Bank and the Holding Company to comply with the holding company law of Georgia in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court.

Pursuant to this order the Commissioner issued a lengthy directive to the Citizens & Southern National Bank requiring it to take described specific actions which the Commissioner "deemed necessary to bring about a divestiture of what the court has determined is direct and indirect control of certain banks by the Citizens & Southern National Bank."

The actions were to be taken over a period ending on May 24, 1975.

On the same date the Commissioner ordered fifteen other Georgia five per cent banks which the Commissioner found had the same relation to the Citizens & Southern National Bank and its Holding Company as the ten named banks to take the same actions. The additional banks included five of the banks named in the caption of this case.

Manifestly, if these six banks are merged into the Citizens & Southern Emory Bank and the Citizens & Southern Bank of East Point respectively, the order of the Commissioner as to these banks will become abortive as to such banks.

FACTS AND QUESTIONS OF LAW WHICH PETITIONER BELIEVES WILL NOT BE ADEQUATELY ARGUED BY THE PARTIES

Petitioner believes that the Appellant does not place sufficient emphasis on the fact that the Supreme Court of Georgia has unequivocally condemned the deprivation of the independence of these five per cent banks by the Citizens & Southern National Bank.

Neither does the Appellant give sufficient faith to the efficacy of the judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia and the order of the Commissioner of Banking and Finance to restore the independence of the five per cent banks.

Petitioner believes that the Appellant will not adequately argue that the law of Georgia controls with respect to branch banking and bank holding companies.

Petitioner does not believe the Appellant will adequately argue the principle of law that in gaining control of these banks in violation of the law of Georgia, the Citizens & Southern National Bank's claim of non-competition between these six banks is not tenable.

APPELLEES

BRIEF AMICUS CURIAE OF INDEPENDENT BANKERS ASSOCIATION OF GEORGIA, INC.

I

DECISION OF SUPREME COURT OF GEORGIA

Petitioner submits that the Supreme Court of Georgia recognized that the Legislature of Georgia had clearly expressed its intent to preserve the independence of the local bank. The Supreme Court said:

> "There are two conflicting philosophies concerning the banking business. There are those who believe that the control of additional banks by large financial interests will ultimately destroy independent banks and result in the domination of the economy by too few persons. There are those who believe that larger financial interests can offer a wider variety of services and can better provide the capital to meet the needs of borrowers. This conflict must be resolved by the legislature and not by this court . . . The legislative intent is expressed clearly in the banking laws which provide in Section 1 (Ga. L. 1960, pp. 67, 68): 'It is the intent of this Act to prevent the extension of statewide banking by any institution and to encourage the normal growth of banking units in the local communities . . . It is the intent of this Act to restrict further the acquisition of voting shares of banks by bank holding companies . . .' " (Independent Bankers Association of Georgia, Inc. v. Dunn, et al, 230 Ga. 345, p. 360-1, 197 S.E. 2d. 129.)

The reduction of the percentage of stock which a Holding Company could acquire from fifteen per cent (Ga. L. 1956, pp. 309-12) to five per cent indicated the determination of the Legislature of Georgia to preserve the local independent bank.

The court then proceeded to show by undisputed evidence the manner in which the officers of the Citizens & Southern National Bank had distributed the stock of these acquired banks among its directors, officers, wives of officers and employees, how immediately upon the acquisition it placed an officer of the Citizens & Southern National Bank upon the Board of Directors of each of these banks, then elected another officer of the Citizens & Southern National Bank to become president of the controlled bank and generally exercised supervision and control over these banks.

The Supreme Court held:

"The officers and directors are the alter egos of the bank. It is clear under the evidence here that they are doing indirectly that which cannot be done directly. The independence of these ten five per cent defendent banks, which the banking Act seeks to preserve, is lost." (P. 363)

Clearly, it was the intent of the Supreme Court that these five per cent banks be freed from the domination and control of the Citizens & Southern National Bank and its Holding Company.

The argument that the control of these five per cent banks arose from a voluntary desire of the banks is contradicted by the evidence.

Why did the Citizens & Southern National Bank when it organized a new bank like the Citizens & Southern South DeKalb Bank make certain that its officers, employees and their wives held at least fifty per cent of the stock? The same was true with respect to the Citizens & Southern Bank of Dalton. When the Superintendent of Banks refused to issue a charter since more than fifty per cent of the stock was held by the Citizens & Southern National Bank's officers, employees and their wives, the President of the Citizens & Southern National Bank had local citizens subscribe for additional shares, but in order to make certain that the Citizens & Southern National Bank controlled the bank, had the shares transferred to his wife who paid for them without disclosing this secret arrangement to the Superintendent of Banks. Indeed the President of the Citizens & Southern National Bank admitted that he would not have bought five per cent of the stock of a bank unless he could have obtained additional shares for his officers and directors.

Obviously, the answer is plain that the Citizens & Southern National Bank recognized that the control of these banks rested on substantial stock ownership by the Holding Company and its officers, directors, employees and their wives.

> "The decision of the State that quo warranto lies at the suit of state officials in a State Court to determine whether or not a national bank has violated a state statute is conclusive on the federal courts where the statute is within the power of the state and valid, and the fact that it becomes necessary to determine the rights of the bank under the federal law is immaterial." (First National Bank of St. Louis vs. State of Missouri at inf. Barrett, Mo. 1924, 44 S.Ct. 213, 263 U.S. 640, 68 L.Ed. 486)
> "Federal courts of equity should exercise their discretionary power with proper regard for the rightful independence of state governments in carrying out their domestic policy, and so as to avoid any unnecessary interference by injunction with the lawful action of state officers." (Commonwealth of Pennsylvania vs. John C. Williams, 79 L.Ed. 841; 55 SC, 380)

This court must assume that the Supreme Court of Georgia did not do a vain and useless act. If the court had not believed that the independence of these banks and their ability to compete could be restored and established by the termination of indirect and direct control of these banks, it would have never ordered that a mandamus be issued directing the Commissioner to enforce this law.

II

THE ORDER OF THE COMMISSIONER

The directive issued to these banks by the Commissioner of Banking and Finance spelled out in detail the performance of those acts by the Appellees which the Commissioner declared were necessary to terminate the indirect control of these banks.

The first paragraph of his order directed the termination of direct and indirect supervision of these banks beyond that which is available to any normal correspondent bank. To be sure the Commissioner's directive does not require complete performance of this part of his order until May 24, 1975. Obviously, the extension of time was occasioned by his knowledge of the rigidity of the supervision of the Citizens & Southern National Bank and the difficulties which would be sustained by these banks if complete termination was ordered at once.

The directive required the resignation of any officer or director of the Citizens & Southern National Bank who served as director of these five per cent banks.

It also required the policymaking officers of the Citizens & Southern National Bank to dispose of the stock which they had acquired in connection with the acquisition by the Holding Company of its stock.

The Commissioner also ordered all outdoor signs and advertising of the five per cent banks to show that part of the bank's name which distinguished it from the Citizens & Southern National Bank.

The Holding Company was also ordered to divest itself of its five per cent holding in each of these banks if the stockholders of the Citizens & Southern National Bank owned sufficient stock in such banks to make the total of the stock held by the Holding Company and the stockholders exceed five per cent of the stock of the banks.

Manifestly, if this directive is fully complied with the control of the Citizens & Southern National Bank of these five per cent banks will be ended. They will be in a position to engage in meaningful competition with each other as well as the Citizens & Southern Emory Bank and the Citizens & Southern Bank of East Point.

Even if this order does not achieve its objectives, this court must assume that the Commissioner of Banking and Finance will issue further directives as are necessary to obtain the result ordered by the Supreme Court.

Therefore, the trial judge grievously erred in holding that the decision of the Supreme Court would not establish competition between the banks.

III

THE SUPREME COURT'S JUDGMENT

The decision of the District Court noted that the jurisdiction of the Court did not relate to the enforcement of the banking laws of the State of Georgia, and that the Citizens & Southern National Bank's disregard of Georgia's banking law "is only relevant to the issue of whether the effect of the proposed mergers 'may be substantially to lessen competition' ".

To be sure federal courts do not enforce the decisions of the Supreme Court of Georgia, but as shown by the decisions hereinbefore cited and many more, the federal courts are bound to respect and give full effect to the decisions construing the bank holding company laws of this state. The Supreme Court's direction that a mandamus issue to require the Commissioner of Banking and Finance to take appropriate action to enforce the bank holding company laws of Georgia is binding upon the federal courts.

Implicit in the recent decision of this court in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, Inc. et al, 41 L.Ed.2d, 978 is the conclusion that if the Supreme Court of Washington had held that sponsorship of a new bank did not violate that State's law, this court would have unhesitatingly followed that rule.

The Supreme Court of Georgia has spoken in no uncertain terms as to the meaning of the Georgia holding company law condemning the acquisition of stock in a bank by a holding company.

Inevitably, the logical result is that if there had not been such illegal control of the five per cent banks by the Citizens & Southern National Bank they would have been independent and competitive banking entities.

IV

THE CITIZENS & SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK CAN REAP NO BENEFIT FROM ITS ILLEGAL CONTROL OF THESE BANKS

Many years ago Justice Cardoza speaking for this court said:

> "Enough for present purposes that the disability has its roots in a principle more nearly ultimate than either waiver or estoppel, the principle that no one shall be permitted to found any claim upon his own inequity or take advantage of his own wrong." (R. H. Stearns Co. vs. United States, 291 US 54, 61-2; 78 L. Ed. 647, 653)
>
> "No one should be permitted to profit by, or take advantage of his own wrong." (Equity Section 94; 30 CJS 1015)

Apparently, the trial judge was under the belief that if the violation of the law by the Citizens & Southern National Bank was only technical, the resulting stifling of competition by and among these five per cent banks and the two Citizens & Southern Banks was legal.

Petitioner questions the soundness of this conclusion, but what is more important is that there is no basis for the suggestion that the decision of the Supreme Court was a mere slap on the wrist.

> On its second appearance, the Supreme Court said: "In our former decision it was held that two findings were demanded: First . . . Second. The Citizens & Southern Holding Company and the Citizens & Southern National Bank were found to be indirectly controlling more than five per cent of the stock of certain 'five percent' banks. It was held that under the evidence of this finding was demanded by the action of certain of its officers and directors in acquiring such stock, selling it to selected individuals and trusts, and in treating such banks as branch banks of Citizens & Southern. It was this finding of illegal indirect control of these 'five percent' banks by the Bank and the Holding Company through certain of its officers and directors that was demanded by the evidence. This is the violation that the Commissioner must eliminate." (231 Ga., 421, 424)

To be sure in answer to petitioner's cross appeal, the Supreme Court said:

> "The Commissioner must necessarily be allowed a reasonable time in which to formulate the action required to eliminate the violations. In his discretion a reasonable time for enforcement of his directives may also be indicated in order not to seriously disrupt the financial community or the investments of individuals who purchased 'five percent' bank stock in good faith." (231 Ga., 421, 425)

The fact that the court recognized that the innocent five per cent banks and good faith purchasers of the five per cent bank stock should not be harshly treated is no indication that the Supreme Court regarded the violations of the Citizens & Southern National Bank as merely technical.

Therefore, petitioner most earnestly submits that the assertion of the Citizens & Southern National Bank that there has been no past, present or potential future competition by and among these six banks and the Citizens & Southern's subsidiary banks should be rejected as baseless and utterly sterile.

On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia

BRIEF FOR APPELLEES

OPINION BELOW

The opinion of the district court (J.S. App. 1a-69a) is reported at 372 F. Supp. 616.

JURISDICTION

This action was brought under section 15 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. § 25. The judgment of the district court was entered on January 25, 1974 (J.S. App. 69a) and the notice of appeal to this Court was filed on March 25, 1974 (J.S. App. 73a-74a). Probable jurisdiction was noted on October 21, 1974 (App. E-1842). The jurisdiction of this Court is predicated on section 2 of the Expediting Act of February 11, 1903, as amended, 15 U.S.C. § 29.

STATUTES INVOLVED

Section 1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. § 1, provides in pertinent part:

> "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. . . ."

Section 7 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. § 18, provides in pertinent part:

> "That no corporation engaged in commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital and no corporation subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission shall acquire the whole or any part of the assets of another corporation engaged also in commerce, where in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly.
>
> . . . . . .
>
> ". . . Nor shall anything contained in this section prevent a corporation engaged in commerce from causing the formation of subsidiary corporations for the actual carrying on of their immediate lawful business, or the natural and legitimate branches or extensions thereof, or from owning and holding all or a part of the stock of such subsidiary corporations, when the effect of such formation is not to substantially lessen competition."

Section 5 of the Bank Merger Act of 1966, as amended, 12 U.S.C. § 1828(c)(5), provides in pertinent part:

"The [Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation] . . . shall not approve—

"(B) any other proposed merger transaction whose effect in any section of the country may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly, or which in any other manner would be in restraint of trade, unless it finds that the anticompetitive effects of the proposed transaction are clearly outweighed in the public interest by the probable effect of the transaction in meeting the convenience and needs of the community to be served.

"In every case, the [Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation] . . . shall take into consideration the financial and managerial resources and future prospects of the existing and proposed institutions, and the convenience and needs of the community to be served."

Section 2(d) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended, 12 U.S.C. § 1841(d), provides in pertinent part:

" 'Subsidiary,' with respect to a specified bank holding company, means (1) any company 25 per centum or more of whose voting shares (excluding shares owned by the United States or by any company wholly owned by the United States) is directly or indirectly owned or controlled by such bank holding company, or is held by it with power to vote; (2) any company the election of a majority of whose directors is controlled in any manner by such bank holding company; or (3) any company with respect to the management or policies of which such bank holding company has the power, directly or indirectly, to exercise a controlling influence, as determined by the Board, after notice and opportunity for hearing."

Section 3(a) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 12 U.S.C. § 1842(a), provides in pertinent part:

"It shall be unlawful, except with the prior approval of the Board, . . . (2) for any action to be taken that causes a bank to become a subsidiary of a bank holding company."

Sections 5(a) and 5(b) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 12 U.S.C. § 1844, provide in pertinent part:

"(a) . . . [E]ach bank holding company shall register with the Board on forms prescribed by the Board, which shall include such information with respect to the financial condition and operations, management, and intercompany relationships of the bank holding company and its subsidiaries, and related matters, as the Board may deem necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this chapter. . . .

"(b) The Board is authorized to issue such regulations and orders as may be necessary to enable it to administer and carry out the purposes of this chapter and prevent evasions thereof."

Section 9 of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 12 U.S.C. § 1848, provides in pertinent part:

"Any party aggrieved by an order of the Board under this chapter may obtain a review of such order in the United States Court of Appeals within any circuit wherein such party has its principal place of business, or in the Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia, by filing in the court, within thirty days after the entry of the Board's order, a petition praying that the order of the Board be set aside."

Section 11(d) of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended, 12 U.S.C. § 1849(d), provides in pertinent part:

> "Any acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in section 3(a) of this Act which was consummated at any time prior or subsequent to May 9, 1956, and as to which no litigation was initiated by the Attorney General prior to the date of enactment of this amendment [July 1, 1966], shall be conclusively presumed not to have been in violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of the . . . [Sherman Act]."

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

An urban bank, in order to retain the business of those of its customers who had moved to the suburbs, without violating a state law that forbade the bank to open branch offices there, devised the following approach: It organized new banks in the suburbs, taking back a five percent stock interest in each new bank (the maximum allowed by state law) and providing each bank with staff, advice, and guidance. The new banks used the name and distinctive logogram of the organizing bank and were identified in the public mind as branches of that bank. The stockholders of the new banks anticipated that the banks would be formally acquired by the organizing bank if and when state law was liberalized. In the interim, the several banks involved competed mainly with the other banks in their markets rather than with each other. The questions presented are:

1. Whether the foregoing course of conduct constituted, as a matter of law, a per se violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act.

2. Whether that issue was within the primary jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board.

3. Whether the formal acquisition of the banks by the organizing bank would be likely to lessen competition substantially, in violation of section 7 of the Clayton Act.

4. Whether the conduct described is immune from challenge under the antitrust laws by virtue of either (a) the grandfather clause of the Bank Holding Company Act or (b) the subsidiary exemption in section 7 of the Clayton Act.

STATEMENT

Introduction

The Department of Justice brought this civil antitrust suit to enjoin (1) the proposed acquisition of five small banks in the Atlanta metropolitan area by The Citizens and Southern National Bank ("C&S"),[1] as a violation of section 7 of the Clayton Act, and (2) the present relationship between C&S and the five small banks (plus another small bank not involved in the proposed acquisition), as a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act. After complete discovery and a full trial, the district court entered judgment for the defendants. The Department has appealed to this Court under the Expediting Act.

Background to the Department's Suit

Prior to 1927, Georgia law permitted banks to establish branch offices anywhere in the state, and C&S, whose home office was (and is) located in Savannah, Georgia, had established three offices in Atlanta (J.S. App. 9a). A law passed that year, as

---

[1] Technically, the proposal was for an acquisition of the assets and an assumption of the liabilities of the five banks, and the acquisition was to be made not by the C&S National Bank but by two subsidiaries (C&S East Point and C&S Emory) of a subsidiary of C&S National Bank (C&S Holding Company). Nothing in this case turns on these technicalities, so we shall ignore them.

The five banks to be acquired are C&S Sandy Springs, C&S Chamblee, C&S Park National, C&S North Fulton and C&S South DeKalb.

modified in 1929, forbade any bank to establish a branch outside of the city in which the bank's home office was located (J.S. App. 8a), although previously established branches could be retained.

This type of law—which treats branching by the opening of new offices (de novo branching) just like the acquisition of existing bank offices and which forbids branching regardless of the needs or competitive situation of the affected market—has been widely criticized as protectionist[2] and anticompetitive, notably by the Antitrust Division of the Justice Department.[3] It is also discriminatory: by freezing C&S at three offices in Atlanta, while allowing its competitors whose home offices are in Atlanta to branch freely throughout the city, the 1929 law placed C&S at a serious competitive disadvantage. Initially, however, C&S was able to use a method of internal expansion not dealt with by the 1929 law: the formation of a bank holding company followed by the organization of a new bank as a wholly owned subsidiary of the holding company (J.S. App. 9a-10a). Eventually, the state eliminated this method of internal expansion too: a statute passed in 1956 forbade a bank holding company to own more than 15 percent of the stock of another bank, and in 1960 the law was amended to reduce the maximum amount of stock ownership to five percent (J.S. App. 8a).[4]

[2] The plain purpose of the 1929 Act was to protect the banks that were headquartered in a city from the competition of banks headquartered in other cities. Judging from C&S's growth (discussed in the text below) notwithstanding the 1929 Act and successor statutes, the effect of the Act, at least in Atlanta, was indeed to protect local banks against a more efficient competitor.

[3] See, with specific reference to Georgia's branch-banking law, App. E-836, and App. 294-95 (testimony of the government's expert economic witness). These criticisms of restrictive branch-banking laws were noted sympathetically in this Court's recent opinion in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U.S. 602, —, n. 8 (1974).

[4] As under the 1929 Act, existing relationships were grandfathered.

By this time, however, the establishment of additional branches within the city limits of Atlanta had ceased to be of pressing concern to C&S. The general movement of population, both residential and commercial, from Atlanta to its suburbs (App. 877) was creating a more acute problem for C&S than its lack of adequate branch offices within the city limits of Atlanta (see App. 345-47, 355, 853-55). C&S could not hope to retain the business of its customers who were moving outside of the city limits unless it established branches there, because these customers were unwilling to drive into the city to conduct their banking business (App. 347, 796).[5] Yet the combined effect of the 1929, 1956, and 1960 laws, it seemed, was to foreclose C&S from branching either directly or indirectly beyond the city limits of Atlanta.[6] This limitation affected all Atlanta banks, but C&S most acutely because its business success has been built largely on emphasizing the retail side of the banking business—i.e., serving the needs of individuals and small firms (App. 351, 600, 863). The retail segment of the business is the most localized. The retail customer can be served effectively only by an office convenient to him.

It is a remarkable fact, and compelling testimony to C&S's competitive attitude and energies, that despite the very unequal impact of restrictive branch-banking laws on C&S compared to its major competitors, C&S became the largest bank in the City of Atlanta. Indeed, though C&S's home office is in Savannah and it has offices elsewhere in the state as well, today most of [5] Although many suburban residents commuted to downtown Atlanta and continued to patronize downtown banks, their families needed a suburban banking office. Moreover, businesses have increasingly been relocating in the suburbs, thereby eliminating commutation to the central city (App. 796).

[6] Although the state's branch-banking law had been changed in 1960 to permit branching throughout any city in which a bank had an office (J.S. App. 8a) this change of law did not enable C&S to establish branches outside of the city limits of Atlanta.

its business is in Atlanta. And its growth in Atlanta has been almost entirely a result of internal expansion rather than acquisition. Only about 12 percent of C&S's total demand deposits in the Atlanta area are accounted for by branches that it acquired rather than created de novo; only five of its 49 offices in the Atlanta area were acquired, and they were acquired over a period of time from 1929 to 1970.[7] All of C&S's acquisitions, moreover, have been of banks that were experiencing serious business difficulties (App. 344, E-476-78).

But the movement of people and business to the suburbs beyond the city limits of Atlanta could not be ignored. Beginning in 1959 C&S developed a method of expanding into the suburbs without (it believed) violating the state's branch-banking laws. This method—the "correspondent associate" system—is the basis of the Sherman Act charge in this case, and the background to the challenged acquisitions.

The Correspondent-Associate Program

The method used by C&S to enter the suburban Atlanta banking markets within the constraints imposed by state law involved the organization of new banks that would enjoy from the outset the special status of "correspondent associates" of C&S and the use of the C&S name and goodwill.

C&S was intimately involved in all aspects of the organization of the five banks that it is seeking to acquire formally (J.S. App. 42a; App. 461-62, E-590-92, E-604, E-644-45, E-653-56, E-677).[8] C&S prepared and filed the charter applications (J.S. App. 49a; App. 395, E-330, E-705) and placed the stock of the new banks with officers and employees of C&S, members of their families, and loyal customers of C&S (J.S. App. 43a-44a; App. 680, E-574-88), retaining for itself five percent of the stock of each bank (hence the term "five percent bank").[9] This was the maximum amount that state law permitted C&S to own directly (J.S. App. 43a-45a).

[7] These computations are based on the evidence contained in GX 78 and GX 4 and exclude the pre-1927 acquisitions by which C&S first obtained a toehold in the Atlanta market.

[8] In one instance relevant to this case, C&S made an existing bank a correspondent associate. This bank, the C&S Bank of Tucker, is not involved in the Clayton Act phase of the case because the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation denied C&S's application to acquire it (App. E-7-9), but its relationship with C&S is challenged as a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act.

An especially important aspect of C&S's organizational role was its assurances to the chartering agencies that C&S was backing each new bank with its own financial resources and banking experience and would assist the new bank to become and remain a healthy and effective competitor. This commitment was frequently a controlling factor in the agency's decision to issue the charter (App. 349, 527, 576, E-331-36).[10]

To implement its commitment to the banking authorities (and to the local businessmen who had supported efforts to get the banks started), C&S undertook to furnish the principal executives of the banks from C&S's own executive ranks (J.S. App. 46a; App. 794-98, 813-15). These executives retained their C&S employment benefits while serving with a correspondent associate; indeed, for pension and promotion purposes, service with one of the correspondent associates was considered the same thing as working for C&S (J.S. App. 51a; App. 686-87, E-553-2 to E-555-2). C&S furnished assistance to the correspondent associates in many other forms as well. It

[9] In some instances not involved in this case C&S obtained a five percent interest in a bank for investment purposes only, without making the bank a correspondent associate of C&S (App. 578-79). All subsequent references to "five percent banks" are to C&S's correspondent associates.

[10] In two instances, the bank regulators had refused to charter banks in areas where C&S then organized a correspondent associate (for which it obtained a charter) because the initial applicants had lacked adequate financial backing or banking experience (App. 740-41, 762-63, 850).

saw to the selection of qualified directors (J.S. App. 42a; App. 362-64, 427, 502, E-330). It selected the locations for the banks' offices (J.S. App. 49a; App. E-305-329, E-703-04). An executive of C&S was designated as an "advisory director" to meet with and counsel the board of directors of each bank (J.S. App. 53a; App. 811-12, 851). C&S furnished capital and managerial assistance to any correspondent associate that had special problems (J.S. App. 53a; App. 348-49, E-567-2, 568-2),[11] and to prevent problems from developing in the first place it not only conducted "surprise" audits of the banks (App. 169-70) but participated in credit checks of the banks' loans after they had been made, to assure that the banks' loan officers were not making unduly risky loans (App. 487-88, 728).

Further, C&S provided each bank with comprehensive and continuing advice, counsel, and information on all phases of the banking business. Much of this information was embodied in detailed operating manuals (J.S. App. 52a-53a; App. 503).[12] Some was contained in memoranda that the C&S head office in Atlanta circulated both to its formal branches and to the correspondent associates. It was bank policy to place the legend "FOR INFORMATION ONLY" clearly and conspicuously on all copies of memoranda that were distributed to the correspondent associates, including the few memoranda that related to prices or other terms and conditions of doing business (App. 754, 829-30). Occasionally, this legend was inadvertently omitted, but the five percent banks clearly understood that such memoranda were intended for their information in making their own decisions (App. 776-77, 806-09, 829-30).

[11] The record shows that C&S provided a substantial percentage of the capital for each correspondent associate through the purchase of common stock and capital notes and debentures. The percentage of total capital provided by C&S ranged from 33.7 percent for Chamblee to 41 percent for Tucker (App. E-691).

[12] As an example of the kind of valuable information furnished by C&S to the correspondent associates in the manuals, see App. E-692 (foreclosure of second mortgages on real estate) and App. E-693-98 (summary of Regulation Z of Federal Reserve Board); App. E-878-80 (audit procedures for certain kinds of loans); and App. E-1100-10 (summary of bankruptcy procedures).

A very important element of the correspondent-associate relationship was the use by each correspondent associate of the C&S name and distinctive (bright-green lollipop-shaped) logogram (J.S. App. 50a; App. 774-75, 811, E-1804-15). The effect of the common name and logogram was that the average banking customer assumed that the correspondent associates were formal branch offices of C&S (J.S. App. 54a; App. 577-78, 617). Indeed, C&S and the correspondent associates are physically indistinguishable. (See pp. A-1, A-2, infra, photographs from the record of a formal C&S branch and a correspondent associate.)

Although C&S had reason to believe that the Justice Department interpreted the Sherman Act as authorizing C&S to determine the prices of the five percent banks,[13] it instructed its personnel, out of an abundance of caution and complete respect for the antitrust laws, never to attempt to direct or agree upon the prices or terms and conditions on which the five percent banks conducted their business (App. E-243-50, E-699-702A).[14] The C&S policy forbade agreements with or between the five percent banks on prices or customer or territorial allocation—all in an effort to carve out of the correspondent-associate relationship activities that might be [13] App. E-1830-35; see pp. 51-53, infra.

[14] Prior to 1962, some banks were unaware of the need to comply with the antitrust laws. They were first awakened to this need when Comptroller of the Currency James Saxon, on February 28, 1962, published his famous "clearing house letter" warning banks to avoid antitrust violations. See 79 Banking Law Journal 530 (1962). Although the applicability of this warning to the correspondent associate relationship was uncertain, C&S and the five percent banks placed restrictions on the relationship explicitly designed to avoid even an appearance of violation of the antitrust laws (App. E-243-50, E-699-702A).

regarded as violations of the Sherman Act (ibid.). This policy was scrupulously obeyed, and it was clearly understood by all concerned that the five percent banks had complete freedom and responsibility to adopt whatever prices, credit conditions, business hours, etc., that they thought best (e.g., App. 478-79, 507-14, 731-32). The officers and directors of the five percent banks exercised this freedom and responsibility in light of the competitive conditions in their markets and their own unilateral business judgment (App. 690-91, 820-22). However, as a natural consequence of the C&S background and training of the five percent banks' executives, C&S's superior knowledge and experience with respect to competitive conditions in the banking industry, and the common name, logogram, and business methods, which identified the five percent banks in the public mind as branches of C&S, the five percent banks chose to compete as C&S banks rather than with C&S (e.g., App. 480-81, 758). That is, they viewed themselves as offering a common service in competition with the services offered by non-C&S banks (App. 480-81).[15]

The extensive network of relationships between C&S and its correspondent associates went beyond the ordinary relationship between a bank and its correspondents (App. 89-95, 118-23, 143, 145-47).[16] The effect was to bring C&S banking

[15] It must be remembered that the five percent banks were offering C&S services in geographical market areas in which C&S National and its majority affiliates were prohibited by law from operating.

[16] A large bank offering correspondent banking services does not routinely and systematically offer its correspondents a number of the services provided by C&S to the five percent banks, including the use of its name, goodwill, and personnel, the review and evaluation of management performance and credit reports, analyses of earning and expense ratios and other indices of effective performance, the use of general operating and credit guidelines and manuals, participation in pension and profit-sharing and other incentive plans, access to an emergency personnel pool, periodic and surprise continu-methods to areas in which C&S was forbidden to have formal branches, and was therefore procompetitive (J.S. App. 28a).

The correspondent-associate program was at all times fully disclosed to, and understood and approved by, the state and federal banking agencies having regulatory authority over the banks (J.S. App. 46a-49a; App. 577, E-331-36). There was no concealment—quite the contrary, the relationship was viewed as a favorable, and frequently as a controlling, factor in the decision whether to issue a bank charter (ibid.).

In 1968 the Federal Reserve Board conducted an investigation (App. E-166-231) to determine whether C&S directly or indirectly controlled more than five percent of the stock of the five percent banks, which under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 would have required the Board's approval.[17] A hearing was held in which a representative of the Antitrust Division participated (App. E-217-18). The Board found no evidence of a violation of the Bank Holding Company Act and neither the Board nor the Antitrust Division suggested that the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks raised any question under the Sherman Act (App. 437-38, E-206-16, E-232-39).

ing internal audits of operating procedures, preparation and analysis of budget and performance projections or goals, memoranda regarding changes in the laws affecting banking, an opportunity to attend training programs, etc. (compare App. 89-95, 118-23, 143, 145-47 with J.S. App. 46a-56a).

[17] In 1970, the statutory test of indirect control was expanded to embrace the exercise of a "controlling influence over management and policies." Existing relationships were grandfathered. See Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended, §§ 2(d), 3(a), 11(d), pp. 3-5, supra.

The Proposed Acquisitions and the Proceedings Before the FDIC

The purpose of creating the correspondent associates was to give C&S the closest thing to branch offices that state law would permit it to have in the Atlanta suburbs. The system was viewed by all concerned as a distinctly second-best alternative to outright branching. Hence from the outset it was anticipated both by C&S and by an overwhelming majority of the other shareholders of each of the correspondent associates that if and when the limitations of Georgia law on branch banking were relaxed (or alternatively the city limits of Atlanta were expanded to include the suburban areas in which the five percent banks were located) the banks would be formally acquired by C&S (J.S. App. 45a-46a; App. 352-53, 424).[18] When on March 28, 1970, Georgia law finally was changed (effective January 1, 1971) to permit banks to branch throughout the counties in which they had offices, C&S applied to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation for permission to acquire the five sponsored banks plus a sixth correspondent associate (C&S Bank of Tucker) which it had not organized.

As required by the Bank Merger Act, the Department of Justice submitted to the FDIC a report on the competitive effects of the proposed acquisition (App. E-24-37). The Department's report advised that the proposed acquisition of the five sponsored banks would have "no adverse effect on competition" (App. E-26), since "no competition has ever existed between these banks" (ibid.). Indeed, the Department advised that "[t]hese mergers constitute what is essentially an internal reorganization" (App. E-25). The Department had taken the same position with respect to an earlier acquisition by C&S of a five percent bank (App. 431-32, E-1830-35); the Department had described the formation of the five percent banks as a form of de novo branching (App. E-1832).

[18] A 1971 survey of the stockholders of the correspondent associates showed that the overwhelming majority of them expressly anticipated that C&S would provide management for their bank and that their bank would be merged into C&S as soon as possible (J.S. App. 45a-46a).

The Department advised against approval of the proposed acquisition of C&S Bank of Tucker, however, emphasizing that it had been in existence for 50 years prior to its "affiliation" (the Department's term; see App. E-32) with C&S. It distinguished the proposed acquisition of the five sponsored banks in the following words:

> "There seems to be no question that these banks have always been 'affiliated' with the C&S system and have never represented independent competitors in DeKalb County banking. Thus, these mergers, standing alone, would have little or no effect on competition." [App. E-34.]

In none of the competitive reports was it alleged that the relationships between C&S and the five percent banks might violate the Sherman Act.[19]

Several months later, the Department withdrew its competitive report with respect to the proposed acquisition of the five sponsored banks and submitted a revised report based on a further investigation that it had conducted in Atlanta (App. E-38-56). The investigation had revealed that another bank that had once been a correspondent associate of C&S—Stone Mountain—had later severed its relationship with C&S. The episode persuaded the Department that the relationships between C&S and the sponsored banks were less permanent than it had previously thought. Again the Department did not allege that these relationships violated the Sherman Act.

[19] Had the Department thought there was a Sherman Act problem, that would—by the government's present theory—have supplied a compelling reason for advising the FDIC not to approve the application.

The FDIC, after a detailed and thorough consideration of the matter, approved the acquisition by C&S of the five sponsored banks (App. E-1-6), but disapproved the proposed acquisition of Tucker (App. E-7-9). It found that C&S and the sponsored banks did not compete with one another and never had and that the possibility that the ties between them would dissolve was too remote to warrant a finding that the merger would eliminate a substantial potential for competition between them in the future:[20]

> "The banks involved in the proposed mergers do not compete today and never have competed in the past. The two smaller banks were both organized under C&S guidance and direction at a time when Georgia law did not permit C&S National or any other Atlanta bank to branch outside the City of Atlanta. A close working relationship has existed ever since and a majority of the stock in each bank has been held continuously by directors, officers and employees of C&S National, directors, officers and employees of subsidiary banks of C&S Holding, and a number of influential customers who maintain significant banking relationships with one or more such banks. The remaining stock is well dispersed, with no significant blocs held independently of the C&S system. From the inception of both banks, their management has been drawn from the C&S system, C&S National has hired all their employees, and these employees participate fully in the various employee benefits provided by the C&S system. Customers seeking services not provided by Sandy Springs Bank or North Fulton Bank are referred to C&S National, and that bank provides credit services, investment advice and numerous other services for the two smaller banks in much the same manner as it does for its own branches or subsidiary banks. Like the other banks in the C&S system, these 5 percent banks use the C&S name and logo and advertise jointly. More than 40 percent of their respective loan portfolios are loans purchased from C&S National, while their buildings have been leased from other C&S entities. When additional capital became desirable, C&S National subscribed to capital notes of each bank. In short, North Fulton Bank and Sandy Springs Bank have been recognized by the public and the C&S National as part of the C&S system since their inception.

[20] The quotations that follow are from the FDIC's report with respect to acquisition of two of the five sponsored banks (App. E-1-4). The findings and conclusions in that report were incorporated by reference in the FDIC's report on the acquisition of the other three sponsored banks (App. E-5-6).

". . .[T]he Corporation finds no reasonable probability that North Fulton Bank or Sandy Springs Bank would become disassociated from the C&S system in the future if the proposed mergers are denied. This conclusion is based in part on the close working relationship described above and the continuing nature of that relationship throughout the history of both banks. The following considerations also appear relevant.

"The relationship between each bank and the C&S system has been mutually advantageous; voluntary disaffiliation would run the risk of significant transfers of banking relationships and official staff, and a consequent weakening of the ability of both banks to compete in the new and intensely competitive climate of county-wide branching.

"Neither bank has had significant transfers of stock since they were organized, and there is some evidence that persons who bought shares initially expected a merger into C&S National or a C&S majority-owned subsidiary whenever Georgia law was changed to permit it. The virtually unanimous vote of the shareholders of both banks approving the proposed merger into East Point Bank tends to confirm this expectation and attests to the complete acceptance of C&S direction by shareholders as well as directors of the two banks." [App. E-2-3.]

The voluntary disaffiliation of C&S Stone Mountain was distinguished:

> "In the one recent example of voluntary disaffiliation by a five percent bank from the C&S system—out of more than 30 possibilities Statewide—that bank had a very significant bloc of stock held independently of C&S influence and a history of local independence on the part of its Board of Directors and top management. Its disaffiliation does not increase the likelihood of disaffiliation of North Fulton Bank or Sandy Springs Bank if the present mergers are denied.
>
> "If voluntary disaffiliation represents no more than an unlikely possibility, the Corporation finds itself unable to conclude that the proposed mergers would eliminate any significant potential for increased competition between the two banks or between either of them and the rest of the C&S system banks.
> "The Corporation concludes that the proposed mergers would not be anticompetitive either as to existing or as to potential competition." [App. E-3].

However, the FDIC disapproved C&S's proposed acquisition of Tucker on the ground that the establishment of the correspondent associate relationship—which the FDIC treated as a de facto acquisition of C&S Tucker—had been anticompetitive when made in 1965, in view of Tucker's substantial position in the market at that time (App. E-7-9).

The Proceeding in the District Court

Following the FDIC approval, the Department of Justice brought suit challenging the proposed acquisition of the five sponsored banks by C&S as a violation of section 7 of the Clayton Act. For the first time, the Department suggested that the relationships between C&S and the five banks (plus Tucker) that comprised the correspondent-associate system violated the Sherman Act. Specifically, the complaint (App. 17-20) alleged that the "close working relationship" between C&S and the five percent banks noted by the FDIC in its report approving the proposed acquisition was a conspiracy to eliminate competition, in violation of section 1 of the Act.

Pursuant to the Bank Merger Act, the acquisition of the five sponsored banks by C&S was automatically stayed upon the filing of the government's suit. The stay remains in effect.

At trial, the government introduced two sorts of evidence in its attempt to demonstrate a violation of section 7 of the Clayton Act. The first related to the government's claim that the Atlanta area, and certain counties or parts of counties within the area, were appropriate geographical markets in which to appraise the competitive effects of the proposed acquisitions. The second consisted of statistics showing the percentages of loans and deposits accounted for by the parties to the proposed acquisitions in the various alleged markets. The statistics showed that C&S had about 30 percent of total deposits, and the five sponsored banks together about two percent, in the Atlanta area (J.S. App. 39a). In the other markets proposed by the government, C&S's percentage was somewhat lower and the sponsored banks' somewhat higher (J.S. App. 31a-38a).

No attempt was made to prove that C&S and the sponsored banks had been in the same geographical market at the time that the sponsored banks were originally formed. The government conceded that, treating their formation as the equivalent of their having been acquired by C&S (the approach taken by the FDIC), the acquisitions could not have raised any question under section 7 of the Clayton Act (J.S. App. 64a-65a).

With respect to the Sherman Act, the government offered no evidence except communications between C&S and the five percent banks—in particular communications with respect to rates and hours of business of C&S. The government's apparent theory of the section 1 violation at trial was that the communication of any information and advice with respect to the terms and conditions of the sale of banking services constituted a per se violation of section 1 as the government interpreted United States v. Container Corp. of America, 393 U.S. 333 (1969).

In its opinion finding for the defendants, the district court dealt first with the Sherman Act charge. It did not reach the defendants' arguments that the relationships among them were protected from antitrust attack by the subsidiary exemption of section 7 of the Clayton Act and by the grandfather provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act. The court held, in the alternative, that the government had failed to prove an agreement in unreasonable restraint of trade and that the question was in any event within the exclusive primary jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board, since it related to the organization and operation of a bank by a bank holding company.

The court first observed:

> "Generally, only unreasonable restraints of trade violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act. Some practices, such as agreements not to compete, collusive price fixing, agreements for market division, group boycotts, tie-in agreements (perhaps), and pooling of profits and losses, however, have been found to be so intrinsically unreasonable as to constitute what have come to be called per se restraints or violations of the Act." [J.S. App. 20a-21a.]

But all the government had alleged was:

"1. The routine and systematic practice of furnishing to one another comprehensive information as to past, present and future competitive practices and policies with a purpose of achieving uniformity among the defendants;

"2. The provision by C&S National to the five percent defendants of various manuals and memoranda;

"3. The provision by C&S National to the five percent defendants of suggestions and advice on such matters as rates, hours of operation, types of loan to discourage and minimum loan rates. [Plaintiff's post-trial brief, pp. 57-64]." [J.S. App. 24a.]

After observing that the advice and suggestions had generally been followed, the court then found that the defendants' behavior did not constitute a per se violation:

"These activities, however, do not amount to collusive price fixing. For example, there is no suggestion that any advice as to rates amounts to more than an expert appraisal of a market situation from the point of view of a lending institution—a type of opinion to which a lending institution would naturally be expected to pay great attention. Likewise, the Court does not view the pleadings or evidence as suggesting the existence of any agreements not to compete or for market division." [J.S. App. 24a.]

. . . . . .

"The practices involved here do not conform to the accepted definition or description of per se antitrust violations where no resort to context or circumstances is required (or permitted)." [J.S. App. 25a.]

Having found that there was no per se violation, the court then addressed the question whether the alleged information exchanges might violate the Rule of Reason, and held that > "The Government has not sustained its burden of proof as to the unreasonableness of the practices involved or with respect to any adverse impact upon competition. There was no evidence that any customers or potential customers were being adversely affected, and the heads of each competitor organization testified that the operation of the five percent defendant banks as 100 percent C&S banks would not adversely affect them or change the competitive impact on them in any way. There is no evidence that the quality of service would have been improved absent the factors of which the Government complains. The Government has relied upon a claimed per se illegality rather than unreasonableness of the specific practices involved and, for the reasons set forth above, the Court does not believe the evidence will support a finding that such practices in fact were unreasonable restraints of trade. Indeed, the Court is constrained to find that, balancing the evidence, such practices were in fact reasonable." [J.S. App. 27a-28a.]

Summarizing, the court stated:

> "There is no evidence of record to conclude that the utilization by the five percent defendant banks of the services or information received by them from C&S National or C&S Holding was a result of any tacit or explicit combinations rather than the natural deference of the recipient to information from one with greater expertise or better sources. In either case there is the flow of information as to rates, practices, etc., which the Government apparently applauds or at least condones in a correspondent banking relationship. Taking this into consideration, as well as the Government's previously-quoted statement in Marine Bancorporation, supra,[21] the Court finds as a fact that the relationship between C&S National, C&S Holding, and the five percent defendant banks, and the interchange of information between them, have been reasonable under the circumstances and not in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. The Court also finds that the Government has not sustained its burden of proof to the contrary." [J.S. App. 29a.]

Having disposed of the section 1 charge, the court turned next to the section 7 charge. It did not reach the defendants' arguments that the government had defined the geographical markets incorrectly and that the acquisition was protected by the convenience and needs defense of the Bank Merger Act. The court held that the government had failed to prove that the proposed acquisitions were likely to lessen competition substantially, in light of the existing relationships between C&S and the five percent banks that it proposed to acquire.

After a lengthy review of those relationships (J.S. App. 42a-55a), and a discussion of United States v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, 412 U.S. 946 (1973), affirming per curiam 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 (W.D. Tex.), where this Court had affirmed the dismissal of a complaint challenging a merger between related banks—a decision "almost squarely in point" (J.S. App. 60a)—the district court stated:

"The Government admits that it did not challenge the initial acquisition by C&S Holding of its five percent in-[21] The court here was referring to the government's jurisdictional statement in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U.S. 602 (1974), where the government had applauded the method used by C&S to gain entry into the Atlanta suburbs in the following words, quoted by the district court in the present case at J.S. App. 22a-23a (emphasis the court's):

> "Banks in the State of Washington have, however, achieved de novo entry into areas foreclosed to de novo branching by sponsoring the organization of an affiliate bank, and later acquiring the bank. This method of expansion is a legal (Tr. 732-733) and a well-recognized practice used by large statewide banking organizations (GX I, Tr. 280, 298) and recognized by the federal banking authorities (GX H)." terest in each of the five percent defendant banks because those acquisitions 'were competitively insignificant when made.' [Plaintiff's post-trial brief, p. 14] The Government has not carried its burden of demonstrating any substantial increase in the degree of control or change in quantity of competition between the date of the initial acquisitions and the date of the trial. The Government has postulated that if the mergers are denied, C&S may establish de novo branches in direct competition with the five percent defendants. To find a viable competitive result from such a postulate, the Court would have to speculate that (1) the five percent defendant banks actually would break away from C&S, (2) they would become successful independent banks despite their past reliance on C&S, and (3) the regulatory agencies would approve directly competitive branching by C&S. The evidence of record does not support, individually or collectively, such postulates or speculations." [J.S. App. 64a-65a.]

In summary, the court found that since the five percent banks did not compete with each other or with C&S (except for the sort of "friendly rivalry" often carried on within an organization [J.S. App. 64a; App 480-81, 705-07]), and were unlikely ever to do so, the proposed acquisition would be (as the Justice Department had initially advised the FDIC) in the nature of an internal reorganization, and would not affect the competitive situation in the Atlanta banking markets.[22]

The IBA Suit and the District Court's Amended Order

Simultaneously with this antitrust action, a suit brought by a trade association of C&S's competitors, the Independent Bankers Association of Georgia, challenging the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks as a violation of Georgia's bank holding company law, was wending its way through the Georgia courts. Shortly after the district court rendered its decision in the antitrust suit, the state-court litigation was finally terminated by the issuance of a decree by the Commissioner of Banking and Finance for the State of Georgia pursuant to a mandamus issued by the Supreme Court of Georgia in Independent Bankers Ass'n v. Dunn, 230 Ga. 345, 197 S.E. 2d 129 (1973), modified sub nom. Citizens & Southern Nat'l Bank v. Independent Bankers Ass'n, 231 Ga. 421, 202 S.E. 2d 78 (1973). That decree (J.S. App. 75a-87a) required the divestiture of certain stock in the five percent banks owned by some officers of C&S and certain other nominal changes in the correspondent-associate system (see pp. 69-70 infra). On a motion by the defendants in the antitrust suit—to which the Department of Justice made no objection—the district court entered an order nunc pro tunc amending its opinion to state that the changes in the five percent system required by the Commissioner's order did not alter the court's conclusion that the proposed acquisitions would not substantially lessen competition (J.S. App. 70a-72a).

[22] The court observed that the government had not produced a single witness to testify that the proposed acquisition would adversely affect competition. Even the government's expert economic witness failed to testify on the competitive implications of the acquisitions. (J.S. App. 55a-56a.) The government's case thus rested entirely on concentration statistics.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

During the 1960s The Citizens and Southern National Bank, a major bank in Atlanta, was barred from opening branch offices in metropolitan Atlanta beyond its tight city limits by a Georgia law that the Justice Department has denounced as anticompetitive. C&S developed, however, a method of expanding into the suburbs notwithstanding the provisions of the state law. The method, which was fully understood and sanctioned by the federal and state bank regulators, involved organizing new banks in the suburbs, taking back a five percent stock interest (the maximum that C&S was permitted by the state bank-holding-company law to own directly), placing the remaining stock with friends of C&S (officers, employees, loyal customers, etc.), staffing the banks, and furnishing them with voluminous advice, guidance, and information with respect to all phases of the banking business. The new banks were given the C&S name and permitted to use C&S's distinctive logogram; as a result the "five percent banks" became identified in the public mind as branches of C&S.

This system of indirect branching was regarded as a stopgap: it was anticipated that as soon as the restrictions against branching beyond Atlanta's city limits were relaxed, C&S would formally acquire its "correspondent associates" (the five percent banks). But when the restrictions were relaxed and C&S attempted to acquire the five percent banks in 1971, it was met by a double-barreled attack by the Justice Department, which charged that the proposed acquisitions violated section 7 of the Clayton Act and that the correspondent-associate relationship violated section 1 of the Sherman Act.

I

The position of the Justice Department in this case is anticompetitive. C&S used the only method open to it to expand internally into the Atlanta suburbs. The Justice Department generally regards internal expansion as procompetitive and laws that block it as anticompetitive, yet it asks this Court to place conditions on the use of indirect branching in this case that would make this form of internal expansion utterly unusable. Although the prospect of eventually being able to acquire the five percent banks was a critical inducement to C&S when it organized them, the Justice Department seeks to destroy that prospect by attacking the eventual acquisition as a violation of section 7 of the Clayton Act. Moreover, although the intimate relationship that existed from the outset between C&S and the five percent banks was a decisive factor in the decision of the banking agencies to charter those banks, the Justice Department seeks to preclude the development of such a relationship by attacking it as a per se violation of the Sherman Act.

The Department's position in this case is not only inconsistent with the policy of the antitrust laws themselves, which is to foster internal growth, especially in markets impeded by regulatory barriers to entry, but it is also inconsistent with the position the Department urged in this Court less than a year ago in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U.S. 602 (1974). There the Department asked the Court to encourage banks to use just the method of internal growth that C&S used in this case—and that the Department has now unaccountably attacked.

Besides failing to interpret the antitrust laws consistently and purposively, the Department in this case has exalted form over substance. Were it not for the provisions of Georgia law that the Department deplores, the five percent banks would have been formal branches of C&S from the outset and no conceivable issue of antitrust illegality would have been raised by their failure to compete with C&S. Georgia law forced C&S to take an indirect route and defer obtaining formal corporate control of the five percent banks for a period of years. There is no basis for condemning a practice under the antitrust laws because it is unconventional—especially when it is procompetitive. The Justice Department's apparent concern that if C&S's conduct is sanctioned General Motors will somehow be able to acquire Ford without committing a violation of the antitrust laws suggests a remarkably gloomy assessment of the ability of courts to make distinctions—and, as to banking, completely ignores the statutory requirement since 1970 that relationships similar to those involved here must be approved by the Federal Reserve Board, after notice, opportunity for hearing, and consideration of the views of the Department of Justice (12 U.S.C. §§ 1841(d), 1842 (a)(2)).

II

Quite apart from the perversity of its position in this case, the Justice Department has failed to present any basis in logic or precedent for reversing the district court's decision, which found for the defendants on all counts after a full trial. With respect to the alleged violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act, the Department has experimented in the course of this proceeding with a variety of theories, and all are untenable. Its brief on the merits advances three theories. One is that there was an actual price-fixing conspiracy between C&S and the five percent banks. This theory appeared for the first time in the Brief in Opposition to Motion to Affirm. It is foreclosed by a finding of fact of the district court that there was no agreement between C&S and the five percent banks not to compete. The only evidence the government points to in support of this theory is C&S's communication of some price information to the five percent banks followed in a few instances by changes in the prices charged by the latter banks. Such evidence is plainly insufficient to warrant (let alone compel) an inference of price fixing—else anytime a firm publicly announced a price change that a competitor followed it would be guilty of a crime. The government has ignored undisputed evidence that the price communications were purely informational, that they were not attempts either to dictate or to invite agreement upon prices, and that the five percent banks made their pricing decisions unilaterally.

Even if C&S had attempted to dictate the prices charged by the five percent banks, it would not be guilty of violating the Sherman Act. So extensive were the linkages between C&S and the five percent banks that the Department accepts the description of the latter as "de facto branches" of C&S. Indeed, it describes C&S plus the five percent banks as constituting a "single economic enterprise." The control of pricing within a single economic enterprise does not violate the Sherman Act. To be sure, if subsidiaries or branches hold themselves out to the public as independent firms, the "intra-enterprise conspiracy doctrine" may require them to determine prices independently (as the five percent banks in fact did here). But since the five percent banks did not hold themselves out as being separate and independent from C&S (quite the contrary), the doctrine was not applicable. Indeed, the public position of the Department (conveniently suppressed in its brief in this case) is that the doctrine is inapplicable to the banking industry, unless predatory conduct is involved (it is not here).

The Department's second theory of Sherman Act violation is that the exchange of price information is a per se violation under the teachings of this Court's decision in United States v. Container Corp. of America, 393 U.S. 333 (1969). But that decision holds that an agreement to exchange price information is unlawful where the circumstances indicate that the exchange is likely to affect the competitive price level. Both elements are missing here. There was no exchange of information from which an agreement to exchange might have been inferred, as in Container; here the only significant information flow was in one direction—from C&S to the five percent banks. And whereas in Container the exchange of price information encompassed all of the leading sellers in a market that had structural characteristics which this Court found conducive to the use of information exchanges to stabilize prices, here the recipients of the information (the five percent banks) were not leading sellers whose decisions could affect the market price, and no evidence whatever was introduced to show that the market had such structural characteristics as might enable prices to be stabilized by an exchange of price information.

The Department's final theory of Sherman Act violation is that the totality of the relationships between C&S and the five percent banks was itself a per se violation. Apparently in the Department's view any agreement between competing firms which reduces the intensity of their competition is a per se violation of the Sherman Act. This is an absurd position, which would make all horizontal mergers, joint ventures and franchise arrangements per se violations of the Sherman Act. The elements of cooperation between C&S and the five percent banks that resulted in the latter banks' deciding to compete as parts of a C&S system rather than with C&S, in particular the decision to use C&S's name, distinctive logogram, and banking methods and services, are far removed from the sorts of practices that this Court has deemed per se violations. The distinction is illustrated by such decisions as United States v. Sealy, Inc., 388 U.S. 350 (1967); United States v. Topco Associates, Inc., 405 U.S. 596 (1972); and Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U.S. 131 (1969). The cooperative-advertising agreements in the first two cases and the joint operating agreement in the third, though they may have reduced the vigor of competition between the parties, were not challenged as antitrust violations, let alone as per se violations; challenged were separate agreements between the parties not to compete, and there is no such separate agreement in this case.

The government staked its entire case on a per se approach. No evidence was introduced to show that the correspondent-associate system constituted in fact an unreasonable restraint of trade. Plainly, it was reasonable. It enabled C&S to expand into new markets and thereby increase the amount of competition there. Any restraint of competition between C&S and the five percent banks was trivial, since C&S and the five percent banks were in separate markets and since in any event the combined market share of C&S and the five percent banks was too small to confer power over price. And no less restrictive alternative was available. Had C&S not assisted and cooperated with the five percent banks in the ways that it did, those banks would not have been chartered in the first place and the competitive benefits of C&S's expansion into the Atlanta suburbs would have been lost.

III

The district court held in the alternative that the Sherman Act issue in this case was within the original exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board. This Court's decision in Whitney National Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U.S. 411 (1965), held that questions relating to the organization and operation of banks by a bank holding company must be tendered to the Board in the first instance. C&S is a registered bank holding company, and the alleged violation of the Sherman Act pertains to its activities in the organization and operation of the five percent banks. The essential elements of the alleged violation were considered in an investigation which the Board, with the participation of the Antitrust Division, conducted in 1967 and 1968. No impropriety was found, and the Division failed to challenge the Board's findings within the 30-day period prescribed by the Bank Holding Company Act. It is barred from challenging them for the first time in this suit.

IV

The government in this Court rests its section 7 case entirely on the defendants' alleged antecedent violations of Georgia law and of section 1 of the Sherman Act. This is a patently inadequate foundation. The issue of C&S's violation of Georgia law has been authoritatively resolved by the entry of an order by the Georgia Commissioner of Banking and Finance rectifying what the district court described as C&S's "technical" violations of Georgia law. The order does not mandate substantial changes in the correspondent-associate system, and its probable impact was in any event fully considered by the district court which found as a fact that the order did not alter its finding that the five percent banks were unlikely ever to become independent competitive factors.

Even if a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act had been proved in this case, it would not bar the merger. The section 7 issue is not whether the defendants violated the Sherman Act, but whether, if so, enjoining the violation will make the five percent banks independent competitive factors. The Department, however, introduced no evidence to show that the alleged Sherman Act violation was a substantial cause of the noncompetitive relationship between C&S and the five percent banks. The record shows, in fact, that the specific acts on which the section 1 charge rests, mainly C&S's price communications to the five percent banks, were an irrelevant factor in the noncompetitive relationship between the banks. The glue that holds the five percent banks to C&S is made up of the various components of the correspondent-associate relationship, such as the common name. That is why the government in this Court is forced to argue that the entire relationship between C&S and the five percent banks constitutes the per se violation of the Sherman Act—otherwise it cannot prevail under section 7.

Apart from the alleged antecedent violations, there is no basis whatever for the government's appeal on the section 7 phase of the case, as the government in this Court seems virtually to concede. Since it is agreed that the five percent banks do not compete with C&S and will not do so unless and until the correspondent-associate relationship is terminated, the formal acquisition of the five percent banks by C&S can lessen competition only if there is some basis for predicting that the relationship is in fact likely to be terminated in the foreseeable future. This presents a factual issue (analogous to the prediction of the future competitive potential of the acquired firm in United States v. General Dynamics Corp., 415 U.S. 486 (1974)), which the district court resolved in the defendants' favor. Since the government does not challenge the finding as clearly erroneous, that is the end of the matter. In any event the court's finding was clearly correct. A voluntary severing of the correspondent-associate relationship by the five percent banks is extremely unlikely because it would deprive them of their principal assets—the C&S name and goodwill. Only once before has a correspondent associate withdrawn from the C&S system and that was in circumstances wholly different from those at bar. Nor will C&S expel the five percent banks. That would deprive it of branches in the Atlanta suburbs, and while C&S is no longer barred by state law from opening formal branches there, it is uncertain at best whether the banking agencies would permit it to do so in view of the precarious position in which the (former) five percent banks would be placed if, having lost their C&S affiliation, they were compelled to compete against C&S. At all events, C&S has no incentive to create new competitors for itself—the consequence if, after expelling the five percent banks, it opens new offices, in competition with them, in order to retain its foothold in the Atlanta suburbs.

V

There are additional grounds, not reached by the district court, for sustaining the judgment of the district court in favor of the appellees. First, three of the correspondent-associate relationships were created prior to June 1, 1966, and are therefore immunized from antitrust attack (other than under section 2 of the Sherman Act) by the broad grandfather provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act. Second, the creation by C&S of de facto subsidiaries was protected by the subsidiary exemption in section 7 of the Clayton Act. Third, the government failed utterly to establish a relevant geographical market in which to appraise the competitive effects of the challenged acquisitions, under the standards set forth by this Court last Term in United States v. Connecticut National Bank, 418 U.S. 656 (1974).

ARGUMENT

I. The Correspondent-Associate Program That the Justice Department Is Attacking in This Case Was a Necessary and Appropriate Method of Increasing Bank Competition.

We take it as axiomatic that the antitrust laws should not be interpreted in a fashion that defeats their purpose, which is to promote competition. But that is the interpretation that the Justice Department necessarily urges on this Court in attacking C&S's correspondent-associate program as a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act and C&S's proposed acquisition of the correspondent associates as a violation of section 7 of the Clayton Act. We shall demonstrate that if the attack succeeds, the result will be that in the future banks that are subject to anticompetitive restrictions on branching similar to those that confronted C&S will not be able to overcome those restrictions and competition among banks will therefore be lessened.

The Justice Department has been a justifiably harsh critic of state laws that prevent banks from opening new branch offices regardless of the needs or competitive situation of the banking market involved (e.g., App. E-836). It has specifically included Georgia's branch-banking laws in this condemnation (ibid.).[23] Logically, therefore, the Department should be encouraging rather than attacking the efforts of banks to overcome such restrictions, and in fact the Department's policy has been one of encouragement, except in the present case.

In United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U.S. 602 (1974), the Department argued for an interpretation of the antitrust laws under which a bank desiring to enter a new banking market in which it was forbidden by state law to open an office would be encouraged to sponsor a new bank, place the stock of that bank in friendly hands, and formally acquire the bank as soon as state law permitted.[24] The argument failed to carry the day for the Department, but for reasons unrelated to the merits of sponsoring and later acquiring a bank as a method of entering banking markets.[25] C&S has done just what the Justice Department proposed in Marine. Unable to enter the suburban Atlanta banking markets directly, it sponsored the formation of five small banks in those markets in the expectation of acquiring them if and when the state law preventing such acquisition was relaxed (or when the city limits of Atlanta were extended). When state law did change C&S tried to acquire the banks, only to encounter a double-barreled attack by the Justice Department: its relationship with the sponsored banks during the period between sponsorship and acquisition was claimed to violate the Sherman Act and the acquisition itself the Clayton Act.

[23] Not a breath of such criticism appears in the government's brief in the present case. Evidently the Justice Department is more concerned with winning a case than with administering a consistent antitrust policy.

The Justice Department complains[26] that its position in Marine has been misunderstood—that it did not say a bank was free to sponsor and later acquire a bank in the same market or that the sponsored bank could refrain from competition with the sponsoring bank. But that is precisely what it said. Under the Department's theory that an entire state is a relevant market in [24] See Brief for the U.S. in Marine, 16-17, 24, 45-52. An alternative also suggested by the Department in that case was the acquisition of a very small bank. State law eliminated that alternative in the present case.

[25] This Court held in Marine that the method suggested by the Department was unlikely to produce a substantial increase in competition in the market of the sponsored bank, since once it was acquired by the sponsoring bank it would be precluded, under Washington law, from establishing any new branch offices. There is no comparable state-law restriction in the present case.

[26] Although apparently with diminishing conviction. See Brief for the U.S. 39, n. 23.

which to appraise the competitive effects of a bank merger,[27] the sponsoring and sponsored banks in Marine would have been in the same market from the outset even though they were located in different cities. And the examples of how the sponsorship approach operates in practice that the Department cited to this Court in Marine explicitly assumed that the relationship between sponsoring and sponsored bank precluded competition between them: the Department described the sponsored bank as a "satellite" of the sponsoring bank.[28]

---

[27] This theory was rejected by the Court in Marine. But whether sponsoring and sponsored banks located in different cities are regarded as being in the same relevant market is actually a detail, since the government has challenged many bank mergers on the theory (the principal theory, indeed, urged by the government in Marine) that they eliminate potential competition. The government has not abandoned this theory despite its loss of the Marine case. Thus a merger between a sponsoring and sponsored bank located in different cities would always be in antitrust jeopardy under the potential-competition doctrine, if the government's position in the present case were upheld. Such jeopardy would discourage use of the sponsorship method of entering bank markets, contrary to the urgings of the Department in Marine.

[28] See Brief for the U.S. in Marine, 16, n. 16. The Department specifically suggested that the sponsoring bank acquire 25 percent of the common stock of the sponsored bank (the maximum permitted by the applicable state law) and place the remaining stock with officers, directors, and associates of the sponsoring bank (id. 24, 16). Yet under the theory advanced by the Department in the present case, this procedure would constitute an illegal agreement to make the sponsored bank a "vassal" of the sponsoring bank (Brief for the U.S. in instant case, p. 42).

Here are some other examples—drawn from the portions of the Marine appendix which the government cited in illustration of how the sponsorship-followed-by-eventual-acquisition approach operated (Brief for the U.S. in Marine 16, n. 16; p. 45, n. 36)—of the relationship approved by the government between a sponsoring and a sponsored bank:

> "The . . . selling institution . . . was organized in 1965 under the guidance of the applicant bank. . . . Until two years ago, excessive loan loss was a serious problem, but with the applicant bank management virtually taking over all the affairs of the selling bank, this problem has now been solved. Decisions of consequence are presently made by the applicant

Not only is the Justice Department taking inconsistent positions before this Court in cases argued less than a year apart, but the conditions that it is now asking the Court to place on the use of the sponsorship method of entry are unrealistic and will cripple it, to the detriment of competition in the banking industry. The method is not practicable if the banks involved must speculate on whether—if and when a merger between them becomes permissible under the applicable state law—a court will decide that they are at that time in the same market. This is the relevant time in the government's view. It offered no evidence that when C&S sponsored the five percent banks the bank's management. The proposed acquisition will have little if any effect on competition between the two banks. . . . [T]he present ties that exist between the management of the purchasing and selling banks . . . [have] served to limit the effective competition between the two institutions. [App. 1294.] . . . Other Bank has been operated more like a branch of applicant than as an independent bank [App. 1297].

. . . . . .

"In 1964, during the organizational state, First received the assistance of Old National, which continues to serve as its principal correspondent and has provided a chief executive officer since about 60 days after that bank began operations. . . . Due to the distance separating the offices of the subject banks, the correspondent, managerial, and other relationships existing between them, there appears to be little competition which will be eliminated by this proposal. [App. 1306.]

. . . . . .

"Tri-Cities National Bank, a satellite of the purchasing bank, opened in 1961 to provide the purchasing bank with access to the Pasco area. . . . Due to the interlocking relationship between the purchasing and selling banks, consummation of the purchase and assumption would not have the effect of eliminating significant competition. [App. 1315-16.]"

The Department apparently has forgotten its competitive report to the Comptroller of the Currency in Marine, where after first noting that "NBC cannot establish de novo branch offices in the City of Spokane," the Department stated: "Nonetheless, NBC could enter Spokane in a manner competitively tantamount to de novo branching. Specifically, NBC could acquire the city's smallest bank, or through nominees it could assist in chartering a new bank in Spokane, with which it might subsequently merge." In the present case the Department refuses to treat C&S's use of this suggested method as "tantamount to de novo branching."

latter were in the former's market; and what evidence there is on the question is to the contrary.[29] Since the probability that the markets of sponsored and sponsoring banks will converge is of course greater the more rapidly the banks are growing, the government's approach is designed to discourage, by penalizing, competitive success achieved through offering better service or lower prices.

The sponsorship method of bank entry is also impracticable if, as the government now insists, the relationship between sponsored and sponsoring bank must be so structured as to assure that the two compete with each other as aggressively as they would if they were completely unrelated firms. The elements of cooperation that are fundamental to the sponsorship method—the initial backing of the sponsored bank with people and funds, a commitment to foster its competitive success, the placing of its stock in friendly hands to smooth the way for an eventual acquisition—are treated by the Justice Department as evidence of an illegal conspiracy to suppress competition between sponsoring and sponsored banks. Yet these elements of cooperation are essential to using the approach. Without C&S's commitment to the banking agencies to take responsibility for the management and policies of the five percent banks, the banks would not have obtained charters and so would not exist (J.S. 45a-49a; App.

[29] We show below (in Part V(C)) that, under the standards for defining geographical markets set forth in last Term's Connecticut National Bank decision, the banks were not in the same market even at the time of trial. The banks were clearly in separate markets at the time of original sponsorship, when (1) transportation between Atlanta and its suburbs was not so good as it is today; (2) C&S had fewer branches in parts of the city adjacent to the suburban areas involved in this case; and (3) because branch banking laws forbade it, C&S had no branches beyond the city limits of Atlanta. Thus, when the five percent banks were organized, the Federal Reserve Board permitted officers of C&S to serve as directors of the five percent banks, despite the prohibition contained in section 8 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. § 19. The Board relied on the exception in section 8 that permits interlocking directorates when the banks are not located in the same town or in contiguous towns (App. 392, 450-51).

349, 527, 531-32, 576, E-331-36), but given such a commitment the banks were not likely to compete vigorously with C&S.

The artificiality of the Department's position emerges even more clearly when it is recalled that the method urged by the Department in Marine contemplates, from the outset, the eventual acquisition of the sponsored by the sponsoring bank.[30] Firms that intend to merge as soon as some artificial obstacle is removed are not likely to compete vigorously in the interim. Placing the stock of the sponsored bank in friendly hands (friendly to the sponsoring bank, that is) is another essential step in the plan of eventual acquisition—as C&S's experience with Stone Mountain attests[31]—but of course it greatly reduces the probability that the sponsored and sponsoring banks will compete. Thus the Department's position in this case, by precluding use of the very method of indirect branching proposed by the Department in Marine, will, if accepted, deter the internal expansion of banks in C&S's situation, contrary to the Department's own policy and to the purposes of the antitrust laws.

Besides not reading statutes purposively, the Justice Department in this case is guilty of the further sin of exalting form over substance. Were it not for the restrictions that Georgia law placed on de novo branching—restrictions that the Department rightly regards as anticompetitive and unjustified—the sponsored banks would have been formal branches of C&S from the outset; and no conceivable issue of antitrust illegality would have been raised by C&S's opening branch offices, albeit they would not have competed with each other or with C&S's other officies. Georgia law compelled C&S to adopt an indirect approach, in which the vesting of formal ownership of the branch offices in C&S had to be deferred for a period of years. The result was a form of transaction that was, at worst, unconventional; it should not on that account be held to violate the antitrust laws.

[30] As the record in this case shows, the prospect of eventual acquisition is an important inducement to both the sponsoring bank and the other organizers of and investors in the sponsored bank (App. E-590-91, E-617-18, E-644-45; see also note 18, supra).

[31] See p. 19, supra, and pp 73-74, infra.

The inescapable conclusion is that the Justice Department in this case is attacking internal expansion, although its usual and correct position is that internal expansion in the banking industry is procompetitive. The only conceivable reason for the Department's espousing a different position in this case is a desire for mechanically simple rules of antitrust law. The Department evidently distrusts its ability, and that of the banking agencies and the courts, to make even the grossest factual distinctions, for example between the situation in this case and one where two competing firms seek to thwart antitrust policy by first agreeing not to compete and then using that agreement as the basis for arguing that a merger between them will not affect competition. A sufficient distinction is the absence from the hypothetical case of the sorts of artificial restrictions on internal growth that compel banks situated like C&S to resort to unconventional methods of expansion and justify them in doing so.[32] Nor is there any basis for the Department's apparent fear

[32] In its Brief in Opposition to the Motion to Affirm, and again in its brief on the merits (p. 61, n. 61), the Department cites five recent decisions of the Federal Reserve Board in support of the proposition that if the district court's decision in the present case is upheld, "other banks may be expected to seek shelter from the antitrust laws by expanding correspondent relationships into 'de facto branches' and then justifying the acquisition of those 'branches' on that ground." (Brief in Opp. 5.) What the decisions in fact show is that the banking agencies have no need for the kind of rigid rule urged by the Department. In one of the cited cases, the Board denied approval of the acquisition (First Int'l). In another, the acquiring bank had majority stock control, and so the acquisition was permissible under the approach taken by the Department (see Brief for the U.S. 55, 57) (First Int'l). In the third case the Board denied one application and granted the other on the ground that the acquired bank was an insignificant competitive factor (First City). The other two cases, like the present case, involved attempts to acquire banks that the acquiring bank had originally sponsored as a method of expanding in the face of state home-office-protection laws. None of the five cases involves an attempt to evade the antitrust laws by "expanding" ordinary correspondent relationships into correspondent-associate relationships, or supports the Department's claim that affirming the district court's decision in this case would be an invitation to abuses. We point out that in the single instance of an attempt to acquire a correspondent associate that had not been sponsored by C&S (C&S Bank of Tucker), the FDIC turned down the acquisition. There is thus no evidence that either the banking agencies or the courts are incapable of handling the problem soundly on a case-by-case basis. See also the reasoned defense of that approach by the Federal Reserve Board in Trust Co. of Georgia, 57 Fed. Res. Bull. 517 (1971).

(Brief for the U.S. 34-35) that if it does not prevail on the section 1 charge in this case, C&S will be free to arrange to operate its offices in Atlanta as de facto branches of its largest competitor. A de facto merger is of course subject to legal scrutiny under section 1 of the Sherman Act and section 7 of the Clayton Act. The government does not need mechanical and anticompetitive antitrust rules to prevent genuine abuses of the competitive process. This is particularly true now that the Bank Holding Company Act has been amended to require formal Federal Reserve Board proceedings before a subsidiary relationship based upon a controlling influence over management and policies of a bank may be established, and these proceedings include formal notice to the Department of Justice and an opportunity for it to participate in the proceedings (12 U.S.C. §§ 1841(d), 1842(a)(2)).

II. The Correspondent-Associate Program Has Not Been Shown to Restrain Trade Unreasonably, in Violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

A. Introduction

1. The government has no theory as to how the appellees might have violated section 1.

The government has never made up its mind what conduct of C&S and the correspondent associates it considers to be in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act. Perhaps this is because, until the case reached this Court, the role of the section 1 charge in the government's overall strategy was as a tactical adjunct to the section 7 charge.

The Justice Department had known of the correspondent-associate relationship since at least 1968 (App. E-217-18) yet had raised no question about it until it filed this suit. Even in its reports to the FDIC concerning the competitive effects of the proposed acquisition by C&S of the correspondent associates (App. E-24-37) the Department did not allege a section 1 violation, although such a violation would have constituted (under the Department's present thinking) a compelling reason for the FDIC to disapprove the acquisition. The section 1 charge first appeared in the complaint, but, as alleged, was clearly insufficient as a matter of law: the charge (since abandoned) was that the defendants had committed a per se violation of section 1 by maintaining "a close working relationship" (App. 17-20). The obvious purpose of including a section 1 charge was to impale the defendants on the horns of a dilemma: either the defendants were in competition, and therefore the proposed acquisition would eliminate substantial competition in violation of section 7 of the Clayton Act, or they were not competing, in which event they must be violating section 1 of the Sherman Act.

But the government overlooked the possibility that the defendants might not be competing without thereby violating the Sherman Act.

At trial, the only evidence introduced by the government in support of the section 1 charge consisted of descriptions of the correspondent-associate relationship. No evidence with respect to the actual or probable effect of that relationship on prices or services was presented (J.S. App. 27a), and it was therefore clear that the government was proceeding exclusively on a per se theory of illegality. That was all that was clear since the government never indicated precisely what aspects of the correspondent-associate relationship it considered to be illegal per se. But it seemed most interested in the distribution by C&S to the correspondent associates of memoranda containing information on prices and hours of service, which indicated that it was basing the section 1 charge on United States v. Container Corp. of America, 393 U.S. 333 (1969). (See Plaintiff's Post-Trial Brief 12, 58-61; Plaintiff's Proposed Findings of Fact, p. 64.) This was certainly the district court's impression (J.S. App. 24a).

In this Court the government has jettisoned the "close working relationship" theory of the complaint. The Container theory of the trial and post-trial submission was dropped in the Jurisdictional Statement but reappears fitfully and imprecisely in the brief on the merits. The Jurisdictional Statement advanced (for the first time) the theory that C&S and the correspondent associates had agreed that the latter would be "vassals" of C&S (J.S. 17), and the Brief in Opposition to Motion to Affirm rang still another change on the section 1 charge: for the first time the defendants were accused of "a classic arrangement fixing actual current prices." (P. 2.) The brief on the merits repeats this charge but downplays the "vassal" theory and substitutes "mutual agreement or understanding that the . . . [five percent] banks will 'voluntarily' submit to C&S's direction." (Brief for the U.S. 27.)

The government's confusion is evident. It may therefore be helpful to the Court to review very briefly the basic law of section 1 before we demonstrate that each of the theories advanced by the government is either without basis in law or foreclosed by a finding of fact of the district court that the government has not challenged as clearly erroneous.

2. Only naked agreements not to compete are per se violations of section 1; other kinds of agreement must be tested under the Rule of Reason.

If two firms enter into agreement the main purpose of which is to eliminate price or other forms of completition between them, the agreement is illegal per se, that is, without regard to its actual or probable effect on price levels or other conditions in the relevant market. (The firms might be such small factors in the market that their agreement would have no significant effect on the market price.) The first thing to note about this formulation is that it requires an agreement between the competing firms.[33] If a small firm decided that it could [33] Section 1 is, of course, limited to "contracts," "combinations in the form of trust or otherwise," and "conspiracies." These terms denote agreement. Theatre Enterprises, Inc. v. Paramount Film Distrib. Corp., 346 U.S. 537, 540-41 (1954). The holding of that case was explained by a recent head of the Antitrust Division as follows:

> "One legal point which needs to be made clear at the outset, and one which we have had to bear in mind, is that the antitrust laws do not make uniform prices themselves illegal. The law, as laid down by the Supreme Court, is that an unlawful conspiracy is not established merely by showing that competitors charge the same identical prices or even that they raise their prices in quick succession. Somehow, out of the course of circumstances, the Supreme Court has made clear, the Government must establish that there was collusion in connection with the price change."

Statement of Assistant Attorney General Richard W. McLaren Before the House Banking and Currency Committee, June 21, 1969, p. 2. He was testifying with reference to an investigation of alleged price fixing in banking.

make a good profit charging the same price as one of its large competitors, and did so rather than try to undercut him, this would be a unilateral decision not to compete in price with that competitor and would not violate section 1. The second thing to note is that the rule of per se illegality differentiates—and must differentiate—between agreements whose sole or principal object is the elimination of competition and agreements in which the elimination of competition is ancillary to a pro-competitive (or other socially desirable) purpose. Otherwise every agreement to merge previously competing firms, however trivial their share of the market, would be a per se violation of section 1 since an incidental effect of the merger would be the elimination of competition between the parties to it.[34]

An agreement that eliminates some competition but is not a naked agreement not to compete is, of course, still subject to section 1. But it is tested under a different standard—some form of "Rule of Reason" which permits the reasons for the agreement, its effects on the vigor of competition in the relevant market, and the possibility of achieving its legitimate purposes by means less restrictive of competition, to be weighed in arriving at a decision whether the agreement violates section 1.

The following subparts apply these precepts to the facts of the present case.

[34] The doctrine of ancillary restraints stems from Addyston Pipe and Steel Co. v. United States, 85 F. 271 (6th Cir. 1898) (Taft, J.), aff'd, 175 U.S. 211 (1899), and has been much emphasized in the academic writings of the present Solicitor General of the United States. See Robert H. Bork, The Rule of Reason and the Per Se Concept: Price Fixing and Market Division, II, 75 Yale L. J. 375, 377-84 (1966).

B. Price Fixing

1. The government has not proved that C&S and the correspondent associates agreed not to compete.

The government has alleged that C&S and the correspondent associates agreed to charge the same prices.[35] But it failed to prove the existence of any such agreement; the district court found that there was no collusive price fixing (J.S. App. 24a) and no other agreement not to compete (J.S. App. 29a); and the government does not challenge these findings as clearly erroneous. Accordingly, they are binding on this Court. Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 52(a); United States v. General Dynamics Corp., 415 U.S. 486, 508 (1974). In any event, the findings are clearly correct.

The government points to two sorts of evidence in support of its contention that the case "shows a mutual understanding to fix actual current prices which constitutes a classic per se offense." (Brief for the U.S. 34.) The first (see id. 33-34) is simply the totality of the relationships between C&S and the five percent banks, which "eliminated, or precluded the development of, any substantial competition among the appellee banks . . . and constituted a system of price fixing designed to achieve uniformity among them." (Id. 34.) By this reasoning, any merger between competing firms would constitute a price-fixing agreement since it would preclude the development of substantial competition between the parties. We discuss later whether the totality of the relationships between C&S and its correspondent associates can be considered a per se violation of section 1; it is plainly not simple price fixing, as the Justice Department alleges for the first time in this Court.

[35] We confess to some astonishment that such a charge should be made for the first time in the brief in opposition to the motion to affirm the district court's decision.

The only actual evidence on which the government relies to prove price fixing consists of communications by C&S to the correspondent associates regarding price or other business changes by C&S, followed in a few instances by similar changes on the part of one or more correspondent associate.[36] The government does not contend that these communications were in the nature of directives or invitations to agree on a common price policy. The undisputed evidence is that the communications were distributed to the correspondent associates for their information only[37] and with a strict admonition to set prices and other terms and conditions of business independently;[38] the [36] This evidence is inaccurately summarized in the government's brief (pp. 10-11, n. 2), which neglects to mention that all memoranda distributed to the correspondent associates were either marked "FOR INFORMATION ONLY" or understood as such (many of these memoranda were copies of directives to C&S branches). (See pp. 11-12, supra.) An example of the government's distorted reading of the record is its use of GX 188 (App. E-240) for the proposition that "C&S notified the five percent banks of its intent to raise its service charges" (Brief for the U.S. 11, n. 2). GX 188 is a memorandum from one officer of C&S to another which was not distributed to the five percent banks and which states: "At this point, this [reduction in the charge for checking accounts] applies to C&S National Bank in Atlanta only. I'll let you know as the affiliate and 5% banks make their decisions which are affected." This is hardly evidence of concerted action to raise prices; if anything, it is evidence to the contrary. The government, citing DX 302 (App. E-840-59), then states that after C&S "notified" the five percent banks, the latter adopted charges identical to C&S's. What the evidence in fact shows is that the change in service charges was initiated by the Trust Company of Georgia and followed both by C&S and by the five percent banks as well as by a number of other Atlanta banks (App. 697-98, 824, E-840-59). DX 302 also shows that service charges were lowered, not—as claimed by the government—raised.

[37] As mentioned in the preceding note, the statement "FOR INFORMATION ONLY" was stamped on the memoranda (App. 754, 829-30). In a few cases it was inadvertently omitted but the undisputed evidence is that the contents of the memoranda were in all cases solely for the information of the correspondent associates and were so understood by everyone concerned (App. 776-77, 807-08, 829-30). Although the government does not mention the fact, the legend "FOR INFORMATION ONLY" is clearly stamped on several of the memoranda specifically cited by the government as showing price fixing (see App. E-125, E-145-48, E-155).

[38] See pp. 12-13, supra.

district court so found (J.S. App. 24a); and the government, far from challenging that finding, refers approvingly to the fact that "the directors and chief officers [of the five percent banks] who testified on the subject all denied that C&S can or does dictate policies or practices to them, or control their actions." (Brief for the U.S. 26.) The issue, therefore, is whether the bare communication of one seller's price to another, followed by the latter's changing his price to conform to the former's, compels an inference of an agreement to fix prices. There is no basis in precedent or policy for such a result. See, e.g., United States v. National Malleable & Steel Castings Co., 1957 Trade Cases ¶ 66,890 (N.D. Ohio), aff'd, 358 U.S. 38 (1958); Delaware Valley Marine Supply Co. v. American Tobacco Co., 297 F.2d 199 (3rd Cir. 1961); Pevely Dairy Co. v. United States, 178 F.2d 363 (8th Cir. 1949); United States v. Chas. Pfizer & Co., 367 F. Supp. 91 (S.D.N.Y. 1973); United States v. General Motors Corp., 1974-2 Trade Cases ¶ 75,253 (E.D. Mich.) It would place a seller in jeopardy of committing a criminal violation of section 1 every time he announced a price change publicly, since a competitor might decide to follow his lead, which under the government's theory in this case would be conclusive evidence of a price-fixing conspiracy. At all events, the district court expressly found that there was no agreement not to compete (J.S. App. 29a), and this finding, not challenged by the government as clearly erroneous, is binding on this Court.

2. Even if C&S had dictated the five percent banks' prices there would be no violation of section 1 under the department's description of the five percent banks as de facto branches of C&S.

The Department's own description of the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks precludes a finding of an actionable agreement to fix prices. It describes the five percent banks as de facto branches of C&S. We agree with this characterization, while insisting that the five percent banks were autonomous in matters relating to pricing, terms and conditions of sale, and solicitation of customers.[39] That a firm may be at once a branch or subsidiary of another firm and fully independent in matters of price and selling terms is not the paradox that the Justice Department would have this Court believe. It is, indeed, the condition required by this Court's decisions establishing the intra-enterprise conspiracy doctrine, although that doctrine is inapplicable to the facts of the present case.

The intra-enterprise conspiracy cases hold that where affiliated firms hold themselves out to the public as independent competitors, they may not agree on the prices that they charge (or make other agreements that independent competitors would be forbidden to make). United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 332 U.S. 218 (1947); Kiefer-Stewart Co. v. Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., 340 U.S. 211 (1951); Timken Roller Bearing Co. v. United States, 341 U.S. 593 (1951); Perma-Life Mufflers, Inc. v. International Parts Corp., 392 U.S. 134 (1968). These cases require in certain circumstances that a subsidiary set prices inde-

[39] The sense in which the five percent banks may be regarded as "de facto branches" of C&S was explained by a C&S executive, who testified that "there's no difference between our relationships with the [formal C&S] branches and the five percenters because what we had to offer was solicited, invited, wanted, received, and our recommendations were readily accepted" (App. 398 quoted at p. 27, n. 16 of the government's brief). This quotation makes clear that there was a difference—C&S did not dictate terms and conditions of sale to the five percent banks as it did to its formal branches—and thus that the Department's characterization of the relationship between the five percent banks and C&S as one of "mutual agreement or understanding that the [five percent] banks will 'voluntarily' submit to C&S's direction" (Brief for the U.S. 27) is a distortion. The district judge, who heard all of the evidence on the subject, concluded that there was "no evidence of record to conclude that the utilization by the five percent defendant banks of the services or information received by them from C&S National or C&S Holding was a result of any tacit or explicit combinations rather than the natural deference of the recipient to information from one with greater expertise or better sources" (J.S. App. 29a).

pendently of its parent, as the five percent banks did here. But these banks were not required to do this, because the intra-enterprise doctrine was not applicable to them. An essential element of the doctrine—the subsidiary's holding itself out to the public as an independent competitor—was missing here. Far from holding themselves out to be separate and independent firms, the five percent banks held themselves out to the banking public as branches of C&S.

In insisting that the intra-enterprise conspiracy doctrine requires that the subsidiary hold itself out to the public as an independent competitor, we are not indulging in an eccentric interpretation of the cases. That is the Justice Department's own interpretation.[40] But the Department has gone much further. It has stated publicly and authoritatively both (1) that it considers the doctrine applicable only when the challenged conduct involves predatory conduct toward nonmembers of the affiliated group and (2) that it will not enforce the doctrine in the banking industry (unless predatory conduct is shown).[41] It is a matter of more than passing interest that the publicly stated position of the Justice Department with regard to the meaning and application of the intra-enterprise conspiracy doctrine is nowhere mentioned in the government's brief in this case, which, indeed, takes a contrary position (p. 30).

If, then, in the circumstances presented here (no holding out as independent competitors, and no predatory behavior directed against nonmembers of the affiliated group), C&S could lawfully dictate the prices of a wholly owned subsidiary, can it dictate the prices of a de facto subsidiary? We see no reason in law or policy why it cannot. The issue is substance not form. And the substance is that C&S and the five percent banks constitute a "single economic enterprise" (Brief for the U.S. 10, 42). In the banking industry, control relationships are possible without majority stock ownership—indeed, without any stock ownership at all. That is the reason why the Bank Holding Company Act was amended in 1970 to provide that the Federal Reserve Board may, after notice and opportunity for hearing, find that a bank over whose management and policies another bank (or a bank holding company) has a "controlling influence" is a subsidiary of the latter (12 U.S.C. § 1841(d)).

The Justice Department, which has described the five percent banks as "vassals" of C&S, can have no doubt that one bank can control another without owning a majority of its common stock. In its original competitive reports to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation with respect to the proposed acquisition, it described the five percent banks as affiliates of C&S and the acquisition as an internal reorganization (see pp. 15-16, supra). And in an official policy statement the Department has taken the position that whether a bank shall be permitted to dictate the prices of a less than wholly owned subsidiary will be treated on a case-by-case basis—not by a per se rule, as the Department now urges.[42] According to the Depart-

[42] The McLaren letter, note 41, supra, states, at n. 3:

> "Under the Bank Holding Company Act as amended, a corporation can be treated as a bank holding company even though it owns only minority interests in some or all of its 'subsidiaries.' Compare Yellow Cab, Timken. In such situations any exchange of information would have to be considered on a case by case basis."

The letter talks about "exchange of information" because that was the practice under discussion in the text to which the footnote pertains. The entire context makes clear that the passage is equally applicable to price fixing or other practices that the intra-enterprise conspiracy doctrine, where applicable, forbids.

ment's own construction of the Sherman Act, C&S would not have committed a per se violation of the Sherman Act had it dictated the prices charged by the five percent banks, although out of an abundance of caution it avoided doing so, as the trial court found.

C. Exchanges of Price Information

In United States v. Container Corp. of America, 393 U.S. 333 (1969), this Court held that a practice whereby competing manufacturers of shipping containers exchanged information about the prices that they were quoting to purchasers violated section 1 of the Sherman Act.[43] There was no express agreement to exchange information, but agreement was inferred from the fact that each seller provided price information to his competitors in the expectation that the recipient would provide similar information to him when he requested it (id. at 335). There was thus a bilateral, bargained-for exchange.

The Court did not hold that such an exchange constitutes a per se violation of the Sherman Act: "Price information exchanged in some markets may have no effect on a truly competitive price." (Id. at 337.) But in the particular conditions of the corrugated-container industry in the Southeast, the Court found that the exchange was unlawful because it had operated to stabilize the price level. The Court emphasized that the exchange had involved the major sellers in what the Court deemed to be a concentrated market.

In the present case no agreement to exchange information was or could have been proved. The only significant information flow was in one direction—from C&S to the correspondent associates. There was no understanding that the correspondent associates would reciprocate. Also unlike Container, there was no showing here that the provision of information was likely to affect ("stabilize" in Container) prices in the relevant market (J.S. App. 27a-28a). Nor could have an effect have been proved. In Container price information was exchanged by the leading sellers in the relevant market; in this case it was not. Under any plausible conception of the relevant market the recipients of the information in this case were simply too small for their pricing decisions to affect the market price. While the defendants in Container were viewed as occupying a commanding position in a concentrated market, and in those circumstances the exchange of information might have affected the price level, the defendants here do not enjoy, individually or collectively, anything like monopoly power.[44] But there is no need to rely on conjecture: the evidence is undisputed that the five percent banks' prices were set by the market and not by any communications from C&S (see, e.g., App. 690-91, 726, 746-49, 820-22).

[43] We emphasize that the agreement in issue in that case was not an agreement to fix prices, but an agreement to exchange price information. The government's brief in the present case tends to blur the distinction.

Since, moreover, except for C&S Bank of Tucker,[45] the correspondent associates involved in this case had originally been [44] Even accepting the government's (incorrect) method of determining the relevant geographical market, the maximum combined market share of C&S and the five percent banks was 34 percent (J.S. App. 33a), except in the (alleged) market in which it competed with the Tucker bank, where the combined market share was 42 percent (Plaintiff's Post-Trial Brief 33). In properly defined markets, the combined share of the defendants would be much smaller. In any event, a market share of 34 percent, or even of 42 percent, is not large enough to confer power over price.

[45] C&S's relationship with the Tucker bank presents somewhat different issues under section 1 from its relationship with the other five correspondent associates involved in this case, owing to the fact that Tucker was not originally sponsored by C&S. Although our case is stronger with respect to the other banks, the Department has not established a basis for overturning the district court's finding that the government failed to prove that C&S's relationship with Tucker violated section 1.

created by C&S in geographical markets where C&S could not open new offices by any other method, under no view is this a case in which a firm conspires with its major competitors to reduce the vigor of competition. In short, Container requires evidence that the exchange of information occurred under circumstances where it was likely to stabilize or otherwise affect the market price level and no such evidence was offered in this case —just as no evidence of an exchange of information was offered either. The evidence in the record, in fact, is to the contrary on both points.[46]

Conscious of its lack of evidence, the government reads Container as establishing a per se rule banning price communications among competitors[47]—or, more plausibly, would like this Court to adopt such a rule. Apart from the merits of such a rule in general—which would be few[48]—it would cause massive dislocation in the banking industry, where a degree of cooperation among competitors unusual in industrial markets has long been accepted and should not be casually outlawed. The Justice Department is incorrect in arguing that "true" correspondent-banking relationships are purely "vertical." The record refutes this statement (App. 61, 114, 141-42, 148, 247, 250). Small

[46] For example, one reason why the exchange of information may have had some effect on the price level in the Container case was that the information exchanged (bids on orders) was not publicly available. The contrary is true in this case (see App. 734).

[47] This position is refuted by the emphasis that the Court in Container placed on concentration and other market-structure variables (irrelevant in a per se case) and has been rejected by the circuits. See Belliston v. Texaco, Inc., 455 F.2d 175 (10th Cir. 1972); Gray v. Shell Oil Co., 469 F.2d 742 (9th Cir. 1972).

[48] Such a rule would ignore the importance of information in the competitive process. Competition cannot operate effectively in a context of pervasive ignorance about what competing firms are charging. See United States v. Container Corp. of America, supra, at 342 (Mr. Justice Marshall, dissenting); Maple Flooring Manufacturers Association v. United States, 268 U.S. 563 (1925); Richard A. Posner, Antitrust: Cases, Economic Notes, and Other Materials 221-22 (1974).

banks commonly enter into correspondent relationships with large banks in the same market (ibid.)—with competitors, in other words—and these relationships, while a good deal less extensive than the correspondent-associate relationship involved in this case, involve communications that the Department would be obliged to view as illegal per se under the augmented Container rule being sought in this case (see App. 51-85, 99-114, 138-39, 271-72).

D. The Totality of Relationships Between C&S and the Correspondent Associates

1. The correspondent-associate system does not constitute a per se violation of section 1.

Although the government accuses the defendants of price fixing and of exchanging price information, it does so in order to have familiar pegs on which to hang its section 1 charge; its real objection is to the correspondent-associate system itself. When the government charges that the correspondent associates agreed to become "vassals" of C&S or to "submit to C&S's direction," it cannot mean that they delegated managerial or financial responsibilities to C&S. The record conclusively refutes any such inference (App. 513-14, 689-94, 731-32, 747-50, 820-22). The Department accepts the five percent banks' denial "that C&S can or does dictate policies or proposals to them, or control their actions." (Brief for the U.S. 26.) The accusation must be, rather, that the network of relationships between C&S and the correspondent associates made it unlikely that the latter would conduct themselves as active competitors of C&S. The correspondent associates were staffed by former executives of C&S; they were using the C&S name and distinctive logogram and their customers thought they were formal branches of C&S; they expected eventually to be acquired formally by C&S; and their stock was owned by C&S and by people friendly to C&S, including its officers and their families. As a result of these factors, there was little competition between C&S and the correspondent associates, but it does not follow that there was a violation of the Sherman Act—let alone a per se violation, the only kind alleged.

Not every agreement that restrains competition is a per se violation of section 1; an outright merger of the correspondent associates into C&S would not have constituted a per se violation of section 1. The per se category is reserved for "certain agreements or practices which because of their pernicious effect on competition and lack of any redeeming virtue are conclusively presumed to be unreasonable and therefore illegal without elaborate inquiry as to the precise harm they have caused or the business excuse for their use." Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 5 (1958). The transactions that comprise the correspondent-associate relationship are not the sorts of things that have ever been thought to belong in the per se category. Furnishing assistance to a new firm in staffing and operating methods has never been regarded as a per se violation of section 1. Nor has acquiring stock in a competing firm, even a controlling interest—otherwise there would be no need for section 7 of the Clayton Act. Nor has the sale of competitors' products under a common trade name—a common and heretofore unquestioned practice in industries as diverse as mattresses and groceries.[49] [49] See United States v. Sealy, Inc., 388 U.S. 350 (1967); United States v. Topco Associates, Inc., 405 U.S. 596 (1972). These are cases where this Court found violations of section 1 of the Sherman Act because of the presence of explicit agreements to divide sales territories (i.e., not to compete). No suggestion was made in these cases that the underlying decision of a group of competitors to sell their products under a common trade name was unlawful, even though such a decision reduces the amount of competition among the firms quite apart from the separate agreement not to compete. See also Siegel v. Chicken Delight, Inc., 448 F.2d 43 (9th Cir. 1971).

---

Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U.S. 131 (1969)—a case repeatedly cited in the government's brief—illustrates the same

Nor is the aggregation of these relationships somehow more sinister than each considered by itself. On the contrary, when they are aggregated it becomes clear that what is involved here is nothing remotely like cartelizing, the core practice at which the per se rule of section 1 is aimed, but is instead best described as a de facto merger or joint venture[50]—formal merger having been barred by the state law limiting branch banking. The Justice Department itself has characterized the five percent banks as "affiliates" of C&S and the proposed formal acquisition as nothing more than an "internal reorganization" (App. E-25, E-33-34). Mergers have never been considered per se violations of section 1 and it is instructive to consider why. Unlike a price-fixing conspiracy a merger is not a naked agreement to refrain from competing. There is no presumption that firms merge in order to eliminate competition between them—though that is a possible purpose, and an inevitable effect.[51] Similarly, the correspondent-associate relationship was not created in order to enable C&S and the five percent banks to eliminate competi-point. Two newspaper companies combined certain functions, such as advertising, in a jointly owned subsidiary. There was no suggestion that the joint venture constituted a per se violation of the Sherman Act (even though the parties had no other competitors). But the parties went further and entered into an agreement to fix prices, divide markets, and pool profits, and this further agreement was held to be a per se violation. It is just such a further agreement that is absent in the present case.

[50] With the major difference that, to minimize legal risk, C&S did not attempt to dictate the prices or terms at which the five percent banks conducted business.

[51] Cf. United States v. Penn-Olin Chem. Co., 378 U.S. 158, 169 (1964), where the Court pointed out: "it may be assumed that neither [party to a joint venture] will compete with the progeny [i.e., the jointly owned subsidiary]." This did not make the joint venture a per se violation of the Sherman Act, but under the government's present theory it would be, since it eliminated competition between each parent and the subsidiary and each parent owned only 50 percent of the common stock of the subsidiary and thus lacked legal control.

tion between them. Such a theory is not only wrong, but as applied to the five banks that C&S sponsored it is fantastic—the correspondent-associate relationship provided the framework for creating these banks. Unlike a price-fixing conspiracy, but like some mergers, the correspondent-associate system had a "redeeming virtue" (Northern Pacific, supra, at 5): it enabled C&S to expand in the face of anticompetitive state branch-banking restrictions and thereby increased competition. For this reason alone, the relationship invites a deeper inquiry than is appropriate in price-fixing cases.

Caution must be exercised in the application of the per se rules to cooperative relationships in the banking field. The distinctive public interest in bank solvency has led this Court to conclude that the ordinary rules of antitrust law might have to be modified when applied to banking. United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, 374 U.S. 321, 372, n. 46 (1963). But we are not even suggesting a modification of the antitrust rules; we urge only that they be interpreted no more broadly in banking than they have heretofore been interpreted in other industries. The unprecedented rule urged by the Department in this case—that cooperation between competitors which results in a diminution of competition is illegal per se—would have an especially dislocating impact in the banking industry, where the special concern with bank solvency has resulted in cooperative relationships, fostered and monitored (as here) by the regulatory agencies, that go far beyond what is normally found in industrial markets. Thus a recent article on correspondent banking, cited approvingly by the Justice Department (Brief for the U.S. 37, n. 21), notes the small bank's "frequent reliance on its correspondent for counseling on officer and personnel recruitment, advice on operations methodology and guidance on executive training." Arthur D. Austin & Elinor Harris Solomon, A New Antitrust Problem: Vertical Integration in Correspondent Banking, 122 U. Pa. L. Rev. 366, 369 (1973). Although the Justice Department applauds correspondent banking,[52] its blunderbuss attack on the "close working relationship" between C&S and the correspondent associates places all correspondent relationships in antitrust jeopardy.

2. The correspondent-associate program is reasonable and procompetitive.

The government staked its entire case on a per se approach. No evidence was introduced to show that the correspondent-associate system in fact restricted competition unreasonably. But had the Rule of Reason been applied, the government could not have established a violation of the Sherman Act by that route either.

First, any restrictive effect of the correspondent-associate relationship was ancillary to a main purpose that was procompetitive: the expansion of C&S in the face of anticompetitive state-law restrictions on branch banking. Whether the five percent banks are viewed as extensions of C&S or simply as the recipients of C&S's support and assistance, it is undisputed that the correspondent-associate status, by giving the five percent banks the use of C&S's name, personnel, operating methods, advice, and other assistance, enabled them to compete more effectively against the other banks in their markets (App. 527, 532-33, 616-17).

Second, any restriction of competition resulting from the fact that the correspondent associates competed as C&S banks rather than with C&S was surely minimal in extent and significance. Since, as we demonstrate in Part V(C) of our argument, C&S and the five percent banks were not even in the same banking markets (properly defined), it follows that the amount of competitive overlap between C&S and these banks was very slight, and so the possible competition eliminated by their relationship must have been very slight also. Even if they were in the same markets, the combined market share of C&S and the five percent banks was much too small to enable them, by eliminating competition inter se, to affect the price level significantly (see p. 54 and note 44, supra). The acquisition of a small firm may violate section 7, a statute that seeks to prevent concentration from reaching levels at which tacit or express collusion becomes feasible, but it can have no immediate effect on price. If two firms each with 40 percent of the sales in a market merge, giving them a combined market share of 80 percent, the resulting firm may be able to raise its price above the competitive level.[53] But a firm that has 30 percent of the market and acquires competing firms that have in the aggregate only two percent of the market cannot, as a result of the acquisition, raise its price above the market level without disastrous consequences for its sales; its market share is too small to confer power over price.[54] Moreover, it is incorrect to view the correspondent-associate relationship as an agreement among previously competing firms. These firms, with the single exception of the Tucker bank, were created by C&S and the fact that they did not compete with C&S did not reduce the amount [53] Its customers would try to switch to the other firms in the market, but these firms might be incapable of supplying the entire market at costs comparable to those of the dominant firm. See Richard A. Posner, supra note 48 at 376-77.

[52] See Donald I. Baker, Antitrust and Correspondent Banking—A Look at Tomorrow's Competition, remarks prepared for American Bankers Association Annual Convention, Oct. 19, 1971, p. 4. Mr. Baker, as mentioned in a previous note, is the Antitrust Division's Director of Policy Planning.

[54] In discussing market-share percentages in the context of the section 1 issue in this case, we are not suggesting that a showing of a monopoly market share is a necessary element in the proof of illegal price fixing. It is not. But it is relevant to characterizing an ambiguous agreement and to ascertaining motive. Price-fixing agreements are ineffectual unless the parties have power over price. The lack of anything approaching a monopoly market share in the present case is evidence that the purpose of the challenged arrangements was not to fix prices.

of competition in the market at all. On the contrary, competition was greater by virtue of the correspondent-associate program than it would have been in the absence of the program.

Third, no less restrictive method of achieving the main purpose of the correspondent-associate system—which was to increase the amount of banking competition in the Atlanta suburbs—was feasible. The government suggests that C&S could have sponsored the five percent banks without entering into a continuing relationship with them. The suggestion is completely unrealistic. Apart from C&S's lack of interest in sponsoring banks not identified with C&S when its goal was to introduce C&S banking into the Atlanta suburbs, the record shows that the continuing relationship that C&S had promised to the five percent banks at the time of their organization was an influential, and frequently a controlling, factor in the decision of the banking authorities to issue charters for the new banks (see p. 10, supra). The government itself concedes that a sponsoring bank may properly play a "significant role in determining" a new bank's policies (Brief for the U.S. 43, n. 26).

This case thus fits squarely Mr. Justice Brandeis' classic definition of a reasonable restraint of trade in Board of Trade of City of Chicago v. United States, 246 U.S. 231, 238 (1918):

> "[T]he legality of an agreement or regulation cannot be determined by so simple a test, as whether it restrains competition. Every agreement concerning trade, every regulation of trade, restrains. To bind, to restrain, is of the very essence. The true test of legality is whether the restraint imposed is such as merely regulates and perhaps thereby promotes competition or whether it is such as may suppress or even destroy competition."

The correspondent-associate relationship promoted competition by enabling C&S to enter the suburban Atlanta banking markets and is lawful under the standard of the Board of Trade case.

We ask the Court not to lose sight of the fundamental purpose and character of the correspondent-associate relationship. It was a second-best alternative to the opening of formal C&S branches, a route blocked by state law. It was not an attempt to cartelize the suburban Atlanta banking market; it bears no resemblance to the kinds of agreement that have been held to be per se violations of section 1 of the Sherman Act; and tested under the Rule of Reason its lawfulness is manifest.[55]

E. Conclusion: Affirmance Will Open No "Floodgates"

There is no basis for the government's apparent concern that unless the correspondent-associate program is suppressed, banks (or other types of firms) having sinister objectives will enter into agreements that will be difficult to distinguish from the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks. The restrictions on branching that underlay the adoption of the correspondent-associate system are unique to the banking industry, and within that industry there is absolutely no evidence that the method used by C&S in this case has ever been or ever will be used abusively, i.e., as a mask for price fixing or division of markets. The Antitrust Division has been very vigilant and active in the banking field and is well aware of arrangements comparable to the correspondent-associate system but has not produced a single example where such an arrangement was used improperly.[56] The present case is the only one in which the Department has challenged such an arrangement, and similar arrangements cannot be initiated in the future without the express prior approval of the Federal Reserve Board after giving notice to the Department (12 U.S.C. §§1841(d), 1842(a)(2)).

The Department's real concern is presumably with other industries. But the court below did not adopt, and we do not [55] The government has never suggested that the correspondent-associate system is in fact an unreasonable restraint of trade.

[56] See note 32 supra, and accompanying text.

contend for, a rule under which (say) General Motors could give the use of its name to Ford, provide Ford with GM executives, operating manuals, etc., without violating the Sherman Act. The combined market shares of the firms involved in such a case, and the lack of a compelling justification for the arrangement rooted in the special constraints imposed by state banking laws, would clearly distinguish that case from this one. Cf. Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U.S. 131 (1969). The courts are competent to discriminate between the type of arrangement challenged in this case and arrangements that are designed to veil naked restraints of trade.

III. The Correspondent-Associate Relationship Is in Any Event Subject to the Original Exclusive Jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board.

In addition to finding that the government had failed to prove that the correspondent-associate relationship unreasonably restrained trade in violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act, the district court also found, in the alternative, that the relationship was subject to the original exclusive jurisdiction of the Federal Reserve Board. The court based its alternative holding on this Court's decision in Whitney National Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U.S. 411 (1965), which held that proceedings before the Board are "the sole means by which questions as to the organization or operation of a new bank by a bank holding company may be tested." (Id. at 419; emphasis added.)

C&S is a registered bank holding company, and the relationship between it and the five percent banks (except for the C&S Bank of Tucker) arose from, and has continued unchanged since, the organization of those banks by C&S. The bank regulators were fully aware of the correspondent-associate relationship when C&S organized the five banks it is now seeking to acquire and when it acquired its five percent interest in Tucker. In addition, the Federal Reserve Board conducted an extensive investigation of these relationships in 1967 and 1968 and found no impropriety (J.S. App. 16a-20a, 27a). The district court found that this investigation involved "the more substantial elements of what it [the government] now claims to be section 1 violations" (J.S. App. 27a). The Justice Department, which participated in the investigation, did not object to the Board's conclusion. It did not consider itself aggrieved by the Board's order and did not seek judicial review of that order in a court of appeals within 30 days as required by section 9 of the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U.S.C. § 1848. Under Whitney, it is barred from challenging that relationship for the first time in this case.

The orderly accommodation of the banking and the antitrust laws mandated by Whitney requires that the Federal Reserve Board, the agency responsible for administering the Bank Holding Company Act, be afforded an opportunity to consider and if necessary rectify alleged improprieties in the creation of a bank holding company relationship. If the government's present theory of antitrust illegality is correct, C&S, when it established the correspondent-associate relationship with the six five percent banks involved in the section 1 phase of this case, created de facto subsidiaries—a matter of utmost interest and concern to the Federal Reserve Board, in view of its comprehensive responsibilities with respect to the "operations, management, and intercompany relationships of the bank holding company and its subsidiaries, and related matters. . . ." 12 U.S.C. § 1844(a).[37] The Board performed its responsibility un-

[37] The Department implies that the Federal Reserve Board has jurisdiction under the Bank Holding Company Act to consider only the structure of bank holding company arrangements, and not the current competitive behavior (even inter se) of the parties to the structure (Brief for U.S. 45). Yet section 3(c) of the Bank Holding Company Act directs the Board, in reaching decisions requiring ap-der the Act by fully considering the correspondent-associate relationship. Its investigation of that relationship was conducted informally in accordance with the "powerful tradition" of banking agencies of "working out controversies by methods of negotiation rather than by formal proceedings."[38] If the Board had found a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act, it could have brought its influence to bear on C&S to correct the violation. The Board also could have referred the matter to the Justice Department, which was participating in the investigation (App. E-217-18). Since the Department did not follow the statutory procedure for contesting the Board's determination, the legality of the subject matter of the Board's investigation—the correspondent-associate relationship—cannot be challenged by the Department in this proceeding.

proval under section 3(a), to consider, among other things, whether the effect of a proposed acquisition or merger would be to lessen competition substantially or to restrain trade. Surely this means that the Board must consider the competitive relationships that will result from an acquisition or merger. The legislative history, moreover, shows that the whole purpose of the Act was to limit and restrict the control and management of banks by bank holding companies (H. Rep. No. 609, 84th Cong., 1st Sess., pp. 2-3; S. Rep. No. 1095, 84th Cong., 1st Sess., p. 1). Indeed, the Bank Holding Company Act has provided since 1970 that a bank will be deemed a subsidiary of any other bank or bank holding company which has the power to exercise a controlling influence over the bank's management and policies, 12 U.S.C. § 1841(d).

IV. There Is No Basis in Law or Fact for Overturning the District Court's Finding That the Acquisition of the Five Sponsored Banks by C&S Was Unlikely to Reduce Competition Substantially and Hence Would Not Violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act.

The district court, passing a number of other contentions of the defendants, found as a fact that the acquisition of the five sponsored banks by C&S[59] was unlikely to lessen competition substantially, since there was not at present, or likely ever to be, substantial competition between C&S and the sponsored banks, due to the network of relationships involved in the correspondent-associate system. Apparently convinced that this finding is unassailable[60]—especially after this Court's decision in United States v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, 412 U.S. 946 (1973), affirming per curiam 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 (W.D. Tex.)—the Justice Department in this Court bases its challenge to the district court's dismissal of the section 7 charge entirely on the alleged antecedent violations by C&S of Georgia's branch-banking law and of section 1 of the [59] It will be recalled that the FDIC denied C&S's application for permission to merge with the C&S Bank of Tucker, which C&S had not sponsored (App. E-7-9). That acquisition is accordingly not before this Court.

[60] This finding is, of course, governed by the clearly-erroneous standard of Rule 52(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. United States v. General Dynamics Corp., 415 U.S. 486, 508 (1974). It should be noted that the district court in this case did not adopt proposed findings submitted by the defendants—the practice criticized in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U.S. 602, — (1974), where the Court nonetheless affirmed; the district court here prepared its own findings. It should also be noted that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the banking agency that approved the proposed acquisitions challenged in this case, is extremely conscientious in weighing the competitive effects of a proposed acquisition—so much so that in one recent case it was found to have applied a stricter standard than the antitrust laws themselves. See Washington Mutual Savings Bank v. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, 482 F.2d 459 (9th Cir. 1973).

Sherman Act. We shall show that the alleged violations provide no basis for upsetting the district court's judgment and that there is no other ground for questioning the court's finding that the sponsored banks were unlikely ever to become independent competitive factors.

A. The Alleged Violations of Georgia Law and of the Sherman Act Cannot Support a Finding That the Proposed Acquisitions Would Violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act

The government's present theory of the section 7 violation is that the elements of the correspondent-associate relationship which have operated to eliminate competition between C&S and the five banks that it is proposing to acquire violate both Georgia law and section 1 of the Sherman Act. Therefore, the government's argument continues, once these violations are rectified, C&S and the five percent banks will compete with one another, thereby destroying the factual premise of the district court's judgment that a formal acquisition would not lessen competition substantially.

1. Georgia Law—The issue of C&S's violation of Georgia law was fully considered by the district court, which found that the steps necessary to place C&S in full compliance with Georgia law would not significantly affect the elements of the correspondent-associate relationship that make the relationship one of friendly rivalry rather than aggressive competition (J.S. App. 66a-68a, 70a-72a). This finding is not challenged as clearly erroneous, and is in any event plainly correct.

The issue of Georgia law arises out of a suit brought by the Independent Bankers Association of Georgia against the State Commissioner of Banking and Finance. The suit charged that the Commissioner had failed to enforce Georgia's bank holding company law (which limits direct or indirect holdings of bank stock by a bank holding company to five percent of two or more banks) and sought an order of mandamus compelling him to do so. The procedural context is significant. The scope of judicial review of the Georgia Commissioner's enforcement decisions, limited as it is to mandamus proceedings, is extremely narrow; the only judicially cognizable issue is whether the Commissioner has acted. Now that the Commissioner has acted, by issuing an order against C&S as directed by the mandamus issued by the Georgia Supreme Court, we can assume that further efforts to attack the correspondent-associate system through the Georgia courts will be unavailing.

The salient features of the Commissioner's order (J.S. App. 81a-87a) are the following:

First, C&S is ordered to make available the full complement of services that it provides the five percent banks to any other bank that might wish to enter into a like correspondent relationship with it; i.e., it cannot discriminate against banks desiring to become correspondent associates of C&S. This part of the order requires no change in C&S's relationship with existing banks, such as the five banks that it proposes to acquire, so long as it is willing to enter into similar relationships with any other banks desiring them—which it is willing to do.[61]

---

[61] The Independent Bankers Association of Georgia, in its amicus curiae brief in this Court, reads the Commissioner's order as requiring C&S to terminate the correspondent-associate relationship (p. 4). This interpretation, which the Justice Department has not adopted, is incorrect. The order requires C&S to "terminate any direct or indirect supervision of the ten five percent banks beyond that which is available from . . . [C&S] to any bank that wishes to enter into a correspondent relationship with" C&S. (J.S. App. 81a; emphasis added.) Since C&S is happy to make available to any bank wishing to enter into a correspondent relationship with it the identical services that it furnishes the five percent banks, the order does not require it to terminate its relationship with the five percent banks. Nor is there anything in the opinions of the Georgia Supreme Court requiring or justifying such an interpretation. See Independent Bankers Ass'n v. Dunn, 230 Ga. 345, 197 S.E.2d 129 (1973), modified sub nom. Citizens & Southern Nat'l Bank v. Independent Bankers Ass'n, 231 Ga. 421, 202 S.E.2d 78 (1973).

Second, no one may simultaneously be an officer (or director) of both C&S and a five percent bank—but none were at the time of trial in this case, and none are now.

Third, certain policy-making officers of C&S are ordered to divest themselves of any stock that they own in the correspondent associates. But such officers own only a very small fraction of that stock (J.S. App. 45a). Further, since they can if they wish divest the stock to customers and other friends of C&S, compliance with this part of the order creates no risk that a controlling stock interest in the five percent banks will come into unfriendly hands. In any event, the district court expressly found that the stock relationship between C&S and the five percent banks was a relatively minor factor in the cooperative, noncompeting relationship between those banks and C&S (J.S. App. 65a).

Fourth, the order requires that the advertising and promotional materials of the five percent banks, including their signs, contain the full name of the bank (e.g., "C&S Bank of North Fulton") rather than just "C&S". The banks may continue to use the name and distinctive logogram of C&S.

It is plain that the order leaves intact the basic features of the correspondent-associate relationship but in any event the impact of the order was a question of fact for the district court, which considered the bearing of the Commissioner's order on the issues in the antitrust case and amended its opinion (J. S. App. 70a-72a) to add an express finding that compliance with the order would not so alter the ties between C&S and the five percent banks as to make it likely that, but for the proposed acquisition, the latter would become independent competitive factors rather than continue as affiliates of C&S. The Justice Department neither objected to the amendment nor challenged the court's finding as clearly erroneous.

2. Sherman Act—With respect to the alleged violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act, the government's argument depends, of course, on proving such a violation, which as we have seen it failed to do. But even if a violation of section 1 had been proved, it would not follow that the acquisition of the sponsored banks by C&S was unlawful. The question under section 7 is not whether the defendants have violated the Sherman Act but whether, if so, enjoining the violation will result in substantial competition between C&S and the sponsored banks. The government made no attempt at trial to prove that the alleged section 1 violation was a substantial cause of the noncompetitive relationship between C&S and the five percent banks. That is why in this Court the government declines to identify a specific element of the correspondent-associate relationship as violative of section 1 but instead argues that the entire relationship is the violation: only if the entire relationship is enjoined is there any basis for supposing that the sponsored banks will become independent competitive factors and hence that their acquisition by C&S might result in a lessening of competition.

Suppose, for example, that this Court were to hold that C&S's communication of price information to the sponsored banks violated section 1. Such a finding would not support an inference that but for the section 1 violation C&S and the sponsored banks would have competed, for the price communications were a trivial factor in the noncompetitive relationship between C&S and the other banks.[62] The real cement was the common name, the intention of merging in the future, the fact that the sponsored banks were staffed by former executives of C&S, etc.[63]—not the sporadic distribution of a few memo-

[62] See pp. 9-14 supra. The communications relied upon by the government represent an insignificant fraction of the information supplied by C&S to the correspondent associate banks on matters which raise no section 1 questions. See p. 11, n. 12, supra.

[63] A particularly important element was the public identification of the five percent banks as formal branches of C&S, which resulted from the common name and logogram (see p. 12, supra and pp. A-1, randa containing information about C&S's prices (see App. 515, 678-79, 736-37, 758). Enjoining price communications would not create competition between C&S and the sponsored banks that the formal acquisition would eliminate. To prevail under section 7 on the basis of a violation of section 1 the government must demonstrate that the entire correspondent-associate relationship violates section 1, and it has failed to do so.

B. There Is No Other Ground Upon Which the District Court's Finding That the Acquisition Would Not Substantially Lessen Competition Can Be Overturned

Without the alleged antecedent violations of Georgia law and of the Sherman Act, the government's section 7 case has no basis at all, as the government's brief on the merits seems virtually to concede. The government has always conceded that C&S and the five banks it proposes to acquire have not competed with each other since those banks were formed, do not compete at present, and will not compete in the future unless the correspondent-associate relationship is dissolved.[64] Hence the only question is whether the sponsored banks, assuming they are not acquired

A-2 infra). A consumer is unlikely to shop around among stores that he believes to be under common ownership and management in search of a lower price or better service; nor will stores so identified think it very fruitful to try to persuade him that there are real differences among the stores—the consumer would just be confused or unbelieving.

[64] The only competition between the parties to the proposed acquisition is the sort of friendly rivalry characteristic of the different branches of a single firm (J.S. App. 64a; App. 475, 503-07). The elimination of such competition cannot result in a substantial lessening of competition in the relevant market. Otherwise a firm could not acquire a wholly owned subsidiary without violating section 7, yet the Justice Department admits that a firm can acquire a firm over which it has majority stock control without thereby violating section 7 (see Brief for the U.S. 55, 57).

by C&S, are likely voluntarily or involuntarily to sever the extensive relationships with C&S that constitute the correspondent-associate system. This is a purely factual question. The district court's resolution of it can be disturbed on appeal only if clearly erroneous. The district court found that the sponsored banks were not likely to cease being correspondent associates of C&S (J. S. App. 65a). The government does not challenge this finding as clearly erroneous—nor could it. It is profoundly unlikely either that the sponsored banks would voluntarily withdraw from the C&S system or that C&S would expel them.

The major assets of the sponsored banks are the goodwill associated with the C&S name—which is the name of each of these banks as well—and the proved methods of successful banking available to them as correspondent associates of C&S. They are unlikely to forfeit these assets by giving up their status as correspondent associates of C&S,[65] especially given the background and orientation of their executives[66] and the pattern of ownership of the banks' shares.[67] (See App. 423-26, E-574-88.) The separation of the Stone Mountain bank from the C&S system is the exception that proves the rule, for unlike the banks involved in the proposed acquisition (1) the Stone Mountain bank had not been sponsored by C&S;[68] (2) its stock was

---

[65] And with it the C&S name. It would be an unfair trade practice for a bank that was not a correspondent associate of C&S to use the C&S name. C&S Bank of Stone Mountain gave up the C&S name when it ceased to be a correspondent associate.

[66] Executives of the five percent banks are treated, in effect, as being on leave from C&S, to which they may later return (see p. 10, supra).

[67] Nothing in the Georgia Banking Commissioner's recent order requires that stock required to be divested be placed in the hands of individuals not friendly to C&S (see p. 70, supra).

[68] The government's statement that Stone Mountain was organized with "some assistance by C&S" (Brief for the U.S. 11) is misleading. All C&S did was refer the organizers of Stone Mountain to a retired employee of C&S for his assistance (App. 358, 413).

not dispersed, with C&S the largest stockholder, but instead was controlled by a single family (App. 181-82, 360, 396-97); (3) this family was independent of C&S influence (App. 180, 182-83); (4) there was never any intention to merge Stone Mountain into C&S should state law some day permit such a merger (App. 187, 373); and (5) there was continuing friction between the president that C&S furnished to Stone Mountain when it became a five percent bank and its board of directors, which resisted the introduction of C&S banking methods (App. 171, 182-83, 359-60). None of these conditions has ever occurred at any of the five banks that C&S is proposing to acquire in this case.[69]

Nor is C&S likely to expel the sponsored banks from the C&S system. The immediate effect of expulsion would be to deprive C&S of the suburban outlets that it so badly wants and needs. Now that Georgia's branch-banking law has been liberalized, C&S could apply for permission to open its own branch offices in the suburbs. But the banking authorities might well exercise their discretion to deny permission to branch (see App. E-10-12; CCH Fed. Banking Law Rep. ¶ 3179), since the competition of C&S's branch offices might endanger the survival of the (former) five percent banks, whose position would be a precarious one if they were forced by expulsion from the C&S system to compete without C&S's name and assistance. Thus if C&S expelled the five percent banks it might end up with no suburban outlets at all. And if C&S were given permission to branch, its new branches would be competing with the former [69] The separation of the Peachtree Bank from Trust Company of Georgia, which had some relationships comparable to those of C&S and its correspondent associates (but significantly not the same name) (see App. 219-25, 594-99), is even less in point. The separation occurred after the Justice Department sued Trust Company and Peachtree, and because the defendants were unwilling to bear the expenses of the lawsuit (App. 223). The costs of suit have not led to a dissolution of the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks, even in the case of C&S Bank of Tucker, which is not involved in the section 7 phase of this case.

---

five per cent banks, so that the net effect of expulsion would have been for C&S to have created competition with itself.

These are forceful reasons against C&S's expelling the five percent banks.[70] It is of course possible that the five percent banks might some day separate from C&S and become independent competitive factors. But this is a "mere possibility," which the district court was entitled to disregard. United States v. General Dynamics Corp., 415 U.S. 486, 509-10 (1974).

In this Court, the government argues that the facts which make it unlikely that C&S and the five sponsored banks will ever be in a competitive relationship with one another should be ignored. The government proposes that unless one firm has formal legal power to control another, the effect of their merger on competition should be analyzed on the premise—even if a fictitious one—that the firms are completely independent competitors in fact. The effect on competition in the Atlanta banking markets of C&S's acquisition of firms that in the aggregate do two percent of the business of those markets is to be determined as if the acquired firms are competitors of C&S, though in fact they are not.

To base the decision of a merger case on a counterfactual premise has no basis either in the statute or in the decisions of [70] At one point in this case the government argued that C&S would expel the five percent banks if it could not acquire them because the correspondent-associate relationship is not a profitable one for C&S. But there is no evidence to support this conjecture, which is wrong (App. 443-44). C&S can charge the five percent banks, directly or indirectly, for whatever benefits the relationship confers on those banks. It is true that the correspondent-associate relationship is a second-best alternative to an outright acquisition. Had there been no prospect of eventual acquisition at the time the correspondent-associate status was created, C&S might have decided not to create it (even if it had not known that the Justice Department would attack it as a violation of section 1). But that is a different issue from whether, having created the correspondent-associate relationship and maintained it for many years, C&S will now abandon it.

this Court. Only last Term, in United States v. General Dynamics Corp., supra, the Court held that market-share percentages establish only a presumption of violation of section 7 which can be rebutted by a showing that the percentages exaggerate the competitive effect of the merger. In that case, proof that the acquired firm's mineral reserves were too depleted to enable it to retain its present market share in the future exonerated the defendants.[71] Any presumption derived from the market shares[72] of C&S and the five percent banks was rebutted here by proof that the market shares of the five percent banks grossly exaggerated the significance of these banks as independent competitive factors in the market. They in fact competed as extensions of, rather than with, C&S and the acquisitions therefore will not increase C&S's market power or reduce the amount of competition in the market.[73]

[71] As the Court later explained in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U.S. 602, — (1974):

> "We conclude that by introducing evidence of concentration ratios of the magnitude of those present here the Government established a prima facie case that the Spokane market was a candidate for the potential competition doctrine. On this aspect of the case, the burden was then upon appellees to show that the concentration ratios, which can be unreliable indicators of actual market behavior, see United States v. General Dynamics Corporation, 415 U.S. 486 (1974), did not accurately depict the economic characteristics of the Spokane market."

[72] This assumes the market was correctly defined. We show below (Part V(C)) that it was not, and hence that the market-share figures on which the government relies are meaningless in any event.

[73] This case thus presents the converse of the situation described in paragraph 8 of the Department of Justice Merger Guidelines, which provides that the Department may challenge the acquisition of a firm that is too small to be considered a significant competitive factor under the standard criteria set forth in the Guidelines but that is for some reason "unusually competitive." 1 CCH Trade Reg. Rep. ¶ 4510, p. 6884 (1968). In logic, the Department should also recognize the converse case where the acquired firm, despite having a significant market share, is not a significant competitive

Furthermore, the position taken by the government in this case—that unless the parties to a proposed merger were under common ownership prior to the merger they should be treated as if they were wholly unrelated and fully competitive entities regardless of the actual facts of their relationship—has already been rejected by this Court, in United States v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, 412 U.S. 946 (1973), affirming per curiam 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 (W.D. Tex.), a case in which the government tendered the identical position to this Court. In Trans Texas the government had challenged a proposed merger among several banks. Members of an informal group of 49 individuals were majority stockholders in the banks. This "group" was not a single entity in any formal legal sense —no contractual or other formal obligations, or even family ties, united its members. The only cement holding the group together was loyalty to an individual who at the time of trial was 75 years old. No single member of the group held a controlling share in the stock of more than one bank. The banks held themselves out to the public as separate entities—the public was, indeed, completely unaware of the existence of the controlling group—and competed vigorously with each other.[74] factor due to special factors such as those involved in the present case.

The government's brief expresses concern with the possibility that, under the approach of the district court in this case, leading firms in a highly oligopolistic market might be permitted to merge upon a showing that they had avoided competition through "conscious parallelism." There is no basis for this concern. A refusal to compete is not a proper defense to a challenge to a merger; such a rule would reward firms for not competing. The basis of the district court's position in this case is not the bare fact that C&S and the five percent banks do not and are unlikely in the future to compete; it is rather the relationship between C&S and the five percent banks, which was procompetitive in purpose and effect since it allowed C&S to expand in the face of anticompetitive state-law limitations on branch banking, albeit an unavoidable side effect was that C&S did not compete with the five percent banks, just as a firm that opens a branch office in a new market will not compete with it.

[74] See Jurisdictional Statement in Trans Texas, pp. 8, 22, for examples drawn from the record in that case of the vigorous competition between the various banks involved. As the Department correctly pointed out (p. 18), the members of the so-called "control group" "were not bound together by any written agreement; they did not claim to have any legally binding arrangement among them to vote in concert; they never held a formal meeting; and they did not act in concert to control the competitive efforts of the banks." Having lost Trans Texas, the Department in arguing the present case has recast the facts of that case (see Brief for the U.S. 54-55).

They were, of course, legally independent firms in the corporate law sense to which the Justice Department attaches controlling significance in this case (see, e.g., Brief for the U.S. 55-56). Nonetheless the district court in Trans Texas found that the probability that the ties among the banks would dissolve, and hence that but for the proposed merger the banks might some day be fully independent competitive factors, was too remote to justify the conclusion that the merger would violate section 7. The Justice Department appealed to this Court, which affirmed, thereby rejecting the government's position—the same position it is urging here. Since the future dissolution of the ties binding the correspondent associates to C&S is even less likely than the dissolution of the informal controlling group of shareholders in Trans Texas,[75] this is an a fortiori case for affirmance.

Even without the recent decisions of this Court reaffirming the application of the clearly-erroneous rule to the review of district court factfindings in antitrust cases (Marine Bancorporation, General Dynamics, supra) the government's sole reliance on market-share percentages would be misplaced in a case of this type. The market-share percentage test was developed for, and has heretofore only been applied in, horizontal merger cases, that is, cases in which the challenged merger eliminates existing competition. The present case is a potential-competi-

[75] Because the banks involved in Trans Texas were held out to the public as separate and independent competing firms, with different names, etc., dissolution of the relationship among them would not have involved any of the problems discussed at pp. 73-75, supra.

tion case, for it is conceded that there is no significant existing competition between the parties to the proposed merger. The contention rather is that the merger eliminates the potential competition of these firms, since although they are not competitors today they might some day become competitors. This is like a case where one firm proposes to acquire another firm that has never sold in the market of the first firm but may some day decide to do so. It has never been thought in a case of that sort that the decision of the acquiring firm to enter the market of the acquired firm could be conclusively presumed. Evidence of the likelihood of the firm's entering (or of exerting competitive pressure on the acquired firm by virtue of the threat of entry) has always been considered an indispensable element of a potential-competition case. See, e.g., United States v. Falstaff Brewing Corp., 410 U.S. 526 (1973). The government introduced no such evidence in this case, and, as we have seen, the record in fact demonstrates that the sponsored banks were unlikely ever to become significant competitors of C&S.

V. The Issues That the District Court Did Not Reach.

The defendants advanced several additional grounds for dismissal of the complaint that the district court did not reach since it found for the defendants on other grounds. We believe that these are grounds that this Court could appropriately decide in the first instance, if necessary in order to terminate this litigation without the necessity of a remand.[76]

---

[76] We do not, however, repeat here our argument that the proposed acquisition is protected by the convenience and needs defense of the Bank Merger Act. That argument involves factual questions that must first be resolved by the district court in order to provide a suitable foundation for appellate review. United States v. Third National Bank in Nashville, 390 U.S. 171, 183-84 (1968).

A. The Justice Department Is Barred by the Grandfather Clause of the Bank Holding Company Act From Challenging the Relationship Between C&S and Three of Its Correspondent Associates

Three of the correspondent-associate relationships challenged as a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act were entered into and have existed continuously since prior to July 1, 1966.[77] These relationships are immunized from attack by the government under section 1 of the Sherman Act by the grandfather clause contained in section 11(d) of the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U.S.C. § 1849(d), which provides that any "acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in section 3(a)" of the Act which was consummated prior to July 1, 1966, shall be "conclusively presumed" not to have been in violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of the Sherman Act. United States v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,-257, p. 93,214 (W.D. Tex.), aff'd per curiam, 412 U.S. 946 (1973).

The government contends that the grandfather clause is inapplicable because the relationships challenged as a violation of section 1 of the Sherman Act do not constitute acquisitions within the meaning of section 3(a) of the Act. It is undisputed, however, that C&S acquired a five percent stock interest in each correspondent associate at the time when the operating relationships were initiated. The government's theory seems to be that the grandfather clause, if it has any meaning at all, protects only the acquisition of the five percent interest but not the relationship that has followed the acquisition. There is no logic to this reasoning. If the grandfather clause did not protect the relationships that followed acquisitions or mergers, it would not provide effective protection from section 1 of the Sherman Act.

[77] The three banks are C&S Bank of Sandy Springs and C&S Bank of Chamblee, which were organized as C&S correspondent associates in 1959 and 1960, respectively, and C&S Bank of Tucker, which became a C&S correspondent associate when C&S acquired five percent of its stock in 1965.

We emphasize that formal approval of the Federal Reserve Board under section 3(a) is not a condition precedent to the grandfather protection. The statute applies to acquisitions "of the kind described" in section 3(a), which includes acquisitions by bank holding companies of stock in banks. Unlike other provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act, the protection of the grandfather clause clearly extends beyond acquisitions that required prior Board approval.[78]

B. The Challenged Relationships Are Protected by the Subsidiary Exemption of Section 7 of the Clayton Act

The record in this case clearly shows that C&S caused the formation of all of the correspondent associate banks involved in this litigation, except for Tucker.[79] We have shown that C&S

---

[78] E.g., section 11(b), which gives the Justice Department 30 days within which to contest Board decisions, and which was amended in 1970 so that it now covers only an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation approved under section 3 . . ." (12 U.S.C. 1849(b) (emphasis added)). In addition, section 11(c), which authorizes banking agencies to appear as a party in certain antitrust cases, applies only to actions arising out of "any acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction approved by the Board under section 3 of this Act" (12 U.S.C. § 1849(c) (emphasis added)). If Congress had intended to limit the application of the grandfather clause to transactions requiring Board approval under section 3, it would have repeated the language used in sections 11(b) and 11(c). Clearly, its intentions were broader. The grandfather clause was described as an exemption for "all bank holding company formations or acquisitions before the enactment of the provision if no litigation had been initiated at that time." 112 Cong. Rec. 11792 (1966).

[79] The district court made extensive findings on the dominant role played by C&S in the organization of the five banks it is seeking to acquire (J.S. App. 49a).

played the dominant role in the organization of these banks in an effort to extend C&S banking services to areas where C&S could not open branch offices. It follows that the correspondent-associate relationships are protected by the exemption for subsidiaries in section 7 of the Clayton Act. The exemption provides that nothing in the statute shall prevent a corporation "from causing the formation of subsidiary corporations in order to carry on its legitimate business, or branches or extensions thereof, provided that the effect of such formation is not substantially to lessen competition."

The subsidiary exemption has not been interpreted by the courts, and the legislative history is not helpful in determining the intent of Congress in enacting it. But it is surely significant that the exemption focuses on the formation and purpose of the subsidiary corporation rather than on the amount of stock owned by the parent corporation. The whole purpose for the formation of the correspondent associate banks by C&S was to carry on the legitimate business of C&S. The subsidiary exemption is applicable only when the effect of the formation of a new subsidiary is not to lessen competition substantially, but the government admits that the formation of the correspondent associates by C&S did not lessen competition in any way.[80]

Although the subsidiary exemption by its terms applies only to section 7 of the Clayton Act, it is basic to antitrust law that the merger proscriptions of section 7 are more stringent than those of section 1 of the Sherman Act. E.g., Report of Attorney General's National Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws,

[80] In fact, the government admitted in the district court that it did not challenge the initial acquisitions by C&S of its five percent interest in each bank because those acquisitions "were competitively insignificant when made" (J.S. App. 64a; see App. E-744, E-817, E-752, E-821). The district court found that the government did not prove any substantial change in the relationships between the date of the initial acquisitions and the date of trial (J.S. App. 65a).

1955, p. 117. Since the formation of each correspondent associate was expressly sanctioned by section 7, it would be anomalous to conclude that the relationships that have naturally resulted from the exempt formation and purpose violate section 1 of the Sherman Act.

C. The Government Failed to Establish the Relevant Sections of the Country in Which the Competitive Effects of the Acquisitions Should Be Analyzed

The government contended in the district court that the relevant market areas were (a) the Atlanta area (consisting of DeKalb and Fulton Counties), (b) DeKalb County, (c) Fulton County, and (d) North Fulton County (that portion of Fulton County north of the Atlanta city limits). The defendants, on the other hand, produced an abundance of economic evidence showing that banking markets in the Atlanta metropolitan area are highly localized in nature (App. 622-25, 859-61) and that C&S and the five suburban banks it is seeking to acquire serve separate market areas. Even the government's own economic expert witness testified that the market areas alleged by the government were too large to constitute banking markets.[81] He testified, for example, that North Fulton County contains two rea-

---

[81] The government's economic expert testified as follows (App. 320-21):

"Q. Now, these markets which you have located for us in your affidavits, you simply have verified what the Government alleged in its complaint; haven't you?

"A. Not precisely, no.

"Q. Except in one instance, that's where you found two markets in North Fulton County?

"A. I believe there are more instances. I believe that the complaint alleges—draws some very hard lines identifying markets. For example, the complaint alleges that Fulton County is a market. That DeKalb County is a market. As I pointed out in my first affidavit, I think that DeKalb County is probably too large to constitute a banking market. The reason I sonable approximations of banking markets (App. 321). He also expressed the view that "DeKalb County is probably too large to constitute a banking market" (App. 320). In discussing the alleged Fulton County market, the government's witness testified that the market "would probably be more valid" if the southwestern part of the county were "cut off" (App. 336). If DeKalb and Fulton Counties are each too large to be relevant banking markets, it necessarily follows that the Atlanta area, composed of DeKalb and Fulton Counties combined, is too large.

The only inference that can be drawn from the economic evidence submitted by the government in this case is that suburban banks, such as those involved in this case, are not effective competitors throughout an entire county. This inference, drawn by the government's own witness (App. 320-21, 333-34), is consistent with the evidence submitted by the appellees (App. 626-believe that is that there are areas in DeKalb such as Lithonia that should not probably be considered a part of the metropolitan Atlanta, downtown Atlanta banking market. I think the Peoples Bank of Lithonia serves a different market. I think that it, should not, that part of the county should not probably be included in a rigorous definition of market.

"I believe there are also probably some eastern, some areas of the eastern boundaries of the county that should not probably be included in that market.

* * *

"Q. You found two markets in North Fulton County; is that correct?

"A. I believe that there is at least one market in North Fulton County that can be separated from the Fulton County area. There is up in the section that is roughly in the northern tip of Fulton County, there are a couple of banks, several banking offices that are found to have captured or to serve most of the customers who reside in that area. You can come down farther and find a similar pattern.

"Q. And you state at the present time it appears that the North Fulton area contains two reasonable approximations of banking markets?

"A. It may, yes."

27, 873) and leads to the ultimate conclusion that the appellee banks do not compete with each other in any section of the country (App. 626). At the very least, the government failed to prove that its alleged sections of the country are based on economic or competitive realities. For this reason alone, the judgment of the district court on the section 7 issue must be affirmed.

Clearly, the market areas alleged by the government were not correctly defined according to the standards set forth in United States v. Connecticut National Bank, 418 U.S. 656 (1974), decided after the trial in the present case. Connecticut National Bank makes clear that the government cannot argue, as it did in this case (Plaintiff's Post-Trial Brief 6), that a geographical area need not be a banking market at all to qualify as a section of the country (418 U.S. at —). Moreover, both in Connecticut National Bank and in the Marine Bancorporation case decided on the same day, this Court ruled that the relevant geographical market of an acquired bank "is the localized area in which that bank is in significant, direct competition with other banks" (418 U.S. —) and that the government must produce evidence to enable a realistic delineation of any local banking markets in which competition is alleged to be affected (id. at —) and cannot simply rely on standard metropolitan statistical areas or on political boundaries (id. at —). Here the government failed to establish any economically significant geographical markets or submarkets and instead relied on arbitrary boundaries. The government's failure to establish a relevant market in which to appraise the competitive effects of the challenged acquisitions requires affirmance of the district court's decision.

VI. CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated, we urge that the judgment of the district court in favor of the appellees be affirmed.

Respectfully submitted,

OCTOBER TERM, 1974

No. 73-1933

v.

CITIZENS AND SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK, ET AL.

ON APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA

BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES

OPINION BELOW

The district court's findings of fact, conclusions of law and order (J.S. App. A, 1a–69a) are reported at 372 F. Supp. 616.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the district court (J.S. App. A, 69a) was entered on January 25, 1974. The notice of appeal to this Court (J.S. App. C, 73a–74a) was filed on March 25, 1974. On April 16, 1974, Mr. Justice Powell extended the time for docketing the appeal to June 24, 1974, and the appeal was docketed on that date. The Court noted probable jurisdiction on October 21, 1974 (App. E–1842).[18] The jurisdiction of this Court is conferred by Section 2 of the Expediting Act, 15 U.S.C. 29.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Whether arrangements whereby six separate and independent banks operate as de facto branches of a larger independent bank competing in the same markets, and pursuant to which each such bank and the larger bank exchange information and other resources and jointly determine competitive strategy, violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

2. Whether the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 ousts antitrust courts of jurisdiction to determine the foregoing question, by vesting exclusive jurisdiction over such issues in the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

3. Whether the acquisition by the largest bank in the Atlanta area of five independent banks there, which are not acting as competitors because they have undertaken to operate as its de facto branches, violates Section 7 of the Clayton Act.

STATUTES INVOLVED

Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 38 Stat. 731, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 18; Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 26 Stat. 209, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 1; and Subsection 5(B) of the Bank Merger Act of 1966, 80 Stat. 8, as amended, 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(5)(B), are set forth in Appendix E to the jurisdictional statement (J.S. App. 88a–89a).

[18] The appendix volumes containing exhibits have been separately paginated. "App. E" references are to the exhibit volumes. "App." references are to the other appendix volumes.

STATEMENT

The United States filed this civil antitrust action challenging the relationships between the Citizens and Southern banking organization ("C&S" or the "C&S System"), the largest banking organization in Atlanta, Georgia, and six legally-independent banks in the Atlanta suburbs, which voluntarily operate as de facto branches of C&S, as violating Section 1 of the Sherman Act. The complaint also challenged C&S's proposed acquisition of five of these banks, pursuant to agreements entered into in 1970, as violating Section 7 of the Clayton Act. After trial on the merits, the district court entered judgment for the defendants, appellees here (J.S. App. 1a–69a).

A. THE DEFENDANTS

1. The Citizens and Southern Banking System. The C&S System consists of Citizens and Southern National Bank ("C&S National"), its wholly-owned subsidiary Citizens and Southern Holding Company ("C&S Holding"), and eight banks operating in Georgia in which C&S Holding owns a majority stock interest (J.S. App. 2a–3a; DX 266, p. 116; App. E–457).

C&S National, the lead bank in the C&S System, is also a registered bank holding company under federal law (J.S. App. 2a). See 12 U.S.C. 1844(a). Its home office is in Savannah but it operates more than 60 banking offices in six Georgia cities, about 40 of which are located in the Atlanta area (J.S. App. 2a).

Through C&S Holding, the C&S System presently owns a majority stock interest in three state-chartered banks in the Atlanta area which operate a total of ten offices there. The challenged acquisitions are to be made by two of these banks: "C&S Emory" and "C&S East Point" (J.S. App. 2a–4a, 6a).

C&S's combined assets of $1.7 billion, combined deposits of $1.4 billion, and combined loans and discounts of $1.1 billion as of June 30, 1970, made it Georgia's largest banking organization. In the Atlanta area, C&S on December 31, 1971, had deposits of approximately $1 billion. Its 30 percent share of the total deposits held by the 31 banking organizations operating there made it the largest in the Atlanta area (J.S. App. 2a, 38a–40a).

2. The "Five-Percent" Defendant Banks. Between 1957 and 1969, C&S assisted in the organization of a number of independent banks in the Atlanta suburbs. C&S Holding acquired a five percent stock interest in these banks when they were organized, and they are sometimes referred to as the "five-percent banks" (see pp. 5–7, infra). There is no dispute that: these five-percent banks are, and always have been, legally-independent institutions (in contrast, for example, to the banks in which C&S Holding owns a majority stock interest, such as C&S Emory and C&S East Point); the management of each five-percent bank owes fiduciary obligations to all of that bank's stockholders; each five-percent bank has the capacity or power to make its competitive decisions independently of C&S; and insofar as the management of each five-percent bank submits to the direction of C&S it does so voluntarily (see pp. 6–12, infra). Indeed, appellees have referred to the relationship between C&S and the five-percent banks as one of "voluntary control" (see, e.g., Defendants' Memorandum Regarding Effect of the Citizens and Southern National Bank, et al. v. Independent Bankers Association of Georgia (Supreme Court of Georgia, November 15, 1973) [202 S.E. 2d 78], dated November 16, 1973, p. 5 ("Memorandum Regarding Effect")).

By means of this "voluntary control" the five-percent banks are operated as though they are branches in the C&S System; thus, although the five-percent banks are legally independent, C&S refers to them as its de facto branches (see, e.g., DX 267, p. 2; App. E–462).

Each of the five-percent banks C&S proposes to acquire has "a large number of shareholders * * * and no single shareholder owns a significant number of the shares of any such bank" (J.S. App. 43a).

Sandy Springs. Sandy Springs is a community in Fulton County adjoining the north side of the City of Atlanta. Organized in 1959, the Citizens National Bank of Sandy Springs began operating in 1960. In 1969 it converted from a national to a state-chartered bank and adopted the name Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs. It has one office, and had assets of $22 million, deposits of $19 million and net loans and discounts of $11.7 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 5a–6a).

Chamblee. Chamblee is located northeast of Atlanta in DeKalb County. The Chamblee National Bank, organized in 1960, converted in 1969 from a national to a state-chartered bank and adopted the name Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee. It has two offices, and had assets of $21.1 million, deposits of $18.7 million, and loans and discounts of $10.7 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 4a).

North Fulton. The Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton, a state-chartered bank, was organized in 1967 in a community in the portion of Fulton County north of Atlanta. It has one office, and had assets of $7.7 million, deposits of $6.3 million and loans and discounts of $5.6 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 5a).

Park National. Citizens and Southern Park National Bank was organized in 1967 in Executive Park, located north of Atlanta in DeKalb County. It has one office, and had assets of $11.1 million, deposits of $9.8 million, and loans and discounts of $3.5 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 4a).

South DeKalb. Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank, a state-chartered bank, was organized in 1969 southeast of Atlanta in DeKalb County. It has two offices, and had assets of $5.1 million, deposits of $4.3 million, and loans and discounts of $2.1 million as of December 31, 1970 (id. at 4a–5a).

The five banks that C&S proposes to acquire operate seven offices, all in the Atlanta metropolitan area. Combined, they had total assets of $67 million, total deposits of $58.1 million, and total loans and discounts of $33.6 million, as of December 31, 1970. The combined deposits of these banks as of December 31, 1971 ($71.1 million (id. at 40a)) are exceeded by only five banks in the Atlanta area, including C&S (ibid.), and "Sandy Springs and Chamblee are, alone, the tenth and eleventh largest banking organizations in the Atlanta area, respectively" (ibid.).

Tucker. Another five-percent bank, Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker ("Tucker Bank"), is a defendant in this suit. Tucker Bank, a state-chartered bank located northeast of Atlanta in Tucker, in DeKalb County, and chartered as Bank of Tucker in 1919, was in existence long before its association with C&S in 1965. In that year C&S Holding purchased five percent of the stock of Bank of Tucker, which then adopted its present name. It has two offices and had assets of $26.5 million, deposits of $23 million, and loans and discounts of $14.8 million as of December 31, 1970 (J.S. App. 5a).

Since 1965 Tucker Bank, like the other five-percent defendant banks, has operated as a de facto branch in the C&S System (see DX 267, p. 2; App. E–462). It is involved only in the Sherman Act aspect of this case, because the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") disapproved C&S's application to acquire it, although its relationship with C&S as a de facto branch continues despite criticism by FDIC.[1]

B. GEORGIA BANKING LAW AND C&S'S HISTORY IN THE ATLANTA AREA

Prior to 1927 Georgia permitted statewide branching, and C&S National, whose home office is in Savannah, established three branches in Atlanta. Georgia prohibited branching in 1927, but in 1929 it amended

[1] The FDIC characterized the relationship between C&S and Tucker Bank as being "anticompetitive in its origins" but assumed that it could be terminated only by "compulsory process" (GX 33D, pp. 2–3; App. E–8—E–9).

the branching law to permit banks to open branches in the cities in which their home offices were located (J.S. App. 7a–10a). This amendment, which remained in effect until 1960, precluded C&S National from opening additional branches in Atlanta.

Until 1956, however, Georgia law did not prohibit bank holding companies. Between 1946 and 1954, C&S Holding, formed in 1927, acquired the stock of two banks in the Atlanta area (C&S East Point and C&S DeKalb) and C&S formed a third bank (C&S Emory), virtually all of whose stock is owned by C&S Holding (id. at 9a–10a).

Enacted in 1956, the Georgia Bank Holding Company Act, Ga. L. 1956, pp. 309–312, prohibited any holding company from acquiring more than fifteen percent of a bank's stock, and a 1960 amendment further limited such ownership to five percent. Ga. Code Ann. 13–207(a) (J.S. App. 8a). See also p. 20, infra.

In 1965, Georgia authorized branching within the limits of any city in which a bank had an office; in 1970 it authorized branching, beginning in 1971, in any county in which a bank has an office. Ga. Code Ann. 13–203(c) (Cum. Supp. 1972). The city of Atlanta covers parts of Fulton and DeKalb counties and prior to 1971 C&S had branches in Atlanta located in both counties. The 1971 amendment of Georgia's branching law thus permitted C&S, for the first time, to open branches in Fulton and DeKalb Counties beyond Atlanta's city limits, and it has done so (J.S. App. 8a, 10a). The 1971 amendment also made the five acquisitions challenged here possible under state law.

C. C&S'S RELATIONSHIPS WITH THE FIVE-PERCENT DEFENDANT BANKS

In seeking regulatory approval for its acquisitions of the five-percent defendant banks, and in defending this lawsuit, C&S has relied heavily on the existing relationships between it and those banks. It has characterized the five-percent defendant banks as de facto branches of C&S (DX 266, pp. 2–3; App. E–340—E–341; DX 267, pp. 2–3; App. E–462—E–463), and has asserted that the operation of these banks as though they are in fact branches of C&S has been achieved by means of "voluntary control" (see p. 4, supra). The existence of these relationships, C&S maintains, precludes a finding that the acquisitions will have anticompetitive effects.

The five-percent defendant banks are in fact operated as C&S branches. Appellees stated in their post-trial brief (p. 26) that the five banks it proposes to acquire (termed "correspondent associates" by C&S) "are operated in all significant respects as C&S branches. There is an abundance of testimony showing that there are no significant differences between the C&S correspondent associate banks and C&S National's branches."

This de facto branch relationship is the product of the five-percent defendant banks' willingness to be "controlled" by C&S, i.e., the relationship exists because of an understanding or agreement between the parties. As appellees explained below: "The existing relationships were and are sought, valued, and maintained by the 5% banks. * * * [C&S has] responded by offering counsel, assistance and advice. * * * [T]hese relationships have resulted in noncompetition between and among defendant banks. The relationships have endured and persisted * * * with the clear and explicit understanding of all parties" (Memorandum Regarding Effect, supra, p. 5.) Although the officers and directors of the five-percent defendant banks have the ultimate legal authority to make decisions respecting their banks, appellees pointed out that "the shorthand description of the relationships claims only 'voluntary control' " (id. at 5).

The de facto branch relationship includes joint determination of competitive strategy by C&S and its de facto branches, particularly mutual determinations concerning rates and prices. This was accomplished by exchanges of competitive information, which resulted in such non-competitive uniformity that appellees stated in their post-trial brief (p. 40) "that the defendant banks represent, in effect, a single economic enterprise." For example, memoranda C&S circulated to the five percent defendant banks stated:

> Let's * * * get the rates [on loans] up where they belong [i.e., "rates suggested by the new rate chart"]. [GX 116; App. E–133.]
>
> There could be exceptions to these guidelines [on residential construction loan rates] and if so, they should be cleared through [C&S] Branch Supervision.
>
> In the case of commercial construction loans [C&S] Real Estate Department for the going rate. [GX 120; App. E–139.]

Either the five-percent bank or C&S is free to terminate the existing relationship and to resume or establish "de facto" independence, with or without an ordinary correspondent relationship, as was in fact done by Citizens and Southern Bank of Stone Mountain ("Stone Mountain").

Stone Mountain was organized in 1957 with some assistance by C&S, albeit not as much as in the cases of the other five-percent defendant banks whose organization it assisted (App. 357–361, 368–369, 373, 395–397, 414, 420–423). C&S Holding acquired five percent of Stone Mountain's stock in 1959, and in 1966 the bank changed its name to Citizens and Southern Bank of Stone Mountain, thus becoming a "correspondent associate" of C&S like the five-percent defendant banks.

[2] Such memoranda also stated:

> The discount rate increased from 4¾% to 5% effective July 19th. The commercial loan rate chart distributed to you last week carried the old rate of 4¾%. * * * [T]his rate chart reflects minimum rates * * *. [GX 115; App. E–132.]
> Let's plan to start keeping our drive-in windows open until four o'clock at every location just as quickly as this can be arranged. [GX 123; App. E–142.]

Another example concerns the establishment of uniform checking account charges. In February 1970, C&S National notified the five-percent banks of its intent to raise its service charges on regular checking accounts in Atlanta, with no date being then specified (GX 188; App. E–240). At that time some of the five-percent banks had service charge schedules different from (usually lower than) C&S National's (DX 302, pp. 2–8; App. E–842—E–848). But on April 1, 1970, every defendant bank adopted identical charges for both regular and special checking accounts (ibid.).

That bank, however, later declined C&S's offer to acquire it, and has since become completely independent of C&S's influence and no longer uses the C&S name (App. 151–152, 154, 156–157, 165–166, 176–177, 357–359, 369, 395–396, 444). Appellees asserted in their post-trial brief (p. 40) that the difference between C&S's relationship with Stone Mountain and its relationship with the five-percent defendant banks was chiefly one of "attitudes;" Stone Mountain's officials did not permit C&S to manage their bank.[3]

D. THE ATLANTA BANKING MARKETS

The Clayton Act count of the complaint alleged that the proposed acquisitions may substantially lessen competition and would increase concentration (a) in the Atlanta area, consisting of DeKalb and Fulton Counties, in which the City of Atlanta lies; (b) in DeKalb and Fulton Counties separately; and (c) in north Fulton County. Within each of the government's proposed markets, which the district court accepted for "purposes of discussion" (J.S. App. 30a–31a), commercial banking is highly concentrated. For example, in the Atlanta area, the top two banks had 53.2 percent of total deposits and the top four had 84.2 percent. The acquisitions would increase these levels of concentration by two percent, would raise [3] Mills B. Lane, former president of C&S National and C&S Holding (~~Tr.~~ App. 341, 343–344), was asked to compare C&S's relationship with Stone Mountain and its "voluntary control" of the defendant five-percent banks. He testified that they are as "[d]ifferent as day and night. * * * [Stone Mountain's directors] wanted to * * * [and did] tell him [Stone Mountain's president] what to do" (~~Tr.~~ App. 359–360; see also ~~Tr.~~ 396–397).

C&S's share as market leader from 30 to 32 percent and would reduce the total number of banking organizations in the Atlanta area market by one sixth, from 31 to 26. Similar effects would occur in each of the other markets.[4]

E. THE ACQUISITION PROPOSAL, COMPETITIVE REPORTS, AND THE FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION'S DECISION

In 1970 C&S applied to the FDIC, pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1828(c), for approval of its proposed acquisitions of the assets and assumptions of the liabilities of the six "five percent" banks described above (DX 266; App. E–337—E–459; DX 267; App. E–460—E–571B).[5] The applications asserted that the banks to be acquired are "virtually operated and directed as de facto branches in the C&S system," that their "[s]tockholders, customers and competitors have recognized that fact," that the proposed acquisitions "can produce no anti-competitive results * * * since no change is contemplated—except as to form," and that, since no competition exists between C&S and the five-percent banks, no competition could be eliminated by the proposed acquisitions (DX 266, pp. 2–3; App. E–340—E–341; DX 267, pp. 2–3; App. E–462—E–463).

[4] Tables setting forth concentration levels and the effect of the acquisitions upon them in each market are contained in the district court's findings (J.S. App. 31a–40a). See also p. 53, infra, n. 34.

[5] The applications actually were filed by two C&S subsidiaries: C&S East Point proposed to acquire Sandy Springs Bank and North Fulton Bank, and C&S Emory proposed to acquire Chamblee Bank, Park National Bank, South DeKalb Bank and Tucker Bank. Since a substantial majority of the

Pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(4), the Department of Justice, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Comptroller of the Currency submitted competitive reports to the FDIC concerning the proposed acquisitions (GX 38; App. E–38—E–56; DX 318; App. E–1822—E–1825; DX 317; App. E–1816—E–1821). The Board of Governors and the Comptroller reported that the acquisitions would not have anticompetitive effects. The Department, after initially also so reporting as to all but Tucker Bank,[6] concluded after further investigation that all six proposed acquisitions "would have a significantly adverse effect on competition" (GX 38, p. 17; App. E–54).[7] two acquiring subsidiaries' stock is owned by C&S Holding, the proposed acquisitions are in substance acquisitions by C&S and have been consistently treated as such (J.S. App. 6a). As each of the acquiring banks is a "nonmember [of the Federal Reserve System] insured bank," the FDIC is responsible for approving the acquisitions in the first instance. 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(2)(C).

[6] The Department had initially reported that the acquisition by C&S of the five banks C&S had assisted in organizing would have no adverse effect on competition because they had always been "affiliated" with C&S, but that the acquisition of Tucker Bank would injure competition because it had previously been independent. The initial reports were based on the erroneous assumption that, from the time they were organized, C&S completely controlled the "affiliated" banks it sought to acquire and that the latter banks had never been independent competitors. A subsequent field investigation, prompted by information received after the initial reports were submitted, revealed that the assumption of complete control was not correct (GX 38, pp. 3–4; App. E–40—E–41).

[7] The only issue before the FDIC was whether to approve the proposed acquisitions; it was not called upon to determine whether the existing arrangements between C&S and the five-percent banks violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

On October 4, 1971, the FDIC approved the acquisition by C&S of the five banks it had assisted in organizing (GX 33B; App. E–1—E–4; GX 33C; App. E–5—E–6), concluding that they do not and never did compete with each other or with C&S (GX 33B, p. 2; App. E–2; GX 33C, p. 2; App. E–6). The FDIC disapproved, however, the acquisition of Tucker Bank (GX 33D; App. E–7—E–9). The FDIC found that, because of the "close * * * working relationship" between the two banks, C&S's acquisition of Tucker Bank would not eliminate any existing competition and that voluntary disaffiliation is unlikely. Nevertheless, it denied approval because "the present affiliation was anticompetitive in its origins and should not now be ratified by the * * * [FDIC's] approval" of the merger (id. at 3). It also suggested that disaffiliation depends on "compulsory process to sever the C&S relationship with this bank, rather than the denial of the [acquisition] application * * *" (id. at 2).

F. THE DISTRICT COURT'S DECISION

On November 2, 1971, within the 30-day period prescribed for such suits (12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(6), (7)), the United States filed this action. The complaint alleged that C&S's consummation of the five acquisitions approved by the FDIC[8] would violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act, and that C&S and the six five-percent defendant banks (including Tucker Bank) had entered into a combination pursuant to which they have jointly determined the competitive strategy of each bank in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act (App. 9–23). The complaint sought injunctive relief to prohibit the acquisitions and to terminate the Section 1 violations. Pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(7)(A), the commencement of the action automatically stayed the effectiveness of the FDIC's approval and, hence, consummation of the acquisitions.[9]

[8] The FDIC did not exercise its statutory right to intervene as a party defendant, 12 U.S.C. 1828(c)(7)(D).

Following a trial on the merits, the district court entered judgment for the appellees on both the Section 1 and Section 7 claims.

1. The Sherman Act claims. The district court held that the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System had "exclusive primary jurisdiction" under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 133, as amended, 12 U.S.C. 1841, et seq., over all questions presented under the Sherman Act concerning the legality of the relationship between C&S and the six five-percent banks. Citing Whitney Nat'l Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U.S. 411, the court ruled that the doctrine of "exclusive primary jurisdiction is applicable * * * not only to questions of organization, but also to questions of operation of banks by bank holding companies" (J.S. App. 26a).

Alternatively, the court held that no violation of Section 1 had been established. Apparently accepting the premise that the five-percent defendant banks are legally-independent banking institutions, the court, in its analysis of the Section 1 claims, made no finding as to initial responsibility for organization of the five banks in whose creation C&S had participated (see id. at 10a). It noted, however, that "C&S's involvement was prompted by hope that it would be the forerunner of much larger interests in the future. It is also clear that such initial C&S participation effectively precluded ab initio any real competition between the C&S System and the five percent defendant banks" (id. at 11a.). The court also found that C&S's advice and suggestions with respect to rates, hours of operation, types of loans to discourage, and minimum loan rates were generally followed, but concluded that these activities do not amount to collusive price fixing or market division, and hence are not per se violations of Section 1 (id. at 23a–25a).

[9] The district court denied appellees' motions to lift the stay prior to trial and after trial. Mr. Justice Powell denied appellees' motion to lift the stay after the appeal was docketed in this Court.

Applying the "rule of reason," the court found no adverse effects upon competition nor any significant difference from an ordinary correspondent relationship between banks (id. at 29a):

> There is no evidence of record to conclude that the utilization by the five percent defendant banks of the services or information received by them from C&S National or C&S Holding was a result of any tacit or explicit combinations rather than the natural deference of the recipient to information from one with greater expertise or better sources.

In sum, the court concluded that the difference between the challenged arrangement and the usual relationship between correspondent banks was "merely one of degree" (id. at 28a).

2. The Clayton Act claims. By contrast, the court's rejection of the Clayton Act claims rested upon the contrary proposition that the relationship between C&S and each five-percent bank was unlike "the normal correspondent banking relationship" in that it was "much closer" (J.S. App. 49a), so that "there is no presently existing substantial competition between the five percent defendant banks and C&S National, or inter sese, or with third parties, which would be affected by the proposed merger" (id. at 66a).

The court found that C&S had been intimately involved in all aspects of the banks' establishment; that the chartering agencies knew that each bank would be affiliated with a large bank and relied on this fact in granting a charter; and that C&S officials had stock interests in excess of five percent.[10] The court found that C&S had: furnished the president and other managing officials of each bank; selected directors; arranged for the banks to use the C&S name and logo to increase their public identification with C&S; provided accounting services; set up the same credit administration and controls as for C&S branches; provided for regular credit meetings with C&S officers and affiliates; furnished the five-percent banks with C&S guides and manuals; provided an advisory director to meet with each bank's board of directors; supervised their operations through C&S's branch supervision department; and arranged for customer services to be handled as if each bank were a branch of C&S (id. at 42a–55a).

[10] The court appears to have concluded that C&S's relationship with the five-percent banks was the type endorsed by the government in its jurisdictional statement in United States v. Marine Bancorp., No. 73-38, decided June 26, 1974 (J.S. App. 22a-23a, 29a). It also concluded that in 1968 the Department of Justice had acquiesced in the relationship between C&S and the five-percent banks by failing to challenge it after participating in an understanding reached during an investigation by the Federal Reserve Board staff to determine whether C&S had violated the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (J.S. App. 27a). The understanding provided that C&S would not be deemed to control a majority of the Board of Directors of a five-percent bank by reason of its furnishing a principal operating officer, that officer's purchase of additional shares, or its placing of one or two directors on the bank's board, if they were not a majority (see J.S. App. 18a-19a).

The court found that this relationship "is principally a matter of such intangible factors as the intentions of the principals, and that stock ownership is merely one manifestation along with various implementing operating procedures" (id. at 65a), so that "stock ownership is not the most important cement, nor is [it] even necessary to the maintenance of these strong relationships * * *" (id. at 55a).

Citing United States v. Trans Texas Bancorp., CCH 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74,257 (W.D. Tex.), affirmed, 412 U.S. 946, the court held that the absence of substantial competition between parties to a proposed horizontal merger precludes a finding that the merger may substantially lessen competition. In the court's view, "it makes no difference whether this absence of competition results from a legally effective stock ownership control, as in Trans Texas, or from the more intangible factors present here. It is the absence of competition which is the crucial factor in a Section 7 case, not the underlying factors producing that situation" (J.S. App. 66a). On this basis it concluded that none of the acquisitions would violate Section 7.

3. The Georgia Supreme Court's decisions concerning the invalidity of C&S's relationship with five-percent banks under state law.

Prior to the decision of the district court, the validity, under state law, of the relationship between C&S and a number of five-percent banks (including C&S South DeKalb) was challenged in the Georgia courts. The Supreme Court of Georgia held that C&S had exceeded the five-percent stock limitation in Georgia law, and that C&S was indirectly controlling more than five percent of the stock because of "the action of certain * * * [C&S] officers and directors in acquiring such stock, selling it to selected individuals and trusts, and in treating such banks as branch banks of Citizens and Southern." Citizens & So. Nat'l Bank v. Independent Bankers Ass'n of Ga., Inc., 202 S.E. 2d 78, 80. See also Independent Bankers Ass'n of Ga., Inc. v. Dunn, 230 Ga. 345, 197 S.E. 2d 129. After the district court's decision in this case, the Georgia Commissioner of Banking and Finance, on remand from the Georgia Supreme Court, ordered C&S to take various steps to reduce its connections with and involvement in the affairs of all of its five-percent banks (J.S. App. 75a–87a).[11]

[11] That order provided, among other things, that C&S must terminate supervision of all five-percent banks beyond that which is available to any other bank wishing to enter a correspondent relationship; that no C&S officer or director may serve as a director or officer of a five-percent bank; that cer-

Viewing as only "technical" C&S's violations of the state banking laws, the district court considered those violations irrelevant to its assessment of the anticompetitive nature of the relationship between C&S and the five-percent banks (J.S. App. 66a–68a). In addition, after the order had been issued by the Georgia Commissioner of Banking and Finance, the district court amended its opinion nunc pro tunc to state that the order had no effect on the court's decision (J.S. App. 70a–72a).

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

This case involves the applicability of Section 1 of the Sherman Act to the relationships between C&S, the largest banking organization in the Atlanta area, and six smaller banks operating there. Under that relationship, those banks, in which C&S could legally own no more than a five-percent stock interest, are operated as though they are branches of C&S. The case also involves the applicability of Section 7 of the Clayton Act to the proposed acquisition of five of those banks by C&S.

1. Appellees argue that the banks should be viewed as if they are parent and subsidiaries in a single economic entity, and that the acquisitions would be little tain C&S officers and directors who acquired stock in the five-percent banks under certain conditions must divest that stock; that C&S Holding must divest its stock in the five-percent banks if that stock, together with stock held by C&S National shareholders in the five-percent bank, exceeds five-percent of the stock of the latter bank; and that signs, advertising and similar written materials disseminated by a five-percent bank must distinguish that bank from C&S, if the C&S logo is used.

more than a formal reorganization of that situation, which would eliminate no competition. We contend that the de facto branch arrangements, which comprehend the joint determination of the smaller banks' competitive policies, are themselves illegal combinations or agreements which restrain competition between C&S and the five-percent banks in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act and which should therefore be declared invalid and enjoined. We also contend that the permanent, formal union of these banks by acquisition would violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act because, judged by traditional structural criteria, the acquisitions would give C&S control of an undue percentage share of concentrated markets and would significantly increase concentration in those markets, and because the previous elimination of competition among the banks in violation of the Sherman Act cannot constitute a defense under Section 7 of the Clayton Act.

2. In dismissing the Sherman Act claims on the ground that no agreements in restraint of trade had been proved, the court failed to give effect to this Court's decisions, such as United States v. Container Corp. of America, 393 U.S. 333, and United States v. Singer Mfg. Co., 374 U.S. 174, respecting the elements of agreement under the Sherman Act. The court also erroneously relied on Whitney Nat'l Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., supra, and misapprehended the structure and purpose of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 133, as amended, 12 U.S.C. 1841, et seq., in ruling, alternatively, that that Act gave the Federal Reserve Board "exclusive primary jurisdiction" to consider the Sherman Act claims in this case.

3. Appellees claim that the five-percent banks, although independent entities, should be viewed as its branches, for purposes of Section 7, because they have voluntarily become its subsidiaries de facto. Appellees concede that, unlike a subsidiary or de jure branch bank, it is possible that the five-percent defendant banks would disengage from the C&S System (as Stone Mountain did) and become independent competitive factors. In defending the acquisitions they contend that that possibility is unlikely to occur because of the close existing relationships and elaborate linkages between C&S and the five-percent banks. In short, their defense to the Clayton Act claim is based upon the same arrangements challenged as violating Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

Such a defense is without merit. The purposes of both the Sherman Act and the Clayton Act would be disserved if firms in a market knew that if their anticompetitive agreements with other firms succeeded in eliminating competition they would then be able, regardless of their market shares, to merge and transmute their cartel into a permanent union. Accordingly, by reasoning that the acquisitions could not substantially lessen competition because the parties had already voluntarily eliminated it in their on-going business relations, the district court improperly rejected well-established principles governing the legality, under Section 7, of acquisitions or mergers involving competitive entities in the same market. While this Court has indicated that a prima facie case based on market structure data may in some circumstances be rebutted by evidence of pro-competitive market facts or developments (see United States v. Marine Bancorp., No. 73–38, decided June 26, 1974, slip op. 27–28; United States v. General Dynamics Corp., 415 U.S. 486, 497–498), here the court erroneously relied upon the absence of competitive behavior resulting from a prior violation of Section 1 to overcome the case made by the government based on market shares.

ARGUMENT

I

THE ARRANGEMENT BETWEEN C&S AND THE LEGALLY-INDEPENDENT FIVE-PERCENT BANKS, WHEREBY THEY OPERATED AS "DE FACTO" BRANCHES OF C&S, VIOLATES SECTION 1 OF THE SHERMAN ACT

A. THE ARRANGEMENT IS AN AGREEMENT UNDER SECTION 1 OF THE SHERMAN ACT

The record, appellees' own submissions before the FDIC and in the district court, and the district court's findings, all establish that C&S and the five-percent defendant banks are operating pursuant to agreements or understandings that violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act.

1. The five-percent banks are and must be treated as independent competitive entities

It is undisputed that each five-percent defendant bank (including Tucker Bank) is a legally and factually independent decision-making entity, subject to control only by, and in the interests of, all of its own shareholders. C&S owns only a five-percent stock interest in these banks and, under Georgia law, cannot directly or indirectly own or control a greater percentage. C&S therefore lacks the power legally to require the banks to conform their competitive behavior to its wishes or to prevent the banks from competing in a manner that might be inconsistent with C&S's interest.

Unlike the situation in United States v. Trans Texas Bancorp., supra (discussed at pp. 54–55, infra), shareholders common to C&S and the five-percent defendant banks did not have the power to control the competitive behavior both of C&S and any of the five-percent defendant banks, either through majority stock holdings or its equivalent. The stock of the five-percent defendant banks is owned by "a large number of shareholders * * * and no single shareholder owns a significant number of the shares of any such bank" (J.S. App. 43a). These shareholders have no legal or other obligation to act as agents of C&S in setting the policies of their banks.[12]

C&S has always denied having the power to control the competitive behavior of the five-percent defendant banks, a position that is consistent with the banks' legal status as independent competitive entities. Thus, C&S National's president advised the Federal Reserve Board's staff in 1968 that C&S influenced, but did not, and indeed could not, control the five-percent defendant banks, which were always free to pursue their own interests.[13]

[12] Substantial amounts of the stock of each five-percent bank are held by persons who are presently officers or employees of C&S or other banks in the C&S System, spouses of such persons, or customers of banks in the C&S System (J.S. App. 43a–44a). None of such connections with C&S is permanent and there is no way of knowing how long they will continue. C&S cannot insure, and the district court should not have assumed, their indefinite existence.

The record shows that each five-percent defendant bank has an independent board of directors whose members are not officers, employees or directors of C&S or of other banks (see Plaintiff's Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, ¶ 1.23, p. 10; Defendants' Objections to Plaintiff's Proposed Findings of Fact, p. 11). The directors and chief officers who testified on the subject all denied that C&S can or does dictate policies or practices to them, or control their actions.[14] They say they follow C&S's advice only when they believe it is in the best interest of their banks[15]—which, as the district court found (J.S. App. 24a), is in the great majority of instances [13] In the investigation conducted by the Federal Reserve Board's staff (described more fully at pp. 48–49, infra), Mills B. Lane, Jr., President of C&S National, stated that "[t]he five percent investment followed the identical philosophy of my father of influencing by not controlling the correspondent bank relationship" and that "I look on the use of the name Citizens and Southern [by the five-percent banks] as identity with the strong institution, not with control * * *" (GX 177, pp. 8–11; App. E–224—E–227). When asked what assurance C&S had that a five-percent bank using the C&S name would not engage in activities that would reflect adversely on the name, Lane acknowledged that "[t]hat is the gamble we have taken. The only misgiving I ever had about our lack of control is the use of this name" (id. at 15; emphasis supplied).

(see pp. 9–12, supra). As stated by the regional administrator of national banks, who testified as a defense witness, while the five-percent defendant banks "are under the aegis of the C&S National; yes, I must say that they are independent organizations" (App. 533).

These "independent organizations" nevertheless operate as C&S's branches—as though they are merely parts of a single economic enterprise—as appellees have consistently asserted and as the district court found (J.S. App. 42a–55a). The "relationship" between C&S and each of the five-percent defendant banks is based on their mutual agreement or understanding that the latter banks will "voluntarily" submit to C&S's direction and behave in all significant respects as if they are branches of C&S. The district court found this arrangement so pervasive—extending even to supervision of the banks by C&S's own branch department—that it concluded that the five-percent defendant banks were not significant independent competitive entities [16] (J.S. App. 66a). Although the five-percent defendant banks have the legal capacity and power to act as independent, competing entities, the district court found that, as a consequence of their relationship with C&S, "there is not presently existing substantial competition between the five-percent defendant banks and C&S National * * * " (J.S. App. 66a).

[16] A C&S executive formerly in charge of branch supervision (App. 386), in stating his view of the "relationship" between C&S and the five-percent defendant banks C&S proposes to acquire, testified that "[t]here's no difference than between our relationship with the [C&S] branches and the five percenters because what we had to offer was solicited, invited, wanted, received, and our recommendations were readily accepted" (App. 397–398).

Implicit in the district court's acceptance of appellees' claim that the five-percent banks should be treated, for Sherman Act purposes, as if they were de facto branches of C&S, is the assumption that the separate and independent corporate identities of C&S and those banks should be disregarded and that they should all be treated as integral parts of a single business entity. Although courts sometimes "pierce the corporate veil" by ignoring formal distinctions between a corporation and its shareholders, (e.g., between a parent corporation and its wholly-owned subsidiary), that is almost invariably done in order to impose liability on entities other than the corporation that took challenged action. It is quite another matter, however, to ignore the separate corporate identities of independent firms and permit them to evade a liability on the claim that they are a single entity. See generally Berle, The Theory of Enterprise Entity, 47 Colum. L. Rev. 343 (1947).[17]

[17] The results in cases raising the question whether corporate form should be disregarded in order to treat separate organizations as a single entity vary according to the context in which the question is raised. Many involve claims against a parent corporation by creditors of a subsidiary or by persons tortiously injured by it. The issue in such cases is whether the corporate form insulates the parent from its subsidiary's alleged liability. See, e.g., Anderson v. Abbott, 321 U.S. 349, 361–363; Berkey v. Third Ave. Ry., 244 N.Y. 84, 155 N.E. 58. Other cases involve priority relationships in corporate reorganizations between stockholders of the parent-controlled subsidiary. E.g., Taylor v. Standard Gas & Elec. Co., 306 U.S. 307, 322. See also Pepper v. Litton, 308 U.S. 295, 306–312; Consolidated Rock Prods. Co. v. Du Bois, 312 U.S. 510, 522–524. Still others involve the implementation of statutory policies. For example, separate corporate form may be disregarded for purposes of the labor laws if the facts show that several companies represented themselves to be one, the economic enterprise is in fact operated as a single entity, the separate corporate forms are simply paper arrangements, and other factors justify unitary treatment. See, e.g., National Labor Relations Board v. Deena Artware, Inc., 361 U.S. 398, 402–404. The contrary is true here. See also Stevens, Corporations §§ 17, 18 (2d ed. 1949); Douglas & Shanks, Insulation from Liability through Subsidiary Corporations, 39 Yale L.J. 193 (1929). The issue frequently turns on whether the subsidiary is the "mere instrumentality" of its parent. This will depend on factors defining the parent's degree of control over the subsidiary, as enumerated in Steven v. Roscoe Turner Aeronautical Corp., 324 F. 2d 157, 160–161 (C.A. 7), quoting Powell, Parent and Subsidiary Corporations 94 (1931):

"(a) The parent corporation owns all or most of the capital stock of the subsidiary.

"(b) The parent and subsidiary corporations have common directors or officers.

"(c) The parent corporation finances the subsidiary.

"(d) The parent corporation subscribes to all the capital stock of the subsidiary or otherwise causes its incorporation.

"(e) The subsidiary has grossly inadequate capital.

"(f) The parent corporation pays the salaries and other expenses or losses of the subsidiary.

"(g) The subsidiary has substantially no business except with the parent corporation or no assets except those conveyed to it by the parent corporation.

"(h) In the papers of the parent corporation or in the statements of its officers, the subsidiary is described as a department or division of the parent corporation, or its business or financial responsibility is referred to as the parent corporation's own.

"(i) The parent corporation uses the property of the subsidiary as its own.

"(j) the directors or executives of the subsidiary do not act independently in the interest of the subsidiary but take their orders from the parent corporation in the latter's interest.

a means of carrying out his business purposes, does not have the choice of disregarding the corporate entity in order to avoid the obligations which the statute lays upon it for the protection of the public." Schenley Distillers Corp. v. United States, 326 U.S. 432, 437. The statutes involved here are aimed at preserving competition, and "[t]he corporate interrelationships of the conspirators * * * are not determinative of the applicability of the Sherman Act." United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 332 U.S. 218, 227. In determining whether, for purposes of that Act, corporations are independent entities or mere corporate shells or divisions of the same entity, this Court has looked to the fundamental policies being vindicated as well as the indicia of corporate independence. See, e.g., Northern Secs. Co. v. United States, 193 U.S. 197, 325–328, 345–347, 355–359, 362–363; United States v. Yellow Cab Co., supra, 332 U.S. at 227–228; Kiefer-Stewart Co. v. Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., 340 U.S. 211, 215; Timken Roller Bearing Co. v. United States, 341 U.S. 593, 598; Perma Life Mufflers, Inc. v. International Parts Corp., 392 U.S. 134, 141–142. Under that approach, and on the record in this case, the five-percent banks are independent entities, any one of which, together with C&S, constituted the plurality of persons necessary to establish a Sherman Act "agreement." See, e.g., Nelson Radio & Supply Co. v. Motorola, Inc., 200 F. 2d 911, 914 (C.A. 5).

In any event, the record here does not justify treating appellees as a single economic entity. Thus, appellees concede that each of the five-percent banks is a separately-chartered and independent entity and that their directors owe fiduciary obligations to their respective shareholders and not to C&S. C&S denies that it has power to elect their directors or control their management at all; those banks, it claims, follow its suggestions only "voluntarily." It has no common officer with any of them. C&S has never represented that it is legally liable on the obligations of those banks, and it would no doubt be the first to protest if a creditor of one of the five-percent banks sought to hold C&S liable for the debt of its "de facto" subsidiary.

The total assets of the five-percent banks are not shown in C&S's balance sheet as an asset of C&S or treated as part of C&S's bank reserves, as would be done with subsidiaries. State and federal bank regulatory agencies do not view those assets as the property of C&S.[18] If one of those banks failed, C&S would presumably be subject to liability as a shareholder only to the extent of its five-percent interest. Cf. And- crson v. Abbott, 321 U.S. 349, 368–369. Finally, the claim that the banks are de facto subsidiaries of C&S conflicts directly with the provisions and policy of Georgia law as authoritatively interpreted by the Georgia courts (see Statement, supra, p. 20.).

[18] Sound accounting practice, which the Federal Reserve Board and other bank regulatory agencies follow, ordinarily requires that all wholly-owned subsidiaries should be included in consolidated financial statements, but that "all companies in which ownership is below 50% should, ordinarily, be excluded." Wixon, Kell, Bedford, Accountants Handbooks § 23.3 (5th ed. 1970). The Securities and Exchange Commission permits bank holding companies and their direct and indirect subsidiaries to file consolidated statements (17 C.F.R. 210.4–07), but prohibits consolidation of "any subsidiary which is not majority owned" (i.e., whose parent owns less than 50 percent of outstanding stock). 17 C.F.R. 210.1–02(l), 210.4–02(a)(1). The Internal Revenue Code, which permits affiliated groups of corporations to file consolidated returns (26 U.S.C. 1501), requires 80 percent ownership. 26 U.S.C. 1504.

The sole basis for C&S's claim that the banks are its "de facto" branches is that they have submitted to its direction and, with its agreement, hold themselves out and are operated as part of its system. But these are the very ingredients of the offense with which appellees are charged. Thus, the combination of factors that might, for some purposes, justify disregarding the separate corporate identities of the five-percent banks and the C&S System are not present here.

2. The challenged arrangement constitutes an agreement to eliminate price and service competition between C&S and the five-percent banks

In dismissing the Sherman Act claims on the merits, the district court did not disagree that the five-percent defendant banks are legally independent entities. It found that C&S routinely furnishes them information and advice regarding past, present and future competitive policies, methods of operation, and such specific matters as rates, hours of operation, and types of loans to be discouraged (J.S. App. 24a); that the five-percent defendant banks generally followed C&S's "advice and suggestions" (ibid.); and that the overall relationship between C&S and the five percent defendant banks, which was designed to and did combine these independent entities into a single economic enterprise, has eliminated competition between C&S and each of them (id. at 66a).

Notwithstanding these findings, the district court held that C&S's furnishing of pricing information to the five-percent defendant banks—which they generally followed—"do[es] not amount to collusive price fixing" (id. at 24a). According to the court, it was not "a result of any tacit or explicit combinations * * *" (id. at 29a), so that these practices did not per se violate the Sherman Act and did not unreasonably restrain trade because they do not adversely affect customers or competitors (id. at 27a). In so ruling, however, the district court misapplied this Court's decisions establishing standards for proof of an agreement under the Sherman Act.[19]

The entire relationship and course of conduct between C&S and the five-percent defendant banks reflects in each case a mutual understanding that the latter banks would act jointly and interdependently with C&S as its branches. There is no other explanation for: their acquiescence in a relationship that permitted an advisory C&S director to sit with their boards of directors; C&S's branch department's supervision of them and review of their goals, objectives and performance (id. at 52a–53a); their successful effort to identify themselves to the public through C&S's name and logo as merely interchangeable parts of the C&S System; C&S's supplying them with the same guides, manuals, and pricing information it supplies to its de jure branches; or their adoption of uniform service charges in 1970 (see p. 11, supra, n. 2). The arrangement eliminated, or precluded the development of, any substantial competition among the appellee banks (J.S. App. 66a), and constituted a system of price fixing designed to achieve uniformity among them.

Thus, this case involves not merely the exchange of past price information which affects current pricing practices, as in United States v. Container Corp. of America, supra.[20] It shows a mutual understanding to fix actual current prices, which constitutes a classic per se offense. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U.S. 150, 221–226, n. 59; United States v. Parke, Davis & Co., 362 U.S. 29, 47.

Two independent business entities cannot achieve a relationship by which one voluntarily undertakes to operate as a "branch" of the other, and jointly to determine prices, service and general business policy, without an agreement or understanding between them to do so. If C&S arranged voluntarily to operate its Atlanta banks as "de facto" branches of its largest competitor (Trust Company of Georgia), to use the name, logo, and business methods and follow the advice of Trust Company, and if Trust Company actively furthered that plan by supervising the C&S banks and providing price information and advice, C&S and Trust Company would indubitably have entered into an agreement or understanding that violates Section 1.

[20] In Container the Court held that a reciprocal arrangement among competitors to exchange information, albeit infrequently and irregularly, about past price quotations to specific customers, constituted a combination or conspiracy in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, because it "chill[ed] the vigor of price competition" (393 U.S. at 337), even though the information was often otherwise available. Id. at 335. In the present case, price competition was not just chilled, it was eliminated.

The present arrangement between C&S and the independent five-percent banks accomplished the same anti-competitive objective and equally violates Section 1. Although there is no formal agreement contractually committing the appellees to the course of operation they have pursued, their informal or tacit agreement, as evidenced by their business behavior, is sufficient proof of the offense. See Interstate Circuit, Inc. v. United States, 306 U.S. 208, 227; United States v. Masonite Corp., 316 U.S. 265, 275–276; United States v. Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 321 U.S. 707, 723; United States v. General Motors Corp., 384 U.S. 127, 142–143.

The district court appears to have been influenced by the "voluntariness" of the arrangements, for it concluded that C&S's practice of providing price information to the five-percent defendant banks merely furnished an "expert appraisal" of the market to which the recipient "would naturally be expected to pay great attention" (J.S. App. 24a), and that its use resulted from the "natural deference" of the recipient rather than from an express or tacit agreement (id. at 29a).

Insofar as the district court concluded that the challenged relationships do not offend Section 1 because they were voluntarily entered into and maintained, it committed clear legal error. "It is of no consequence, for purposes of determining whether there has been a combination or conspiracy under § 1 of the Sherman Act, that each party acted in its own lawful interest. Nor is it of consequence for this purpose whether * * * [the objects of the collaborative action] are lawful or economically desirable." United States v. General Motors Corp., supra, 384 U.S. at 142. Joint restraints of trade are normally motivated by self-interest, because they can be highly profitable if successful.

All understood, moreover, that the de facto branch arrangements are voluntary, so that "[t]here was of course freedom to withdraw from [them] * * *," as in United States v. Container Corp. of America, supra, 393 U.S. at 335, and as is true in any case in which an agreement short of an enforceable contract is sufficient to carry out a common program. In fact, the five-percent bank at Stone Mountain did withdraw from the arrangement (see pp. 11–12, supra).

As in Container, General Motors, and other cases (see p. 33, supra, n. 19), the necessary agreement or combination inheres in, and may be inferred from, the appellees' course of conduct. The district court's ruling that their conduct is not the result of a tacit agreement or combination is thus contrary to the decisions of this Court.

B. THE DE FACTO BRANCH ARRANGEMENT CHALLENGED HERE IS MATERIALLY DIFFERENT FROM AN ORDINARY CORRESPONDENT BANK RELATIONSHIP

As we have noted (see pp. 17–18, supra), in discussing the Sherman Act claim (but not the Clayton Act claim), the district court characterized the difference between a correspondent relationship and the relationships or arrangements at issue here as "merely one of degree" with no significant variance between them (J.S. App. 28a). Since the government has "condoned" correspondent relationships, the district court reasoned, the incidents of that relationship cannot violate the Sherman Act (id. at 28a–29a). The district court's conclusion that the challenged de facto branch arrangements do not violate the Sherman Act is based, however, on an apparent misconception of the nature of a correspondent relationship.

There is in fact little similarity between the ordinary correspondent bank relationship and the de facto branch relationship involved here. A correspondent relationship is essentially a vertical relationship between banks in which a large bank furnishes services to a smaller bank,[21] and the smaller bank agrees either to maintain a "correspondent balance" with the larger bank or to pay it an agreed fee (App. 51–72, 99–113, 136–141; GX 193; App. E–251—E–267; GX 194; App. E–268). The correspondent services might include a [21] Correspondent services may include clearing checks and transit items, loan participations, reports on money market developments, security safekeeping, international transactions, credit information, and many other matters. See generally Knight, Correspondent Banking, Pt. I; Balances & Services, Monthly Review of The Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City (November 1970), p. 3; Correspondent Relations: A Survey of Banker Opinion, Subcommittee on Domestic Finance of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, 88th Cong., 2d Sess.; see also Austin and Solomon, A New Antitrust Problem: Vertical Integration in Correspondent Banking, 122 U. Pa. L. Rev. 366, 367–371 (1974).

number of the kinds of services made available by C&S to the five-percent banks.[22]

But an ordinary correspondent bank would not subject itself to C&S's direction, would not regularly interchange officers and employees with C&S, would not use the C&S name or hold itself out as part of the C&S System, and would not be so linked with C&S as to act as though it were in fact a branch belonging to C&S. Indeed, C&S does not have the kind of relationship it has with the five-percent banks with any of the independent banks with which it has a "correspondent" relationship (App. 438–440). In short, it is simply not an aspect of a "normal" correspondent relationship for the smaller purchasing bank to relinquish its independence by agreement with its larger supplier and to operate, as the appellee banks did in this case, as if both banks comprised a single banking organization.

C. C&S'S ROLE IN ORGANIZING THE FIVE-PERCENT BANKS DOES NOT MAKE THE ARRANGEMENT LAWFUL

The district court noted that the practices complained of existed from the time each bank except Tucker began operating (a time when C&S could not branch de novo into their localities) and that in United States v. Marine Bancorp., No. 73–38, decided June 26, 1974, the government had encouraged the sponsorship of new banks as part of a procedure for geographic [22] As C&S's former branch supervisor testified with respect to the relationship between C&S and the five-percent defendant banks, "there is a great deal of interdependence to a great degree not present in a correspondent bank [relationship]" (App. 415–416).

market expansion (J.S. App. 22a–23a, 29a). The court thus indicated that it held the challenged arrangements lawful at least in part because C&S assisted the organization of the five-percent defendant banks (except Tucker), and, from their inception, they have voluntarily operated as C&S's branches. The district court's reasoning is erroneous.[23]

From their inception the five-percent defendant banks were legally-independent business entities which C&S did not have the power to control, and the expectations of the parties involved in the banks' creation are legally immaterial to the question whether the de facto branching arrangements offend the Sherman Act.[24]

[23] There is no evidence in the record that C&S or the five-percent banks relied upon business review procedures or other advice from the government concerning the legality of their arrangements. Although there is some suggestion in the district court's opinion that the government was aware of the arrangements at the time the Federal Reserve Board investigated them in 1968 (J.S. App. 27a), the government's failure to challenge them at that time creates no estoppel. Cf. United States v. New Orleans Chapter, Assoc'd Gen'l Contractors, 382 U.S. 17, reversing per curiam 238 F. Supp. 273 (E.D.La.); Times-Picayune Publishing Co. v. United States, 345 U.S. 594, 623, 624; United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., supra, 310 U.S. at 225–228. We have set forth in the Jurisdictional Statement (pp. 29–32) the reasons why there is no inconsistency between the government's position in this case and its position in Marine Bancorp.

[24] In any event, C&S's branch arrangement with Tucker Bank could not be justified as valid under Section 1 because of C&S's participation in the organization of Tucker Bank. Tucker was organized without C&S's assistance long before it agreed in 1965 to operate as C&S's de facto branch, but in 1970 C&S stressed the non-competitive relationship that had developed between them in unsuccessfully seeking the FDIC's approval

Although appellees contended that (except for Tucker Bank) C&S was so intimately involved in assisting the organization of the five-percent defendant banks that their organization and operation should be treated as internal expansion by C&S, the district court declined to decide who initiated the organization of the banks, i.e., "[w]hether the organization of these banks was the 'brain child' of C&S National, or of local leaders * * *" (J.S. App. 10a). It found only that C&S's assistance was a result of its inability to expand directly into the localities involved, and of its "hope that [such assistance or participation] * * * would be the forerunner of much larger interests in the future" (id. at 11a). But the legality of the voluntary decision of the five-percent defendant banks to act as C&S's branches and C&S's decision to treat them as such does not depend upon whether the initial impetus for the organization of the banks came from C&S or from local businessmen, or whether C&S's assistance was motivated by a desire to establish branches indirectly where state law prohibited it from branching directly.

of its acquisition of Tucker Bank. Yet the district court held C&S's relationships with Tucker Bank legal. Under the district court's standard, then, an agreement between separate and independent firms that they will not compete with each other may be lawful. (This would be contrary to Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U.S. 131, 135–136, where this Court held illegal per se a joint arrangement whereby two separate and independent newspapers eliminated all significant commercial competition between themselves but continued separate editorial competition.) Under the district court's rationale, the resulting lack of competition between such separate firms could then be asserted as a defense to an amalgamation of the firms that would otherwise violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act.

To assist in the organization of a new bank to be operated as a bona fide independent institution, in the hope of acquiring it in the future, is materially different from assisting in the organization of a new bank, as was done here, that is to be operated as a branch office of its sponsor despite its legal and factual independence.

Organizers of new banks often look to existing banks for organizational assistance, and existing banks may be willing to provide such assistance for a number of valid business reasons. New banks usually require substantial financial and technical assistance in order to become established (App. 76–78, 115–116; see App. 581–582),[25] and it is most readily available from existing banks. Such assistance includes helping in preparing the charter application, finding a chief executive officer, acquiring and training personnel, locating a site, advertising and promoting the venture, helping with pension and profit sharing plans, participating in loans with the new bank, and providing general counseling (App. 77–83, 115–116).

A large bank's usual motive for such organizational assistance is to obtain the new bank's correspondent business, since the sponsoring or assisting bank has a substantial advantage in this respect (App. 77–78, 116). A bank may also sponsor a new bank in the hope of acquiring it at a later time as a means of entering a new market (App. 121–122, 125–126; GX 106, 106A; App. E–113—E–120). Thus, sponsoring or assisting a new bank may be lawful and pro-competitive, provided that the new bank is operated as a bona fide independent institution in conformity with its legal status and does not determine its competitive conduct jointly with its sponsor or other competitors.

In this case, however, these conditions were not met. Instead, the five-percent defendant banks whose organization C&S assisted, as well as Tucker Bank, voluntarily became C&S's vassals, pursuant to agreements or understandings between them. Legally-independent banks which otherwise would have been competitively independent of C&S have operated as though they are part of a single economic enterprise—the C&S System. Whether termed "de facto branching," "voluntary control," or "elaborate and effective, although informal, linkages" (Mo. to Aff. 10), these arrangements eliminate horizontal competition between C&S and the five-percent banks and thus constitute combinations or agreements proscribed by Section 1. See Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U.S. 131, 135–136.

Moreover, the application of the Sherman Act to banking relationships cannot feasibly depend upon which of several possible motives led an existing bank to sponsor a new bank; the problems of proof and the ambiguities inherent in such a standard would create great uncertainty for the banking community, the government and the courts. Rather, the standard must be the same as it is for firms in other industries: legally-independent business entities may not agree, tacitly or otherwise, to forego competing with each other. E.g., Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, supra. Under that standard, the agreements between

C&S and the five-percent defendant banks to operate substantially as a single economic enterprise are unlawful.[26]

D. C&S'S PURPOSE OF AVOIDING THE LIMITATIONS OF STATE LAW DOES NOT JUSTIFY ITS ARRANGEMENTS WITH THE FIVE-PERCENT BANKS

Appellees apparently contend that the agreements between C&S and the five-percent banks do not violate Section 1 of the Sherman Act because, but for the restrictions of Georgia law, the five-percent defendant banks (other than Tucker Bank) would have been [26] Where one bank assists in the organization of a new bank, it is to be expected that the "sponsoring" bank may initially play a relatively significant role in determining the new bank's retail banking practices. As the new bank becomes established, however, it is also expected to make its own competitive decisions. Thus, the testimony of a former Georgia Superintendent of Banking indicates that it is expected that a new bank will rely on its usually larger correspondent bank for advice in its early stages, but that the new bank or its directors should not make it "a habit of relying on someone else to make the decisions for you continuously. I think you should acquaint yourself as far as possible with banking transactions and matters and act upon your own judgment" (App. 585–586; see also GX 216, pp. 13–15; App. E–282—E–284). Similarly, an official of Trust Company, a competitor of C&S in Atlanta which has sponsored new banks (App. 76–78), testified that "in the beginning * * * [Trust Company is] a little closer in contact [with the new bank] because of the day-to-day problems. Everything is new and different, they get hit with an awful lot at one time. So, the older they are and more experienced they have had, really, probably the less contact you would have with them in that respect" (App. 81–82). The assistance a sponsoring bank offers a fledgling bank in establishing sound banking practices is, of course, not involved in this case. The "new" banks here had been in operation for from two to twelve years at the time of suit and are substantial institutions with assets of from $5 million to $22 million (Tucker Bank has been in existence for more than 50 years and its assets exceed $26 million).

established as C&S branches rather than as legally-independent entities. As authoritatively construed by the Georgia Supreme Court, however, Georgia law required that the five-percent banks be legally-independent institutions separate from C&S, and prohibited appellees' circumvention of this requirement through the de facto branch arrangements challenged here (see p. 20, supra). Thus, the Georgia Supreme Court's conclusion that C&S was indirectly controlling more than five percent of the banks' stock in violation of state law was based in part on the fact that C&S was "treating such banks as [its] branch banks * * *." Citizens & So. Nat'l Bank v. Independent Bankers Ass'n of Ga., Inc., supra, 202 S.E. 2d at 80.

Conduct that violates the Sherman Act cannot be justified on the claim that the purpose of the challenged agreement or combination was to try, albeit unsuccessfully, to avoid the limitations of state law.

II

THE BANK HOLDING COMPANY ACT DOES NOT GIVE THE FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD EXCLUSIVE PRIMARY JURISDICTION OVER THE CONDUCT CHALLENGED IN THE SHERMAN ACT CLAIM

The district court erred in concluding that the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 133, as amended, 12 U.S.C. 1841, et seq., vests in the Federal Reserve Board "exclusive primary jurisdiction" over the conduct challenged in the Sherman Act count of the complaint (J.S. App. 26a). The Bank Holding Company Act gives the Federal Reserve Board no authority, express or implied, to immunize that conduct from the operation of the antitrust laws. Intended to regulate the formation and external expansion of bank holding companies, the Act is concerned with the structure of banking markets and entry by banks into non-banking activities, but not with the current competitive behavior of banks in their banking activities.[27]

[27] As the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency noted in its report on the bill substantially enacted as the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (S. Rep. No. 1095, 84th Cong., 1st Sess., p. 2):

"Chairman Martin [of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System] noted that the principal problems in the bank holding company field arise from two circumstances: (1) The unrestricted ability of a bank holding company group to add to the number of its banking units, making possible the concentration of commercial bank facilities in a particular area under a single control and management; and (2) The combination under single control of both banking and nonbanking enterprises, permitting departure from the principle that banking institutions should not engage in business wholly unrelated to banking. Such a combination involves the lending of depositors' money, whereas other types of business enterprise, not connected with banking, do not involve this element of trusteeship. Your committee is of the opinion that this bill [S. 2577, 84th Cong., 1st Sess.] will enable the Federal Government to cope more adequately with both of these problems. Like H.R. 6227 [84th Cong., 1st Sess.], the bank holding bill passed by the House of Representatives, this bill empowers a regulatory agency to pass upon the application of a bank holding company for the acquisition of a substantial number of voting shares in one or more additional banks. The bill also follows the principle laid down in H.R. 6227 that bank holding companies must divest themselves, within a specified period, of nonbanking assets not closely related to banking activities. Thus, under the bill, the growth of bank holding companies in the banking field would be regulated but not prohibited. However, bank holding companies would no longer be authorized to manage or control nonbanking assets unrelated to the banking business."

The Act provides that both the formation of bank holding companies and certain specified external expansion by such holding companies or their subsidiaries must be approved by the Federal Reserve Board. 12 U.S.C. 1842. As enacted in 1956, the Act made the legality of an unapproved relationship between a bank holding company and an existing bank depend solely upon whether the holding company had "control" over the bank. 12 U.S.C. 1841(a)(1). Section 2(a) of the Act, 70 Stat. 133, defined control as direct or indirect power to vote 25 percent or more of the bank's stock, or the control, directly or indirectly, of election of a majority of the bank's directors. See 12 U.S.C. 1841(a)(2)(A), (B). As amended in 1970, the Act also provides that a company has "control" over a bank if it directly or indirectly exercises a controlling influence over the management or policies of the bank. 84 Stat. 1761, 12 U.S.C. 1841(a)(2)(C).[28]

The Act provides for Board action only if there is an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation" or an issue of "control"; no other Board review is provided, even for conduct that may violate the Sherman Act. For example, the Act does not authorize the Board to review price fixing, boycotts, or allocations of customers or territories, engaged in by banks or bank holding companies, or any other anticompetitive activity that might violate the antitrust laws.[29]

---

[28] A bank holding company "subsidiary" is defined by the same three criteria. 12 U.S.C. 1841(d)(1)-(3).

[29] The Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970 (84 Stat. 1766), added a prohibition of certain tying arrange-

Furthermore, the Act confers immunity from the antitrust laws only in one limited, carefully-defined circumstance. If an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction" is approved by the Board pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 1842 and is not challenged in a suit filed by the United States within 30 days, that approved transaction may not thereafter be attacked in any judicial proceeding on the ground that it "alone and of itself" violates any antitrust laws, except Section 2 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. 2, concerning monopolies. 12 U.S.C. 1849(b). In all other cases Section 11(a) of the Act, 12 U.S.C. 1849(a), expressly preserves antitrust remedies:

> Nothing herein contained shall be interpreted or construed as approving any act, action, or conduct which is or has been or may be in violation of existing law, nor shall anything herein contained constitute a defense to any action, suit, or proceeding pending or hereafter instituted on account of any prohibited antitrust or monopolistic act, action, or conduct * * *.

The conduct challenged by the government's Sherman Act claim does not constitute an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction" of the kind described in 12 U.S.C. 1842(a) under any reasonable ments by banks or bank holding companies. 12 U.S.C. 1971, et seq. While the Amendments authorize the Federal Reserve Board to create exceptions—consistent with the purpose of the statute—to these prohibitions, 12 U.S.C. 1972, they also make clear that the anti-tying provisions do not affect actions under other federal laws or state laws. 12 U.S.C. 1978.

definition of those terms.[30] Accordingly, even if the Board of Governors had authorized the challenged conduct, the antitrust immunity provision in 12 U.S.C. 1849(b) would be inapplicable. In fact, of course, the Board has not done so and has never asserted power to do so.

In 1968, the Board's staff investigated the relationship between C&S and the five-percent banks and determined that it did not violate the Act, because, while the Board had not approved it, the relation-[30] The complaint is directed, not at C&S's initial "acquisition" of a five-percent stock interest in the five-percent banks, but rather at their respective activities since then, including their continuing agreement and understanding to act noncompetitively, as if the five-percent banks were legally-controlled branches of C&S. This course of conduct does not constitute a "merger" or "consolidation" in any sense. Nor does it constitute an "acquisition." If C&S had "acquired" the other banks it would have gained legal control of them. See United States v. Philadelphia Nat'l Bank, 374 U.S. 321, 332, n. 7, 336, n. 13. Yet, C&S has repeatedly disavowed having control of those banks (see, e.g., p. 26, supra, n. 13).

Because the challenged arrangements do not constitute an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction" within the meaning of Section 1842(a), there is also no merit to appellees' arguments, not reached by the district court, (1) that the three five-percent relationships antedating the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 (Tucker, Sandy Springs and Chamblee) are protected by the "grandfather" provision conclusively presuming that an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation" of the kind described in 12 U.S.C. 1842(a) consummated prior to July 1, 1966, did not violate the antitrust laws (12 U.S.C. 1849(d)), and (2) that the Sherman Act is inapplicable to anticompetitive conduct of bank holding companies after that date because, under 12 U.S.C. 1849(e), a court having before it a government antitrust action with respect to an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction" of the kind described in 12 U.S.C. 1842(a) is required to apply the substantive rule of law set forth in Section 1842.

ship did not involve the elements of "control" then specified in the Act (see p. 46, supra). The Board took no formal action on this matter, however;[31] moreover, as previously shown, even if it had approved the relationship, that action would not have conferred antitrust immunity.

The district court's ruling that the Bank Holding Company Act precludes an antitrust court from entertaining the government's Sherman Act claim not only ignores the Holding Company Act's express language to the contrary, it also fails to heed this Court's often repeated admonition that repeal of the antitrust laws by implication is not favored. See, e.g., United States v. Philadelphia Nat'l Bank, 374 U.S. 321, 350–351; United States v. Borden Co., 308 U.S. 188, 198.

When faced with regulatory schemes even broader and more intrusive into company affairs than the Bank Holding Company Act, this Court has refused to hold that they were so pervasive as to preclude entirely the application of the antitrust laws to the regulated firms.[32] Rather, the Court has carefully examined the specific conduct in question in order to determine whether subjecting that conduct to antitrust liability would create a basic and irreconcilable conflict with the authority of the regulatory agency. Such a conflict will justify finding a limited repeal of the antitrust laws only where three factors are present: (1) the precise conduct challenged in the antitrust action must be subject to the regulatory agency's remedial powers; (2) the regulatory scheme must require the agency to focus upon competitive considerations in exercising those powers; and (3) the agency must have express statutory authority to immunize the conduct from the antitrust laws. Hughes Tool Co. v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., 409 U.S. 363, 385–389; United States v. Philadelphia Nat'l Bank, supra, 374 U.S. at 351; Pan American World Airways, Inc. v. United States, 371 U.S. 296, 305–309.[33]

[31] See letter from Tynan Smith, Secretary of the Federal Reserve Board, to Donald I. Baker, Director of Policy Planning, Antitrust Division, Department of Justice, dated March 15, 1972 (GX 177 B; App. E–232—E–234; J.S. App. 18a–20a).

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Ass'n, 166 U.S. 290, 314–325; cf. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. v. Ware, 414 U.S. 117.

[33] For example, in Otter Tail Power Co. v. United States, 410 U.S. 366, a power company contended that its refusal to sell wholesale power was immune from antitrust challenge by reason of the Federal Power Act, which authorized the Federal Power Commission to order interconnections to its distribution system. This Court disagreed, reasoning that Congress had not created a pervasive regulatory scheme for the interstate distribution of power, that the legislative history of the Federal Power Act revealed no intention to insulate the challenged conduct from antitrust attack, and, finally, that the Commission's authority to order interconnection is limited and not focused on the antitrust issues.

However, in Hughes Tool Co. v. Trans World Airlines, Inc., supra, the Court held that an antitrust suit challenging the manner in which Toolco had exercised its controlling interest in TWA should have been dismissed because (1) the Civil Aeronautics Board had investigated and approved their rela-

These criteria are not satisfied here. The Bank Holding Company Act calls for no determination by the Board relevant to any issue in the government's Sherman Act claim. That Act authorizes the Board to determine whether or not the relationship between a bank holding company and a bank amounts to "control" so as to invoke the other provisions of the Act. But the Board's determination on this jurisdictional issue does not determine any aspect of the Sherman Act claim.

Even if the Board had held that C&S controls the five-percent banks and had approved that control, that ruling would not have immunized from challenge under the Sherman Act the anticompetitive agreements such control produced. Congress, moreover, has expressly provided that the Board's decisions on the control issue do not create an antitrust defense (see p. 47, supra).

The district court's reliance upon Whitney Nat'l Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U.S. 411, was misplaced. That case did not involve relationships between existing banks claimed to violate the antitrust laws, but rather a question of the proper forum in which to litigate the legality, under state branching law, of the organization of a new bank by a bank holding company. Opponents of the new bank tionship pursuant to its express statutory mandate to approve acquisitions that are consistent with the public interest and do not result in monopoly, and (2) such decisions of the Board were expressly immunized from antitrust attack by Section 414 of the Federal Aviation Act of 1958, 49 U.S.C. 1384. 409 U.S. at 386.

sought to litigate their claims in a suit to enjoin the Comptroller from issuing a charter for the bank, without waiting for the Federal Reserve Board to determine whether the holding company acquisition would violate state branching restrictions. See id. at 418–419; cf. 12 U.S.C. (1958 ed.) 1842(c)(4), 1846.

In those circumstances this Court held that, since the issues raised were "cognizable by the Federal Reserve Board," proceedings before the Board were "the sole means by which questions as to the organization or operation of a new bank by a bank holding company may be tested" (id. at 419). This ruling obviously referred to the type of "questions" raised in that case. The Court did not suggest that all questions concerning relationships among existing banks must automatically be referred to the Board, even when, as here, the questions do not involve issues cognizable by the Board.

III

SECTION 7 OF THE CLAYTON ACT PROHIBITS C&S'S ACQUISITION OF THE FIVE-PERCENT BANKS

C&S's proposed acquisitions of the five-percent defendant banks would give it legal control of an undue share of concentrated markets and would significantly increase concentration in those markets. Accordingly, the acquisitions would presumptively violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act, under established standards for judging the legality of mergers or acquisitions of banks operating in the same market. United States v. Philadelphia Nat'l Bank, supra, 374

U.S. at 362–366; United States v. Phillipsburg Nat'l Bank & Trust Co., 399 U.S. 350, 365–367.[34]

The district court declined to apply this well-established structural analysis because the parties to the proposed acquisitions are currently operating as though they are already merely parts of the same economic enterprise. Instead, it termed the absence of existing competition between the parties the "crucial factor" in a Section 7 case, and held it legally irrelevant whether that absence results from "legally effective stock ownership control" or a voluntary arrangement of the parties (J.S. App. 66a).

Section 7 of the Clayton Act was intended to "arrest apprehended consequences of intercorporate relationships before those relationships could work their evil" and to block anticompetitive relationships "in their [34] "[F]or purposes of discussion" (J.S. App. 31a), the district court looked to the sections of the country that the government considered to be the relevant markets, i.e., DeKalb County, North Fulton County, Fulton County, and the Atlanta metropolitan area. It found, for this purpose, a high degree of concentration in each (J.S. App. 31a–42a) which would be increased. In the Atlanta area, where the top two banks have 53.2 percent of total deposits and the top four 84.2 percent, the merger would raise C&S's share as market leader from 30 to 32 percent, and reduce the total of area banking organizations by 16 percent, i.e., from 31 to 26. In DeKalb County, where C&S had 24.1 percent of deposits, the top two banks have 38.3 percent and the top three 51.8 percent, the merger would increase C&S's share by almost 40 percent to 34.5 percent. In North Fulton County, where C&S had 1.7 percent of deposits, the top two banks have 57.8 percent and the top four, 80.3 percent, the acquisition would increase C&S's share to 48.3 percent, twice the share of the second largest organization. In Fulton County, which is also highly concentrated, the increase would be 1.1 percent (ibid.).

incipiency," before they could develop into full-blown violations of the Sherman Act. United States v. E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 353 U.S. 586, 597; cf. Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 318, n. 32. It would turn Section 7 on its head to permit the appellees to justify these acquisitions, which prima facie violate that Section because of the significant increases in concentration they would produce, on the ground that, as a result of their prior violations of Section 1 of the Sherman Act, they have already eliminated the competition that Section 7 is designed to protect. Yet that is the basic thrust of their argument and the district court's decision: that since the appellees' agreements and understandings have eliminated competition between C&S and the five-percent banks, the effect of C&S's acquisition of those banks necessarily cannot be substantially to lessen competition. Appellees cannot justify their violation of Section 7 by relying upon their prior violation of Section 1.

The district court apparently believed its analysis compelled by this Court's summary affirmance of the district court's decision in United States v. Trans Texas Bancorp., supra, a case it regarded as "almost squarely in point" (J.S. App. 60a). In that case Sam Young, the founder, principal stockholder and chief executive of El Paso National Bank, had earlier been instrumental, along with other stockholders of that bank and a close group of their business associates and relatives, in establishing three other, smaller banks in El Paso, which El Paso National proposed to acquire. Young, his son, and this group had voting control of all four banks.

On the basis of its finding that a closely-knit group of stockholders always had the power to control the banks' competitive behavior, the district court concluded that the four combining banks could not be viewed as independent competitive entities. The existence of this "control group," its ability to impose its will on each of the combining banks, and the consequent lack of power in each of the combining banks to make its competitive decisions independently, led the court to conclude that there was no competition among them and that their formal union thus would have no adverse competitive effects. If, as the district court found in Trans Texas, control of the combining banks by a single group of stockholders which owned a majority of each bank's stock existed, then the banks "lacked competitive capabilities and there was no actual competition among them." 1972 Trade Cases at p. 93,213.

Trans Texas does not hold, however, that bank mergers are not to be tested by traditional Section 7 standards in situations like the present one, where legally-independent banks have voluntarily chosen to operate as though they are commonly-owned.[35]

[35] No claim has been made here that C&S or a C&S "control group" has the power to determine the competitive behavior of the banks C&S proposes to acquire. Indeed, the district court specifically found that even the elimination of any common ownership by complete stock divestiture would not affect the banks' competitive behavior (J.S. App. 65a–66a, 67a–68a)—their de facto branch arrangements would remain unchanged.

The fact that legally-independent competitive entities have in the past behaved, and may be inclined in the future to behave, in a non-competitive manner, is ordinarily irrelevant in assessing under Section 7 the legality of their formal, permanent union. Section 7 is designed to foster competitively-structured industries. Its rationale is that the greater the number of independent decision-making entities in a particular market, the less likely it is that they will adopt parallel competitive policies of mutual advantage.

This Court has held to be particularly important to this end the preservation of independent entities in markets that are already highly concentrated, as are most local banking markets, including those involved here. See United States v. Marine Bancorp., supra, slip op. 28; United States v. Philadelphia Nat'l Bank, supra, 374 U.S. at 365, n. 42; United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 377 U.S. 271, 279–280. It is for this reason, as this Court recently observed, that "the Government * * * [may] rest its case on a showing of even small increases of market share or market concentration in those industries or markets where concentration is already great or has been recently increasing * * *." United States v. General Dynamics Corp., 415 U.S. 486, 497. See also Elko Prods. Co. v. Federal Trade Commission, 347 F. 2d 745 (C.A. 7).

Appellees will presumably seek to support the district court's ruling that "disassociation" of the five-percent banks from C&S is unlikely even if they are not acquired (J.S. App. 65a) by arguing that the five-percent defendant banks would not "forfeit" the benefits of the existing de facto branch arrangements by voluntarily separating themselves from C&S, and that C&S would not "expel" them from its system and thereby compel them to operate as independent competitors.[36] But the legality under Section 7 of the permanent union of the independent banks involved in this case does not depend upon a judgment whether, if the acquisitions are prohibited, the five-percent banks are likely to continue the existing relationship. To accept appellees' arguments that the de facto branch arrangement was merely "a method of creating new suburban branches" and that C&S would not now "expel" them from its system lest it find itself wholly-excluded from the suburban market, would be to treat the five-percent banks as de facto subsidiaries and to disregard fundamental concepts of ownership and control upon which corporate law depends (pp. 28–31, supra).[37] It would also require that state law

[36] While the likelihood of a "breakaway" by a five-percent bank from C&S was referred to by the Department of Justice in its second competitive report to FDIC (GX 38; App. E–38—E–56), as well as in the district court, it was not suggested that the sole test under Section 7 was whether the five-percent banks would ultimately break away.

[37] Since the firms in this case are independent entities, the case does not present the question whether less-than-majority stock control could ever result, for antitrust purposes, in loss of a firm's legal status as an independent entity. Even wholly-owned corporate subsidiaries, however, may be treated as separate entities if they so represent themselves to the public. See, e.g., Kiefer-Stewart Co. v. Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., supra, 340 U.S. at 215. Here, conversely, independent firms have held themselves out as branches of another firm. But this does "not save them from any of the obligations that the law imposes on separate entities." Perma Life, supra, 392 U.S. at 141–142.

restrictions against de novo expansion be disregarded (see pp. 20–21, supra).[38]

Moreover, acceptance of that approach would be tantamount to accepting the legality, under Section 1 of the Sherman Act, of arrangements between independent entities pursuant to which they operate jointly. As we have shown in part I above, those arrangements are unlawful and cannot provide the basis for approving, under Section 7, the permanent combination of such independent entities.

If predictions of appellees' future competitive behavior are to be considered in assessing the legality of the union of the five-percent defendant banks with C&S,[39] such predictions cannot properly be premised on past behavior resulting from unlawful agreements [38] In Independent Bankers Ass'n v. Dunn, supra, the Georgia Supreme Court noted "two conflicting philosophies concerning the banking business. There are those who believe that the control of additional banks by large financial interests will ultimately destroy independent banks and result in the domination of the economy by too few persons. There are those who believe that larger financial interests can offer a wider variety of services and can better provide the capital to meet the needs of borrowers." 197 S.E. 2d at 138. Recognizing that resolution of the conflict is a legislative determination, the court found "[t]he legislative intent * * * expressed clearly in the banking laws" (ibid.). "'It is the intent of this Act to prevent the extension of statewide banking by any institution and to encourage the normal growth of banking units in the local communities . . . It is the intent of this Act to keep banking units from expanding into territories beyond their municipal corporate limits.'" 197 S.E. 2d at 138 (quoting from Section 1 of the 1960 amendments to the Georgia Banking Law (Ga. L. 1960, pp. 67–68)).

[39] Recently, the Court has indicated that a prima facie case under Section 7, based on the market shares of the merging firms in a concentrated market, may be rebutted by evidence that whose continuation should be enjoined. If the five-percent defendant banks can no longer determine their competitive strategy jointly with C&S and thus behave as its de facto branches, they will, as a matter of business survival, have to become independent competitors in fact. Accordingly, their acquisition by C&S must be tested on that assumption, rather than on the district court's assumption that the existing unlawful arrangements will continue unchanged.

No weight should be given, moreover, to the suggestion that it would be economically disadvantageous—and therefore unlikely [40]—for C&S and the the market in fact performs competitively. United States v. Marine Bancorp., supra, slip op. 27–28. Here, however, the district court has held that such a prima facie case is rebutted by evidence of a pre-existing voluntary arrangement among the merging firms that they will not perform competitively. Thus, the court elevated the very non-competitive behavior Section 7 is intended to forestall into a dispositive defense. That result inverts the policy and purposes of Section 7.

[40] The prospect that the five-percent defendant banks will sever their existing arrangements with C&S if these acquisitions are enjoined is not as remote as appellees seek to portray it, as the experience of Trust Company of Georgia ("Trust Company") and Peachtree Bank and Trust Company ("Peachtree Bank") demonstrates. In 1960 Trust Company assisted in the organization of Peachtree Bank, located in the Atlanta suburbs (see GX 106A, pp. 4–5; App. E–114—E–115), at which time Trust Company purchased five percent of its stock (App. 199–200). Until recently, the Trust Company-Peachtree Bank relationship was similar in many respects to the relationship between C&S and the five-percent defendant banks, and was so close that Peachtree Bank's president described it as a member of the Trust Company "family" (App. 215). In approving the proposed merger of Trust Company and Peachtree Bank in 1971, the Federal Reserve Board concluded that "there is no reason to expect that either Trust Company or Peachtree Bank would voluntarily discontinue [their relationship] * * * if their five-percent defendant banks to sever their existing de facto branch relationships. Operation of all the appellee banks as a single economic enterprise has no doubt been financially beneficial for both C&S and the five-percent defendant banks; otherwise they presumably would not have continued to operate in that fashion. But they are not required to do so. They operate pursuant to their de facto branch arrangements for "obvious reasons of business advantage" (Mo. to Aff., p. 4), as is true of all cartel arrangements. But even if the five-percent defendant banks should independently "follow" C&S's competitive practices so far as legally possible, they could not continue as C&S's de facto branches.

Moreover, a firm's expressed intention to adopt the practices of its competitor, so far as the law permits, cannot justify their merger. Otherwise, independent firms, particularly in oligopolistic industries, might have a complete defense to a Section 7 challenge to their merger. They, too, could argue that prior to their proposed merger they behaved non-competitively and even if their merger is barred they will continue to do so. Such a defense would effectively defeat the fundamental purpose of Section 7 to preserve competition by preventing horizontal mergers that in-merger were to be prohibited" (GX 35, p. 6; App. E–20). However, when the United States sued to enjoin the merger, Peachtree Bank decided to abandon it and severed all but regular correspondent relationships with Trust Company (App. 199–201). Since its disaffiliation from Trust Company, Peachtree Bank has enjoyed excellent growth in deposits, assets and earnings, has opened two branches, and is seeking approval for another (App. 215–218).

crease concentration. See, e.g., Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, supra, 370 U.S. at 331–334; United States v. Philadelphia Nat'l Bank, supra, 374 U.S. at 362–363; United States v. Penn-Olin Chem. Co., 378 U.S. 158, 170–171; United States v. General Dynamics Corp., supra, 415 U.S. at 496–497.

The decision of the district court could have particularly serious anticompetitive effects in the banking industry. It will encourage small banks operating in the same markets as large ones to adopt similar "de facto branch" relationships in order to profit from mutual determination of competitive strategy. Recent decisions of the Federal Reserve Board indicate that some banks have already attempted to pursue this course,[41] and there is no reason to think that this trend will not continue and increase.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, APPELLANT

v.

CITIZENS AND SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK, ET AL.

ON APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA

REPLY BRIEF FOR THE UNITED STATES

1. Appellees have mischaracterized the Sherman Act issues in this case. The government's claim that the relationships between C&S and the five percent banks constitute a per se violation is not based solely on exchanges of information between C&S and those banks, but on an agreement between C&S and the five percent banks which eliminates all competition between them.

Appellees argue that no such agreement has been shown; that even if proved, its legality under the Sherman Act must be tested by the rule of reason; and that since C&S's purpose in participating in this arrangement was procompetitive, any agreement is therefore reasonable and does not violate the Sherman Act. Yet appellees concede that there never has been any real competition between C&S and the five percent banks (Br., p. 72, n. 64), and that this condition resulted from the banks' course of conduct, which included voluminous exchanges of information and reviews of past, present and future prices and marketing practices (Br., pp. 11-13).

These concessions confirm the government's contention, which it has consistently maintained throughout this litigation, that the elaborate arrangement sponsored by C&S was a cartel—a horizontal agreement among direct competitors—that eliminated all meaningful competition among these legally independent banks. In view of the other evidence showing the banks' voluntary submission to C&S's plan (United States Br., pp. 9-11, 32-36), the government established the allegation in the complaint (App. 17-18) that C&S and the five percent banks "jointly determined the competitive strategy" of the latter. This arrangement depended in significant part on the exchange of information, including information about future price moves, between and among the defendant banks. But, contrary to appellees' assertions, the exchange of information is only one aspect of the Sherman Act violation charged and proved: the elimination by agreement of all meaningful competition between what otherwise would be independent competitive entities.

The record refutes appellees' allegations that "[w]ith respect to the Sherman Act, the government offered no evidence except communications between C&S and the five percent banks" (Br., p. 21), and that there was no proof of any agreement not to compete or to charge the same prices. In addition to the specific examples we have previously described (United States Br., p. 11, n.2), there is other evidence showing price-fixing. For example, in 1969 the President of C&S Chamblee wrote to C&S asking if it had any objection to C&S Chamblee raising its interest rate on regular savings accounts from 3½ percent to 4 percent in order to meet competition and prevent loss of deposits (GX 149, not printed). Chamblee's President, Mr. Harris, discussed this matter with C&S, and Chamblee did not raise its rate to meet the competition (GX 206; DX 302, App. E-840, E-855).[1] Since an independent firm ordinarily would not refrain from taking action it deems necessary to protect its competitive position, the inference is compelling that it did not raise its rate in this instance because of C&S's objection.

Appellees' discussion of intra-enterprise conspiracy (Br., pp. 50-53) is wide of the mark. Since the defendants are legally separate and independent corporate entities, they

> Q. Do you recall sending this particular letter to Mr. Ingram?
> A. (Nods head affirmatively.)

> A. We had some meetings downtown about it. We discussed what we really were looking at. Whatever the letter said, we discussed it in detail, and we made some changes resulting from that.
> Q. Did you at that time increase your interest rate on regular savings accounts from 3 1/2 to 4?

> Q. Why did you ask Mr. Ingram if he had any objection to your going to 4 percent?
> A. Because they do all the computation work down here on savings. The computer work on savings is done downtown.
> Q. In what way would the going from 3 1/2 to 4 affect the computer operation?
> A. Well, I think in asking him and talking with him like this it goes back to this original basis that I believe that C&S has the best thoughtout banking system, and I wanted to put my thoughts forward in as forceful a way as possible. And if after consultation they can show me where they've got a better method of operation, I'm willing to adopt it. And that's what occurred. [Id. at pp. 46-47.]

resemble a unified enterprise only to the extent that members of any illegal cartel do. The five percent banks are required to price independently precisely because they are not legally sub-parts of a single economic enterprise. For this reason, appellees' reliance on statements by Department of Justice officials concerning the application of the intra-enterprise conspiracy doctrine to bank holding companies is misplaced.[2]

Appellees' contention that because their arrangement eliminates all competition, it must be tested under the Sherman Act's rule of reason, is anomalous. In effect, they are arguing that because the anticompetitive arrangement among C&S and the five percent banks was so complete, its very scope puts it beyond the per se rules, since the banks' cartel arrangement is a kind of de facto merger. Thus, even though the five percent banks retain legal independence, appellees contend that their arrangement with C&S eliminating all competition should not be tested under the traditional standards governing such anticompetitive actions.

This claim stands the per se doctrine on its head. Under appellees' theory, particular forms of elimination of competition, such as price fixing and division of markets, would be per se illegal, but the broader elimination of all competition would be tested by the less stringent rule of reason. No decision of this Court supports such an analysis.[3] It is inconsistent with the basic assumption of the Sherman Act—that legally independent business entities must function in the economy as independent decision makers, in order to preserve the diversity of firms necessary to make the competitive system work.

[2]The letter described in n. 42, p. 52, of appellees' brief confined its analysis to subsidiary banks in the normal corporate sense of the word. Thus, the textual reference to which the quoted footnote was attached states: "This [conclusion] is true, of course, only where the holding company owns a substantial majority of the stock in all banks involved." Contrary to appellees' statements, the Department has never taken the position that where a single bank holding company does not hold a majority of the stock of banks that fix prices, such price-fixing is not per se illegal.

Appellees contend (Br., pp. 35-42) that their arrangements with the five percent banks were pro rather than anti-competitive because they enabled C&S to bring necessary and important banking services to the suburban areas that the five percent banks serve. There is nothing to indicate, however, that the five percent banks would not have been organized and would not have grown if, instead of operating them as de facto branches, C&S had merely assisted in their organization and permitted them to develop as fully independent competitive entities. Nor is there any reason to conclude that, if C&S had not itself "sponsored" these new banks, the demand for banking services in the suburbs would and could not have been met by the organization by people in those communities of local banks that would not be affiliated with C&S. In short, C&S's operation of the independent five percent banks as de facto branches was neither necessary or appropriate as a method of increasing bank competition in the areas those banks served—although it undoubtedly was highly beneficial to C&S itself.

2. Appellees also misconceive the Clayton Act issues in this case. As shown in our main brief (pp. 52-53), the proposed mergers are presumptively illegal under the government's definition of the relevant geographic markets,

[3]A similar contention was urged in Citizens Publishing Company v. United States, 394 U.S. 131, which held an arrangement eliminating all commercial competition between two newspapers to be illegal per se under the Sherman Act. Brief for Appellants, No. 243, O.T. 1968, pp. 38-41.

which the district court accepted for discussion. If the government prevails on this appeal, then appellees' challenge to those markets should be disposed of by the district court, which made no findings resolving the market dispute.[4] [4]In any event, the government's evidence, we submit, established the markets claimed. The testimony of the government's economic expert was based on, inter alia, a study of the location, by zip code, of every demand deposit account with balances of $1,000 or less in every office of every bank in Fulton and DeKalb Counties. Statement of Samuel Skogstad submitted in lieu of direct testimony, App. E-57 to E-88. Dr. Skogstad's conclusion was that considering the competitive interaction of the banking markets involved, the government's market areas were "reasonable geographic areas within which it is appropriate to analyze the competitive effects of the proposed mergers." App. E-83. In contrast, appellees' expert witness, Dr. Nevins Baxter, testified only that the five percent banks did not compete with each other or with any other bank outside a small service area of each bank, and that therefore there were no banking markets larger than the individual service area of any one bank. He reached this conclusion despite the fact that Dr. Baxter never considered non-C&S banks that compete with the defendants in determining the markets in which they operate (App. 658, 664-665) and under the erroneous assumption that the defendant banks did not compete with each other because of the pre-existing relationships (Economic Report, App. 862-863, 868).

This Court has never held that relevant markets in bank merger cases can or should be established merely by determining the service areas of a few of the banks operating in an area. The competitive interaction that occurs between spatially separated banks, ignored by Dr. Baxter, has been recognized by this Court in every bank merger case as essential to a proper market analysis. See, e.g., United States v. Connecticut National Bank, No. 73-767, decided June 26, 1974, slip op., pp. 12-15.

Appellees' assertion that this is a potential competition case is also mistaken. Since the banks do not now compete, they argue, the mergers could affect only the potential for future competition. In fact, as the district court assumed "for purposes of discussion" and as the record shows, the five percent banks and C&S sell similar or identical services in the same geographic areas, a characteristic which ordinarily results in a merger case being denominated "horizontal" (GXs 104-105, App. E-57 to E-112; GXs 42-75, not printed).[5] Here, but for the combination in restraint of trade, C&S and the five percent banks would be legally and factually independent actual competitors.

Under appellees' analysis every acquisition consolidating a pre-existing cartel arrangement among direct competitors would have to be treated as a potential competition case, since by definition the parties' violation of the Sherman Act has eliminated actual competition. Although such a violation of the Sherman Act does not establish a violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, illegal agreements to eliminate competition among direct competitors are not a defense under the Clayton Act. Appellees concede as much when they state (Br., p. 77, n. 73) that "[a] refusal to compete is not a proper defense to a challenge to a merger * * *." Yet, inconsistently, they also claim (Br., p. 71) that even if their past conduct violated Section 1 and is enjoined, the freezing of their cartel arrangement into permanent form through merger does not violate Section 7, because barring the merger will not "result in substantial competition between C&S and the sponsored banks."

[5]GXs 42-75 are a statistical analysis, based on the zip codes of demand account customers with deposits under $1,000, showing the areas from which the banks draw the bulk of their business.

Whether the individual banks will emerge as substantial strong competitors after their illegal cartel has been enjoined, however, is not the question under Section 7. That statute protects competition, not competitors. Brown Shoe Corp. v. United States, 370 U.S. 294, 320. Section 7 is intended to preserve a competitive market structure which leaves to the economics of the free market the determination of the quality and the level of competition by individual firms. Ibid.

Appellees contend that because the five percent banks do not now make independent business decisions, there is no possibility that their merger with C&S will lessen competition (Br., pp. 71-72). In this view, the fact that competition has been previously eliminated by an agreement which violates Section 1 of the Sherman Act is irrelevant. Section 7, however, is intended to foreclose anticompetitive relationships in their incipiency, before they amount to actual Sherman Act violations. See e.g., United States v. E.I. duPont de Nemours & Co., 353 U.S. 586, 597; cf. Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, supra, 370 U.S. at 318. It is unsound, therefore, to suggest that because competition among legally independent entities has been previously eliminated by a fullblown agreement in restraint of trade, the violators may rely on this restraint to escape the prohibitions of Section 7.

United States v. TransTexas Bancorp., CCH 1972 Trade Cases, par. 74, 257 (W.D. Tex), affirmed, 412 U.S. 946, is not to the contrary. Despite appellees' description of the district court's decision in that case, the court's actual holding was that there was a single entity, described as a "control group," which owned a majority of the stock in each bank. Thus, the district court there found that the banks separately "lacked competitive capabilities" (1972 Trade Cases at p. 93,213). In this case, however, it is undisputed that each five percent bank has the competitive capability, both legally and factually, to make its own independent, business decisions.

3. There is no merit to the appellees' claims that the relationships of three of the five percent banks with C&S have been validated by the "grandfather" provision in Section 11(d) of the Bank Holding Company Act, 80 Stat. 240, 12 U.S.C. 1849(d), and that the five percent banks are "subsidiaries" within the meaning of the third paragraph of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. 18.

A. Section 1849(d) provides that "[a]ny acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in section 1842(a) of this title," with respect to which the Attorney General had not initiated litigation prior to July 1, 1966 "shall be conclusively presumed not to have been in violation of any antitrust laws" other than Section 2 of the Sherman Act. Section 1842(a)(3) makes it unlawful, without prior approval of the Federal Reserve Board, for any bank holding company, inter alia, "to acquire direct or indirect ownership or control of any voting shares of any bank if, after such acquisition, such company will directly or indirectly own or control more than 5 per centum of the voting shares of such bank."[6] The purpose of the grandfather

[6] 12 U.S.C. 1842(a) provides in pertinent part:

> It shall be unlawful, except with the prior approval of the Board, (1) for any action to be taken that causes any company to become a bank holding company; (2) for any action to be taken that causes a bank to become a subsidiary of a bank holding company; (3) for any bank holding company to acquire direct or indirect ownership or control of any voting shares of any bank if, after such acquisition, such company will directly or indirectly own or control more than 5 per centum of the voting shares of such bank; (4) for any bank holding company or subsidiary thereof, other than a bank, to acquire all or substantially all of the assets of a bank; or (5) for any bank holding company to merge or consolidate with any other bank holding company.

provision is to bar an antitrust attack upon such acquisitions if the Attorney General had not challenged them prior to July 1, 1966.

The government in this suit is not alleging that C&S's acquisition of a 5 percent stock interest in the suburban banks itself violated either Section 1 of the Sherman Act or Section 7 of the Clayton Act. Rather, its contention is that the relationships between C&S and the 5 percent banks, by which all competition between them was eliminated, violated Section 1 of the Sherman Act and that the acquisition by C&S of the remaining stock in those banks would violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act.

Since Section 1849(d) bars antitrust challenges only to an "acquisition * * * of the kind described in section 1842(a)," Section 1849(d) is inapplicable to this case. Indeed, if appellees are correct in their argument that the "grandfather" provision of the Bank Holding Company Act immunizes the relationships between C&S and three of the 5 percent banks, this would be tantamount to a confession that they had violated Section 1842(a). For that section makes it "unlawful, except with the prior approval of the Board," to make any of the acquisitions there covered, and C&S never sought or obtained from the Board its prior approval before acquiring 5 percent of the stock of those banks.

B. The five percent banks are not "subsidiaries" of C&S within the meaning of the third paragraph of Section 7,[7] which makes that section inapplicable to the formation

[7] That paragraph provides (15 U.S.C. 18):

> This section shall not apply to corporations purchasing such stock solely for investment and not using the same by voting or otherwise to bring about, or in attempting to bring about, the substantial lessening of competition. Nor shall anything contained in this section prevent a corporation engaged in commerce from causing the formation of subsidiary corporations for the actual carrying on of their immediate lawful business, or the natural and legitimate branches or extensions thereof, or from owning and holding all or a part of the stock of such subsidiary corporations, when the effect of such formation is not to substantially lessen competition.

of or holding of stock in "subsidiary corporations." Appellees correctly state that neither court decisions nor the legislative history of the Clayton Act are helpful in determining the meaning of this provision. The normal meaning of "subsidiary" is a company in which another company owns at least a majority of its voting stock,[8] and there is nothing to indicate that Congress used the word here in other than its usual sense.

Indeed, in view of the purpose of the Clayton Act of barring mergers that may substantially lessen competition, the obvious purpose of the "subsidiary" exemption was to cover the situation where, because of the legal control that one corporation has over another, the acquisition of the latter by the former would not basically alter the existing competitive situation. Normally, a corporation and its majority-owned subsidiary are not expected to and do not compete with each other.

If Congress had intended to exempt from the prohibition of Section 7 of the Clayton Act any acquisition in which the acquiring firm had practical "control" over the ac-

CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated in the government's main brief and this reply brief, the judgment of the district court should be reversed.

UNITED STATES v. CITIZENS & SOUTHERN NATIONAL BANK ET AL.

APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA

No. 73-1933. Argued March 19, 1975—Decided June 17, 1975

To circumvent Georgia's longstanding stringent restrictions on city banks' opening branches in suburban areas, appellee Citizens & Southern National Bank (C&S National) formed a holding company, which then embarked on a program of forming de facto branch banks in Atlanta's suburbs. This program included the holding company's ownership of 5 percent of the stock of each of the suburban banks, ownership of much of the remaining stock by parties friendly to the C&S system of banking entities (hereafter C&S), the suburban banks' use of the C&S logogram and of all C&S' banking services, and close C&S oversight of the suburban banks' operation and governance. In 1970, Georgia amended its banking statutes so as to allow de jure branching upon a countywide basis. This meant that C&S could now absorb the 5-percent banks as true branches, because Atlanta is contained within the two counties encompassing the suburbs in which the 5-percent banks operated. Consequently C&S applied to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) under the Bank Merger Act of 1966 for permission to acquire all the stock of six of the 5-percent banks historically operated as de facto branches or "correspondent associate" banks within the C&S system. The FDIC authorized five of the proposed acquisitions. The Government then brought suit in District Court for injunctive relief, alleging that the five acquisitions would lessen competition in relevant banking markets in violation of § 7 of the Clayton Act, and that the historic, de facto branch relations between C&S and the six 5-percent banks constituted unreasonable restraints of trade in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act. The court rendered judgment for C&S. Three of the 5-percent banks were formed prior to, and three after, July 1, 1966. The "grandfather" provision of the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U. S. C. § 1849 (d), as added by the 1966 amendments, provides that "[a]ny acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in [12 U. S. C. §] 1842 (a) . . . which was consummated at any time prior or subsequent to May 9, 1956, and as to which no litigation was initiated by the Attorney General prior to July 1, 1966, shall be conclusively presumed not to have been in violation of any antitrust laws other than" § 2 of the Sherman Act. Title 12 U. S. C. § 1842 (a) makes it unlawful, absent the Federal Reserve Board's prior approval, for bank holding companies to engage in certain transactions, including those tending to create or enlarge holding company control of independent banks. Held:

1. Since the Attorney General took no action by July 1966 against the three 5-percent banks that were formed prior to that date, the transactions by which these banks became 5-percent banks fall within the terms of the grandfather provision of the Bank Holding Company Act, and therefore the correspondent associate programs in force at these banks are immune from attack under § 1 of the Sherman Act. While C&S' formation of a de facto branch was a unique type of transaction, it may fairly be characterized as an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in [12 U. S. C. §] 1842 (a)," and clearly falls within the class of dealings by bank holding companies that Congress intended, in the grandfather provision, to shield from retroactive challenge under the antitrust laws. Pp. 14–23.

2. In the face of the stringent state restrictions on branching, C&S' program of founding new de facto branches, and maintaining them as such, did not infringe § 1 of the Sherman Act. Pp. 23–31.

(a) Though the Government contends that the correspondent associate programs encompassed at least a tacit agreement to fix interest rates and service charges so as to make the interrelationships—to that extent at least—illegal per se, it cannot be held, in view of the mixed evidence in the record, and of the fact that such programs, as such, were permissible under the Sherman Act, that the District Court clearly erred in finding that the lack of significant price competition flowed, not from a tacit agreement, but as an indirect, unintentional, and formally discouraged result of the sharing of expertise and information that was at the heart of the correspondent associate program. Pp. 24–26.

Syllabus

(b) The Government's alternative contention that the correspondent associate programs transcending conventional "correspondent" relationships "unreasonably" restrained competition among the 5-percent banks and between these banks and C&S National, is not persuasive, since even if the Government had proved that such programs restrained competition among the defendant banks more thoroughly or effectively than would have a conventional correspondent program (which the District Court found not to be the case), that alone would not make out a Sherman Act violation. Pp. 26–28.

(c) Where C&S has operated the 5-percent banks as de facto branches in direct response to Georgia's historic restrictions on de jure branching, restraints of trade integral to this particular, unusual function are not unreasonable. To characterize the relationships at issue as an unreasonable restraint of trade is to forget that their whole purpose and effect were to defeat a restraint of trade, and by providing new banking options to suburban Atlanta customers, while eliminating no existing options, C&S' de facto branching program has plainly been procompetitive. Pp. 28–31.

3. The proposed acquisitions will not violate § 7 of the Clayton Act. Pp. 31–34.

(a) Since C&S' program of founding and maintaining new de facto branches in the face of Georgia's antibranching law did not violate the Sherman Act, and since the de facto branches that C&S proposes to acquire were all founded ab initio with C&S sponsorship, it follows that the proposed acquisitions will extinguish no present competitive conduct or relationships. P. 33.

(b) As for future competition, there is no evidence of any realistic prospect that denial of the acquisitions would lead the defendant banks to compete against each other, the Clayton Act being concerned with "probable" effects on competition, not with "ephemeral possibilities." Pp. 33–34.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 73–1933

United States, Appellant, v. Citizens and Southern National Bank et al.	On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia.

[June 17, 1975]

MR. JUSTICE STEWART delivered the opinion of the Court.

For many years the State of Georgia restricted banks located in cities from opening branches in suburban areas. To circumvent these restrictions in the Atlanta area, the Citizens & Southern National Bank (C&S National) formed the Citizens & Southern Holding Company (C&S Holding), and the latter company embarked on a program of forming de facto branch banks in the suburbs of Atlanta. This program involved, among other features, ownership by C&S Holding of 5 percent of the stock of each of the suburban banks (the maximum allowed by state law), ownership of much of the remaining stock by parties friendly to C&S,[1] use by the suburban banks of the C&S logogram and of all of C&S's banking services, and close C&S oversight of the operation and governance of the suburban banks. The expectation on all sides—by

[1] Unless otherwise indicated, the term "C&S" refers generically to the C&S system of banking entities, including C&S National and its majority owned affiliates and C&S Holding, but excluding the 5-percent banks. The defendants in this suit—appellees here—are C&S National, C&S Holding, six of the 5-percent banks, and two banks in the Atlanta area, C&S Emory and C&S East Point, which are subsidiaries of C&S Holding. Taken together, these will sometimes be called the "defendant banks."

C&S, by the suburban banks, and by state and federal bank regulators—was that C&S would acquire these "5-percent banks" outright, and convert them into de jure branches, as soon as state law, or the Atlanta city limits, were altered so as to permit the accomplishment of this end.

In 1970, Georgia amended its banking statutes to allow de jure branching on a countywide basis. Because the city of Atlanta is contained within two counties, DeKalb and Fulton, which encompass the Atlanta suburbs in which the 5-percent banks operated, this change in the law meant that C&S National could now absorb the 5-percent banks as true branches. C&S consequently applied to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), under the Bank Merger Act of 1966, for permission to acquire all of the stock of six of the 5-percent banks historically operated by C&S as de facto branches. The FDIC authorized all but one of the proposed acquisitions.

The Justice Department immediately commenced this litigation in a federal district court for injunctive relief, alleging that the five acquisitions authorized by the FDIC would lessen competition in relevant banking markets, and thus violate § 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U. S. C. § 18, and that the historic, "de facto branch" relations between C&S and the six 5-percent banks constituted unreasonable restraints of trade in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U. S. C. § 1. After a trial, the court rendered judgment for C&S on all the issues. 372 F. Supp. 616. The Government appealed under § 2 of the Expediting Act, 32 Stat. 823, as amended, 15 U. S. C. § 29, and we noted probable jurisdiction.[2]

[2] — U. S. —. Notice of appeal was filed prior to the effective date of the Antitrust Procedures and Penalties Act, Pub. L. No. 93-528, § 7, 88 Stat. 1709. The proposed acquisitions were stayed automatically by the filing of the suit, 12 U. S. C. § 1828

I. The Background of this Litigation

In applying the antitrust laws to banking, careful account must be taken of the pervasive federal and state regulation characteristic of the industry, "particularly the legal restraints on entry unique to this line of commerce." United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U. S. 602, 606. This admonition has special force in the present case, for the de facto branch arrangements and the proposed acquisitions involved here were a direct response to Georgia's historic restrictions on branch banking.

Before 1927 Georgia permitted statewide branching, and C&S National, then as now headquartered in Savannah, established three branches in the city of Atlanta. In 1927, state law was changed to prohibit all branching.[3] C&S therefore decided to expand through the formation of a bank holding company. C&S Holding was founded in 1927, and between 1946 and 1954 this company purchased two banks, and founded a third, in the Atlanta area. But in 1956 Georgia again altered its statutes to prohibit a bank holding company from acquiring more than 15 percent of a bank's stock. Georgia Bank Holding Company Act, Ga. L. 1956, pp. 309–312. A 1960 amendment, still in force, reduced the maximum ownership level to 5 percent. Ga. Code Ann. 13–207 (a)(2) (Cumm. Supp. 1974).

By the 1950s, C&S National was interested primarily in suburban expansion. The Atlanta city limits had been frozen since 1952, and the area's economic and population growth consequently occurred primarily outside the city's boundaries. Between 1959 and 1969, (c)(7)(A). The District Court continued the stay, and it has remained in force pending this decision.

[3] A 1929 amendment allowed branching within the home-office city of a bank, but this was of no aid to the ambitions of C&S National outside Savannah.

C&S Holding accordingly established in the Atlanta suburbs (in DeKalb and Fulton Counties) the six 5-percent banks at issue in this case. Five of these banks were founded under the sponsorship of C&S; the sixth, the Tucker Bank, had long been an independent suburban bank when, in 1965, C&S converted it into a 5-percent bank.[4]

Each of these six banks was made a "correspondent associate" bank within the C&S system. This status involved many different relationships between the 5-percent bank and C&S: In addition to the 5 percent stock held by C&S Holding, substantial shares were also held by officers, shareholders, and friendly customers of other C&S banks, and by their family members. It was understood from the outset that the 5-percent banks would be acquired outright by C&S as soon as the law permitted. From at least 1965 on, the 5-percent banks used the C&S logogram on their buildings, papers, and correspondence.

[4] Founded with C&S sponsorship were: (1) The Sandy Springs Bank, Fulton County (two offices). Founded in 1959 and operational in 1960 as the Citizens National Bank of Sandy Springs, it was converted in 1969 from a national to a state-chartered bank and adopted the name Citizens and Southern Bank of Sandy Springs. (2) The Chamblee Bank, DeKalb County. Founded in 1960 as the Chamblee National Bank, it was converted to a state-chartered bank in 1969 and adopted the name Citizens and Southern Bank of Chamblee. (3) The North Fulton Bank, Fulton County. It was founded in 1967 as the Citizens and Southern Bank of North Fulton, a state-chartered institution. (4) The Park National Bank, DeKalb County. It was founded in 1967 as the Citizens and Southern Park National Bank. (5) The South DeKalb Bank, DeKalb County (two offices). It was founded as the Citizens and Southern South DeKalb Bank, a state-chartered institution, in 1969.

The Citizens and Southern Bank of Tucker (two offices), in DeKalb County, was independently founded in 1919, as the Bank of Tucker. C&S Holding acquired 5-percent ownership in 1965, and the bank then adopted its present name. This bank is involved in only the Sherman Act phase of this case. Its proposed acquisition by C&S was forbidden by the FDIC.

C&S filed the charter applications of the 5-percent banks and openly assured the banks of full financial support, assurances which were often instrumental in securing regulatory approval of their creation. C&S chose the principal executive officer for each 5-percent bank. The employees of these banks were accorded the same pension and promotion rights in the C&S system as possessed by their colleagues at C&S National and its de jure affiliates. C&S selected the location of, and oversaw the selection of directors, for the suburban banks. A C&S executive served as an "advisory director" to each suburban bank. C&S conducted surprise audits and credit checks at the suburban banks. Each of the suburban banks provided the full panoply of C&S banking services, and customers of any 5-percent bank could avail themselves of these services at any of the other 5-percent banks, or at C&S National and its de jure branches. C&S supplied to each 5-percent bank, through manuals and memoranda, a large quantity of information concerning every conceivable banking procedure and problem. Included were data—stamped "for information only"—concerning interest rates and service charges employed by C&S National and its de jure branches, but each 5-percent bank was cautioned to use its own judgment in setting interest rates and service charges. In sum, it is fair to say—and the parties agree—that in almost every respect save corporate form, each of the 5-percent banks was a de facto branch of C&S National.

Between 1966 and 1968, the Federal Reserve Board investigated C&S's network of correspondent associate banks. The purpose of the investigation was to determine whether C&S was exerting such control over the 5-percent banks as to require special "approval" of the Federal Reserve Board pursuant to § 3 of the Bank Holding Act of 1956, as amended. The investigation ended in an "understanding" between the Board's staff and C&S that the "correspondent associate" program, as the staff understood it, did not require formal approval.[5] The Justice Department participated in this investigation, and took no action of any kind inconsistent with this "undertaking."

In 1970 Georgia amended its banking statutes to permit de facto branching within any county in which a bank already had an office. Ga. Code Ann. 13–203.1 (a) (Cum. Supp. 1974). This allowed C&S National to branch into those Atlanta suburbs which—like the city of Atlanta—are within the confines of DeKalb and Fulton counties. C&S decided to convert the six 5-percent banks at issue here into de jure branches. C&S applied to the FDIC for permission to acquire all of the stock and assets, and to assume all of the liabilities, of the 5-percent banks.[6] On October 4, 1971, after reviewing reports on the proposed acquisitions from the Federal Reserve Board, the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Justice Department, the FDIC approved C&S's acquisition of the five suburban banks which C&S had helped to found, but disapproved acquisition of the Tucker Bank. Because the Tucker Bank had enjoyed an independent existence before being converted into a 5-percent bank, the FDIC concluded that the correspondent associ-

[5] See n. 17, infra. The investigation was concerned with § 3 of the Bank Holding Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 134, as amended on July 1, 1966, by Pub. L. 89–485, § 7, 80 Stat. 237, and on December 31, 1970, by Pub. L. 91–607, Tit. I, § 102, 84 Stat. 1763. 12 U. S. C. § 1842.

[6] The acquisitions were to be made by bank subsidiaries of C&S Holding: C&S East Point, which proposed to acquire the Sandy Springs and North Fulton Banks, and C&S Emory, which proposed to acquire the Chamblee, Park National, South DeKalb, and Tucker Banks. The FDIC was the responsible federal agency because each of the acquiring banks is a "nonmember [of the Federal Reserve System] insured bank." 12 U. S. C. § 1828 (c) (2) (C).

ate affiliation there had been "anticompetitive in its origins" and should not be "ratified" by approval of outright acquisition.[7] As for the five banks which C&S had helped to found, however, the FDIC stated:

> "[T]he opening of these . . . de novo banks served the convenience and needs of their respective communities and enhanced competition . . . ."

The FDIC noted that the C&S system was the largest commercial banking institution in Fulton County and in DeKalb County.[8] For this reason, it observed, "new acquisitions of nonaffiliated banks in the same market [by C&S] would raise the most serious competitive problems under the Bank Merger Act as amended and under Section 7 of the Clayton Act." But the FDIC reasoned that the acquisitions proposed by C&S did not raise such problems "because the banks involved in the proposed mergers do not compete today and never have competed"; further, there existed "no reasonable probability" that any of the five percent banks would break their ties with the C&S system even if the proposed acquisitions were disapproved. Thus, "[s]uch mergers would not alter the existing competitive structure . . . in any way or add to the concentration of banking resources now held by the C&S system."

[7] The FDIC noted that the independent Tucker Bank had not been in unsound financial condition when C&S assumed de facto control in 1965, and that it would have been better for competition if C&S had instead sponsored a new bank in the community "just as it did in other growing sections of DeKalb County prior to the recent change in Georgia's branching laws."

[8] See the Appendix to this opinion for the District Court's statistical summary of the Atlanta area's banking markets, C&S's place in these markets, and the effect of the proposed acquisitions on the market share statistics.

II. The Suit in the District Court

On November 2, 1971, within the 30-day period prescribed for such suits, 12 U. S. C. §§ 1828 (c)(6) and (7), the United States filed a complaint in the District Court for the Northern District of Georgia alleging that the five acquisitions approved by the FDIC would violate § 7 of the Clayton Act and that the ongoing correspondent associate relationships between C&S and the six 5-percent banks which it had originally sought to acquire constituted unreasonable restraints of trade, in violation of § 1 of the Sherman Act. The Government sought injunctive relief prohibiting the proposed acquisitions and terminating the alleged violations of the Sherman Act. On January 24, 1974, after an extensive trial, the District Court entered a judgment for the defendants. 372 F. Supp., at 643.

As to the Sherman Act allegations, the District Court based its judgment upon two separate and independent grounds. First it held that the 1968 "understanding" between the staff of the Federal Reserve Board and C&S insulated the correspondent associate relationship between C&S and the 5-percent banks from attack under the antitrust laws. Id., at 627. The court based this conclusion on the following statement in Whitney National Bank v. Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U. S. 411, at 419:

> "We believe Congress intended the statutory proceedings before the [Federal Reserve] Board to be the sole means by which questions as to the organization or operation of a new bank by a bank holding company may be tested."

Alternatively, assuming the Sherman Act applied, the District Court found that the United States had failed to prove that the correspondent associate relationships involved "collusive price fixing" or "any agreements not to compete or for market division."[9] The Court held "that the matters complained of are subject to the 'rule of reason,' [and] the Government has not sustained its burden of proof as to the unreasonableness of the practices involved or with respect to any adverse impact upon competition." Id., at 627–628.

---

[9] The court stated:

"The Government contends that the following aspects of the relationships between the defendants have restrained interstate trade and commerce:

"1. The routine and systematic practice of furnishing to one another comprehensive information as to past, present and future competitive practices and policies with a purpose of achieving uniformity among the defendants;

"2. The provision by C&S National to the five percent defendants of various manuals and memoranda;

"3. The provision by C&S National to the five percent defendants of suggestions and advice on such matters as rates, hours of operation, types of loan to discourage and minimum loan rates . . . .

"The Government also asserts, and the record shows, that the advice and suggestions offered by C&S National are generally followed.

"These activities, however, do not amount to collusive price fixing. For example, there is no suggestion that any advice as to rates amounts to more than an expert appraisal of a market situation from the point of view of a lending institution—a type of opinion to which a lending institution would naturally be expected to pay great attention . . . .

"The practices involved here do not conform to the accepted definition or description of per se antitrust violations where no resort to context or circumstances is required (or permitted).

"There is no evidence of record to conclude that the utilization by the five percent defendant banks of the services or information received by them from C&S Holding was a result of any tacit or explicit combination rather than the natural deference of the recipient to information from one with greater expertise or better sources. In either case there is the flow of information as to rates, practices, etc., which the Government apparently applauds or at least condones in a correspondent banking relationship."

372 F. Supp., at 626, 627, and 628.

The Government had conceded that it was no violation of the Sherman Act for a large city bank to arrange a traditional "correspondent" relationship with a smaller, outlying bank—a "mutually beneficient arrangement, whereby the small bank receives needed services and the larger bank obtains both the benefit of the correspondent bank balance kept with it and the income from the sale of its services to the smaller bank's customers." Id., at 628. Noting this concession, the District Court observed:

> "[S]uch assistance to, or sponsorship of, a smaller bank is desirable and necessary and not anti-competitive. The difference between a pure correspondent relationship and a correspondent associate relationship as set forth in the evidence is merely one of degree, a fine line of demarcation almost impossible for the Court to perceive. . . .
>
> "[T]he Court finds as a fact that the relationship between C&S National, C&S Holding, and the five percent defendant banks, and the interchange of information between them, have been reasonable under the circumstances and not in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act." Ibid.

Turning to the claim under § 7 of the Clayton Act, the court found that the various defendant banks were each "engaged in commerce" and that the relevant "line of commerce" was "commercial banking." The Court declined, however, to define the appropriate geographic markets, stating that its "disposition of the case is based upon factors which make a precise delineation of the market area unnecessary." Id., at 629. Simply assuming the correctness of the Government's position that the appropriate markets were DeKalb County, Fulton County, north Fulton County, or the Atlanta area generally, the Court made detailed findings as to the effect of the proposed acquisitions on C&S's nominal market shares. Id., at 629–633.[10] But, just as had the FDIC before it, the court saw these increases in nominal shares as of no competitive significance because the 5-percent banks had always been de facto branches within the C&S system. Id., at 633–638.[11]

[10] See Appendix to this opinion.

[11] The court noted "that no witness (for either the Government or the defendants) testified that the proposed mergers would have any adverse economic or competitive implications whatever. . . ." Id., at 638. Competitors of the suburban 5-percent banks "expressed the view that the proposed mergers would have no effect whatsoever on competition as it relates to third parties." Ibid. The court found "as a fact that there is no presently existing substantial competition between the five percent defendant banks and C&S National, or inter sese, or with third parties, which would be affected by the proposed merger." Id., at 642.

In the interval between the trial and the announcement of the District Court's opinion, the Supreme Court of Georgia had ruled in a separate suit brought by a group of independent suburban banks that C&S was in technical violation of the state bank holding company law with respect to the 5-percent banks in the Atlanta suburbs. Its judgment was grounded on the fact that, in addition to the 5-percent stock interest directly owned by C&S Holding, substantial numbers of shares were owned by C&S officers and directors. The state court accordingly directed the Georgia Banking Commissioner to file suit to force divestiture of excess stock holdings by these shareholders. Independent Bankers Assn. v. Dunn, 230 Ga. 345, 197 S. E. 2d 129 (1973), modified sub nom. Citizens and Southern National Bank v. Independent Bankers Assn., 231 Ga. 421, 202 S. E. 2d 78 (1973). The District Court's opinion took notice of this state court judgment and concluded that it would not lead to genuine competition among the 5-percent banks or between them and C&S. 372 F. Supp., at 643. After the District Court's opinion was announced, the state Banking Commissioner, acting pursuant to the state court judgment, ordered C&S Holding to limit its direct and indirect interest in the stock of correspondent associate banks to 5 percent and ordered C&S to "terminate any direct or indirect supervision of the . . . five percent banks beyond that which is available from the Citizens and Southern National

III. The Issues under the Sherman and Clayton Acts

It is common ground in this case that the 5-percent banks have been operated from the outset substantially as de facto branches of C&S, even though they are and have always been separate corporate entities. From these agreed-upon facts, the parties draw sharply divergent conclusions under the Sherman and Clayton Acts.

Section 1 of the Sherman Act, 26 Stat. 209, as amended, 15 U. S. C. § 1, provides:

> "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states . . . is hereby declared to be illegal . . . ."

The Government contends that the relationships between C&S and the six 5-percent banks constituted unreasonable restraints of trade on two alternate theories: (1) The relationships encompassed an agreement to fix interest rates and service charges among the 5-percent banks, and between these banks and C&S-owned banks, resulting in a "per se" violation of the Sherman Act. (2) The programs unreasonably restrained interbank competition, as to prices and services, by extending interbank cooperation far beyond the conventional "correspondent" arrangements which large city banks traditionally make with small banks in outlying markets. C&S denies that its relationships with the 5-percent banks encompassed any agreements to fix prices and contends that the process of de facto branching was a Bank or the Citizens and Southern Holding Company to any bank that wishes to enter into a correspondent relationship with such bank or holding company." On June 3, 1974, the District Court amended its opinion nunc pro tunc to find that the Banking Commissioner's "order does not change the underlying basis of the Court's decision that the proposed mergers will not substantially lessen competition." 372 F. Supp., at 643 n. 8.

procompetitive response to Georgia's anticompetitive ban on de jure branching, and thus legal under the Sherman Act's "rule of reason." In the alternate, C&S contends that its relationships with the 5-percent banks were subject to the "exclusive primary jurisdiction" of the Federal Reserve Board and thus immune from attack under § 1 of the Sherman Act.

Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 38 Stat. 731 as amended, 64 Stat. 1125, 15 U. S. C. § 18, provides:

> "No corporation engaged in commerce shall acquire, directly or indirectly, the whole or any part of the stock or other share capital and no corporation subject to the jurisdiction of the Federal Trade Commission shall acquire the whole or any part of the assets of another corporation engaged also in commerce, where in any line of commerce in any section of the country, the effect of such acquisition may be substantially to lessen competition, or to tend to create a monopoly." [12]

The Government argues that the acquisitions of the five suburban banks approved by the FDIC would

[12] Pursuant to 12 U. S. C. § 1828 (c) (7) (B), referring to 12 U. S. C. § 1828 (c) (5) (B), bank mergers are made subject to Clayton Act standards unless "the anticipated effects of the proposed transaction are clearly outweighed in the public interest by the probable effect of the transaction in meeting the convenience and needs of the community to be served." Hence, in bank merger cases brought under the Clayton Act, there is a "convenience and needs defense" that "comes into play only after a district court has made a de novo determination of the status of a bank merger under the Clayton Act." United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U. S. 602, 626. See also United States v. Third National Bank, 390 U. S. 171 (1968); United States v. First City National Bank, 386 U. S. 361 (1967). Because of its disposition of the case, the District Court did not reach this additional defense which had been asserted by C&S.

"lessen" competition when compared to what the situation would be if the defendant banks ceased their alleged violations of the Sherman Act. The Government further contends that, even if the present relationships between C&S and the 5-percent banks do not offend the Sherman Act, since the relationships might nevertheless change and the whole situation become more competitive for business or state law reasons, the proposed acquisitions violate § 7 by foreclosing this possibility. C&S argues that the acquisitions would merely convert de facto into de jure branches, with no perceptible effect on competition compared with the present situation, which is asserted by C&S to be lawful under the Sherman Act. C&S urges that there is no realistic possibility of future competition among the defendant banks. In the alternate, C&S contends that each of the 5-percent banks operates in a distinct and segregable market, so that the proposed acquisitions would not lessen competition in any relevant "section of the country"; and that any anticompetitive effects of the acquisitions are "outweighed in the public interest" because the acquisitions meet "the convenience and needs" of banking customers in the Atlanta area.[13] The District Court did not reach these alternative contentions.

A. The Sherman Act Issues

1. The Question of Immunity

The District Court thought the correspondent associate programs immune from Sherman Act scrutiny because they were subject to the "exclusive primary jurisdiction" of the Federal Reserve Board under the Bank Holding Act of 1956, as amended. We do not so understand the law. The Court relied on Whitney National Bank v.

[13] See n. 12, supra.

Bank of New Orleans & Trust Co., 379 U. S. 411, but the question in that case was the wholly different one of whether it is the Comptroller of the Currency or the Federal Reserve Board that has jurisdiction to determine whether transactions by a bank holding company conform with applicable state banking law. For guidance as to antitrust immunities, recourse must be had directly to the provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U. S. C. § 1841 et seq.

The statutory scheme requires the "prior approval" of the Federal Reserve Board for certain transactions by bank holding companies—including transactions tending to create or enlarge holding company control of independent banks. 12 U. S. C. § 1842 (a).[14] The types of transactions requiring Board approval were expanded by amendments to the Act in 1966 and 1970.[15] Prior to [14] "It shall be unlawful, except with the prior approval of the Board, (1) for any action to be taken that causes any company to become a bank holding company; (2) for any action to be taken that causes a bank to become a subsidiary of a bank holding company; (3) for any bank holding company to acquire direct or indirect ownership or control of any voting shares of any bank if, after such acquisition, such company will directly or indirectly own or control more than 5 per centum of the voting shares of such bank; (4) for any bank holding company or subsidiary thereof, other than a bank, to acquire all or substantially all of the assets of a bank; or (5) for any bank holding company to merge or consolidate with any other bank holding company. . . ." 12 U. S. C. § 1842 (a).

[15] Prior to the amendments of July 1, 1966, Pub. L. 89-485, § 7, 80 Stat. 237, prior approval of the Board was not required for causing a bank to become a subsidiary of a bank holding company. In addition to adding this requirement, the 1966 amendments broadened the definition of a subsidiary—from a company in which a bank holding company "own[s]" 25 percent of the voting shares to a company in which a bank holding company "directly or indirectly own[s] or control[s]" this percentage share. Compare § 4 of the 1966 amendments, 80 Stat. 236, with § 2 (d) of the Bank

1966, it appeared that Board approval of a transaction provided no immunity from antitrust action, for a note then set out under § 1841 of Title 12 stated that nothing in the act was to be construed as a "defense" to an antitrust suit. The 1966 Amendments to the Act formalized this provision, but also blunted its force by establishing an intricate procedure for accommodating the jurisdictions of the Board and the Justice Department.[16] Under

---

Holding Company Act of 1956, 70 Stat. 133. The provision is now at 12 U. S. C. § 1841 (d)(1). The definition of subsidiary has also included, from the outset of the Act, "any company the election of a majority of whose directors is controlled in any manner" by a bank holding company. 12 U. S. C. § 1841 (d)(2). The amendments of December 31, 1970, Pub. L. 91-607, § 101 (d), 84 Stat. 1760, further enlarged the definition of subsidiary to include "any company with respect to the management or policies of which such bank holding company has the power, directly or indirectly, to exercise a controlling influence, as determined by the Board, after notice and opportunity for hearing." 12 U. S. C. § 1841 (d)(3).

[16] Section 11 of the 1966 amendments, Pub. L. 89-485, 80 Stat. 240. As presently in force, 12 U. S. C. § 1849, the provision reads:

"(a) Nothing herein contained shall be interpreted or construed as approving any act, action, or conduct which is or has been or may be in violation of existing law, nor shall anything herein contained constitute a defense to any action, suit, or proceeding pending or hereafter instituted on account of any prohibited antitrust or monopolistic act, action, or conduct, except as specifically provided in this section.

"(b) The Board shall immediately notify the Attorney General of any approval by it pursuant to section 1842 of this title of a proposed acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction, and such transaction may not be consummated before the thirtieth calendar day after the date of approval by the Board. Any action brought under the antitrust laws arising out of an acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction approved under section 1842 of this title shall be commenced within such thirty-day period. The commencement of such an action shall stay the effectiveness of the Board's approval unless the court shall otherwise specifically order. In any such action, the court shall review de novo the issues presented. In any judicial proceeding attacking any acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction approved pursuant to section 1842 of this title on the ground that such transaction alone and of itself constituted a violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of Title 15, the standards applied by the court shall be identical with those that the Board is directed to apply under section 1842 of this title. Upon the consummation of an acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction approved under section 1842 of this title in compliance with this chapter and after the termination of any antitrust litigation commenced within the period prescribed in this section, or upon the termination of such period if no such litigation is commenced therein, the transaction may not thereafter be attacked in any judicial proceeding on the ground that it alone and of itself constituted a violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of Title 15, but nothing in this chapter shall exempt any bank holding company involved in such a transaction from complying with the antitrust laws after the consummation of such transaction.

"(c) In any action brought under the antitrust laws arising out of any acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction approved by the Board under section 1842 of this title, the Board and any State banking supervisory agency having jurisdiction within the State involved, may appear as a party of its own motion and as of right, and be represented by its counsel.

"(d) Any acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in section 1842 (a) of this title which was consummated at any time prior or subsequent to May 9, 1956, and as to which no litigation was initiated by the Attorney General prior to July 1, 1966, shall be conclusively presumed not to have been in violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of Title 15.

"(e) Any court having pending before it on or after July 1, 1966, any litigation initiated under the antitrust laws by the Attorney General with respect to any acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in section 1842 (a) of this title shall apply the substantive rule of law set forth in section 1842 of this title.

identical to, the standards of the Sherman Act and of § 7 of the Clayton Act. 12 U. S. C. § 1842 (c). The Board's order granting or denying an application for prior approval is subject to review in the Courts of Appeals. 12 U. S. C. § 1848. Furthermore, an approved transaction is stayed automatically for 30 days, during which time an antitrust suit challenging the transaction may be brought in the District Court. 12 U. S. C. § 1849 (b). Such a suit is governed by the modified antitrust standards set out in § 1842 (c). If the antitrust suit is not brought within 30 days, and the transaction is consummated,

> "the transaction may not thereafter be attacked in any judicial proceeding on the ground that it alone and of itself constituted a violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of Title 15 [§ 2 of the Sherman Act], but nothing in this chapter shall exempt any bank holding company involved in such a transaction from complying with the antitrust laws after the consummation of such a transaction." 12 U. S. C. § 1849 (b).

C&S can draw no consolation from these provisions. It is true that the staff of the Federal Reserve Board, in 1968, came to an "understanding" with C&S that the correspondent associate programs then in effect did not offend § 1842 (a) of the Bank Holding Act and thus did not require formal Board "approval." [17] But this did not

[17] The Secretary to the Federal Reserve Board described the investigation and the 1968 "understanding" in a 1972 letter to the Justice Department:

"The fact finding inquiry undertaken by Board staff into the relationship between Citizens & Southern and the other banking institutions referred to was begun in 1966 and continued into 1968. The principal focus of the inquiry concerned essentially two questions: (1) whether Citizens & Southern had unlawfully acquired a direct or indirect stock ownership in these banking institutions in excess of 5 percent without first having secured the requisite prior give rise to any antitrust immunity. A consummated transaction acquires immunity under § 1849 (b) only when no antitrust action has been commenced within 30

Board approval; and (2) whether the banking institutions had unlawfully become subsidiaries of Citizens & Southern by virtue of the election of directors without first having received the requisite prior Board approval. The inquiry arose in 1966 out of information contained in Citizens & Southern's registration statement filed with the Board and in 1968 as a result of information supplied by the Comptroller of the Currency in connection with the merger of the Citizens and Southern National Bank and the Citizens and Southern Bank of Augusta. The inquiry referred to was not initiated as a result of any application filed with the Board for approval of an acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction under section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act.

. . . . .

"The Board of Governors did not issue any order approving the relationships between Citizens & Southern and the other banking institutions under section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act.

. . . . .

"There was no determination made that approval of the Board under section 3 of the Bank Holding Company Act was required for Citizens & Southern to retain an ownership interest of 5 per cent or less in the banking institutions referred to or to maintain the relationships with those banks in circumstances where Citizens & Southern did not elect a majority of the directors of any such bank. There was an understanding reached between members of the Board's staff and representatives of Citizens & Southern that in those cases where Citizens & Southern purchased 5 per cent or less of the stock of a bank, in some instances furnishing a principal operating officer for such bank, as well as other employee benefits, Citizens & Southern would not be deemed to have control of a majority of the directors of such bank on these facts alone. Further, where the foregoing circumstances existed and where control of additional shares was purchased by the bank's executive officer, control of such shares purchased would not be attributed to Citizens & Southern so long as Citizens & Southern did not finance the purchase of such shares, directly or indirectly. Finally, it was understood that even though Citizens & Southern was responsible, directly or indirectly, in placing one or two directors on the boards of such banks, if that number did not constitute a majority of directors of days after the transaction has received the "approval" of the Board, in an order which is subject to judicial review and which reflects application by the Board of the special antitrust standards of § 1842 (c). The immunity applies only to "an acquisition, merger, or consolidation transaction approved under Section 1842 of this title in compliance with this chapter." 12 U. S. C. § 1849 (b). The obvious purpose of the complex machinery in § 1849 (b) is to accord finality to formal actions of the Board not subjected to timely challenge under the antitrust laws. There is no indication that Congress wished to accord a similar finality to the informal views of the Board's staff.

We note, however, that the 1966 Amendments also added a "grandfather" provision to the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U. S. C. § 1849 (d):

> "Any acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in section 1842 (a) of this title which was consummated at any time prior or subsequent to May 9, 1956, and as to which no litigation was initiated by the Attorney General prior to July 1, 1966, shall be conclusively presumed not to have been in violation of any antitrust laws other than section 2 of Title 15 [§ 2 of the Sherman Act]."

Unlike § 1849 (b), this provision does not state or imply that the covered transactions must have received the formal approval of the Federal Reserve Board. This grandfather provision is not, like § 1849 (b) an attempt to accommodate the competing jurisdictions of the Federal Reserve Board under § 1842 and the Justice Department under the antitrust laws. Rather, the grandfather provision is a simple conferral of legislative amnesty for such bank, the Board's staff would not consider that Citizens & Southern could reasonably be held to have control of a majority of the directors of such bank."

theretofore unchallenged transactions completed before Congress had clarified the nature of that accommodation.

The transactions by which C&S created a correspondent associate relationship with three of the 5-percent banks—the Sandy Springs, Chamblee, and Tucker banks—were consummated prior to July 1966, and the Attorney General had taken no action against those transactions by that date. Those transactions thus fall within the terms of the grandfather provision, and the correspondent associate programs in force at those three banks are, therefore, immune from attack under § 1 of the Sherman Act.

While the formation by C&S of a de facto branch was a unique type of transaction, it may fairly be characterized as an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in § 1842 (a)." Forming a de facto branch was a multifaceted operation—involving a multiplicity of purchases of stock by a number of parties, the adoption of the C&S logo by the de facto branch, the connection of the de facto branch with C&S personnel and information programs, the structuring of the bank to receive and administer all C&S banking services, and the establishment of formal C&S influence over the board of directors at the de facto branch. But even before its scope was expanded in 1970, § 1842 (a) was concerned with more than the literal "acquisition" of stock: It took broad account of the "indirect" control of stock, and the control of boards of directors "in any manner," by bank holding companies.[18] The grandfather provision creates immunity under § 1 of the Sherman Act, not simply under § 7 of the Clayton Act, an indication that its protection extends not merely to literal acquisitions, mergers, and consolidations, but also to "restraints of trade" simultaneous with and functionally integral to such transactions. Though multifaceted, the formation by C&S of a de facto branch was a unitary and cohesive undertaking in the sense that all the facets were closely coordinated, simultaneously instituted, and designed to serve the single purpose of fitting the new bank into the "C&S system." There is virtually nothing about the present correspondent associate programs that was not fully evident and in place from the moment the programs were launched. There has been no increase in C&S control, nor any change in the way it has been exercised.

[18] See n. 15, supra.

Whether these programs violated § 1842 (a)—as it applies today or as it applied when the programs began—is not relevant to our inquiry.[19] By its terms, the grandfather provision applies to transactions of the kind described in § 1842 (a). We cannot believe that Congress wished to grant the benefits of the provision only to transactions that plainly transgressed § 1842 (a). Such a construction would make application of the grandfather provision not only cumbersome and time-consuming,[20] but also flagrantly inequitable. The formation of a de facto C&S branch involved the direct and [19] The grandfather provision creates a conclusive presumption of compliance with the antitrust laws, but not necessarily of compliance with the provisions of the Bank Holding Company Act. See 12 U. S. C. § 1849 (f).

[20] If the correspondent associate program had received formal Board approval, any antitrust immunity created by the machinery in § 1849 (b) could of course have extended only to those features of the program clearly and expressly encompassed by the approval order. But § 1849 (d) applies even where, as here, there has been no approval order. If the provision were construed to cover only transactions actually violative of § 1842 (a), a court applying the provision would face the daunting—and quite senseless—task of dissecting a complicated, integrated transaction, such as the formation of a de facto branch, into those components which did and those which did not require prior approval of the Board.

indirect acquisition of bank stock, and the direct and indirect assertion of control over the governance and operations of a bank, by a bank holding company. Though unusual in form, such a transaction quite clearly falls within the class of dealings by bank holding companies which Congress intended, in § 1849 (d), to shield from retroactive challenge under the antitrust laws.

2. De Facto Branching Under the Sherman Act

Three of the 5-percent banks—the Park National, South DeKalb, and North Fulton banks—were formed after July 1, 1966, and their correspondent associate relationships with C&S are therefore beyond the reach of the grandfather provision of the Bank Holding Company Act and subject to scrutiny under the Sherman Act.

Each of these banks was founded ab initio through the sponsorship of C&S. Except for that sponsorship, they would very probably not exist. The record shows that other banking organizations had been unsuccessful in attempting to launch new banks in the area, and C&S affiliation and financial backing were instrumental in convincing state and federal banking authorities to charter these new banks. In short, these banks represented a policy by C&S of de facto branching through the formation of new banking units, rather than through the acquisition, and consequent elimination, of pre-existing, independent banks.[21]

Of necessity, the Government's attack on this process

[21] The Tucker Bank, which was not founded as a new bank by C&S, comes within the coverage of the grandfather provision, as explained in the previous section. De facto branching through the de facto "acquisition" of pre-existing banks might raise questions under the Sherman Act considerably different from those presented by the C&S practice of de facto branching through founding new banks.

is highly technical. Had the new banks been de jure branches of C&S, the whole process would have been beyond reproach. Branching allows established banks to extend their services to new markets, thereby broadening the choices available to consumers in those markets.[22] Having access to parent-bank financial support, expert advice, and proven banking services, branches of several city banks can often enter a market not yet large or developed enough to support a variety of independent, unit banks. Branching thus offers competitive choice to markets where monopoly or oligopoly might otherwise prevail. Furthermore, the branching process gives to outlying customers the benefit of sophisticated services which local unit banks might have little ability or incentive to deliver. The Government denies none of this, nor that C&S's program of de facto branching was, until 1970, the closest substitute to de jure branching allowed under Georgia law. Yet the Government insists that this de facto branching violated the Sherman Act because the parent bank and its de facto branches were legally distinct corporate entities and were obligated, therefore, to compete vigorously against each other.

It is, of course, conceded that C&S's de facto branches have not behaved as active competitors with respect either to each other or to C&S National and its majority-owned affiliates. But the Government goes further and contends that the correspondent associate programs have actually encompassed at least a tacit agreement to fix interest rates and service charges, see Interstate Circuit, Inc. v. United States, 306 U. S. 208, 227; United States v. Masonite Corp., 316 U. S. 265, 275–276; United States v. Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., 321 U. S. 707, 723; United States v. General Motors Corp., 384 U. S. 127, 142–143, so as to make the interrelationships—to that extent at least—illegal "per se." See United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U. S. 150, 221–226, n. 59; United States v. Parke, Davis & Co., 362 U. S. 29, 47. C&S vigorously denies the existence of any agreement to fix prices. The evidence in the record is mixed.

C&S did regularly notify the 5-percent banks—as it did its de jure branches—of the interest rates and service charges in force at C&S National and its affiliates. But the dissemination of price information is not itself a per se violation of the Sherman Act. See Maple Flooring Manufacturers Protective Assn. v. United States, 268 U. S. 588; United States v. Container Corp., 393 U. S. 333, 338 (concurring opinion). A few of the memoranda distributed by C&S could be construed as advocating price uniformity; on the other hand, the memoranda were almost without exception stamped "for information only," and the 5-percent banks were admonished by C&S, several times and very clearly, to use their own judgment in setting prices; indeed, the banks were warned that the antitrust laws required no less. The District Court observed that in fact prices did not often vary significantly among the 5-percent banks or between these banks and C&S National, but the court attributed this to the "natural deference of the recipient to information from one with greater expertise or better services." 372 F. Supp., at 628. And the court found as a fact that there was no "collusive price fixing." Id., at 626.

Were we dealing with independent competitors having no permissible reason for intimate and continuous cooperation and consultation as to almost every facet of doing business, the evidence adduced here might well preclude a finding that the parties were not engaged in a conspiracy to affect prices. But, as we indicate below, the correspondent associate program, as such, was permissible under the Sherman Act. In this unusual light, we cannot hold clearly erroneous the District Court's finding that the lack of significant price competition did not flow from a tacit agreement but instead was an indirect, unintentional, and formally discouraged result of the sharing of expertise and information which was at the heart of the correspondent associate program. Fed. Rule Civ. Proc. 52 (a); United States v. General Dynamics Corp., 415 U. S. 486, 508.

The Government argues, alternatively, that the correspondent associate programs have gone far beyond conventional "correspondent" relationships, and that consequently these programs have "unreasonably" restrained competition among the 5-percent banks and between these banks and C&S National. The District Court was not persuaded by this theory:

> "The difference between a pure correspondent relationship and a correspondent associate relationship as set forth in the evidence is merely one of degree, a fine line of demarcation almost impossible for the Court to perceive . . . . In either case there is a flow of information as to rates, practices, etc., which the Government apparently applauds or at least condones in a correspondent banking relationship." 372 F. Supp., at 628.

The court's dilemma is understandable, for in neither law nor banking custom has there developed a clear, fixed definition of the correspondent relationship: [23]

> "Correspondent banking is an interbank practice whereby 'city' correspondent banks provide a cluster of services to smaller 'county' banks in exchange for interbank deposits. Dating back to colonial times, correspondent banking originally provided an > extended network of independent unit banks with a link to financial centers, and at the same time furnished substitute central banking functions. Today, as a vital component of the era of electronic banking, it enables city correspondents to provide customers with a range of services that is varied, extensive and constantly expanding; one survey lists as many as fifty different categories."

Among the services typically provided within a conventional correspondent arrangement are check clearing, help with bill collections, participation in large loans, legal advice, help in building securities portfolios, counseling as to personnel policies, staff training, help in site selection, auditing, and the provision of electronic data processing. Furthermore, like C&S's program, the correspondent arrangement is often established as a prelude to a formal merger between the two banks.[24]

Nevertheless, C&S's program does appear to have gone several steps beyond conventional correspondent arrangements. C&S has closely advised the boards of directors of the 5-percent banks, supplied their chief executive officers, allowed full "branchlike" use of the C&S logogram, provided all the C&S services available at a de jure branch, dealt with the 5-percent banks through the C&S branch administration department, and provided constant and detailed information on prices and on all banking procedures.[25] It is conceivable that these relationships, separately or taken together, have restrained competition among the defendant banks more thoroughly or effectively than would have a conventional correspondence program. But even if the Government had proven this, which the District Court found not to be the case, that alone would not make out a Sherman Act violation. C&S has operated the 5-percent banks as de facto branches as a direct response to Georgia's historic restrictions on de jure branching, and the question therefore remains whether restraints of trade integral to this particular, unusual function are unreasonable. See Board of Trade of City of Chicago v. United States, 246 U. S. 231, 238. We turn directly to that question.

The central message of the Sherman Act is that a business entity must find new customers and higher profits through internal expansion—that is, by competing successfully rather than by arranging treaties with its competitors. This Court has held that even commonly owned firms must compete against each other, if they hold themselves out as distinct entities. "The corporate interrelationships of the conspirators . . . are not determinative of the applicability of the Sherman Act." United States v. Yellow Cab Co., 332 U. S. 218, 227. See also Kiefer-Stewart Co. v. Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., 340 U. S. 211, 215; Timken Roller Bearing Co. v. United States, 341 U. S. 593, 598; Perma Life Mufflers, Inc. v. International Parts Corp., 392 U. S. 134, 141–142. A fortiori, independently owned firms cannot escape competing merely by pretending to common ownership or control, for the pretence would simply perfect the cartel.

[25] Also, of course, C&S owns 5 percent of the stock in these banks—not a common facet of correspondent banking. But the Government neither challenges C&S's 5-percent ownership, as such, nor suggests that it aggravates the alleged antitrust problems.

We may also assume, though the question is a new one, that a business entity generally cannot justify restraining trade between itself and an independently owned entity merely on the ground that it helped launch that entity, by providing expert advice or seed capital. Otherwise the technique of sponsorship followed by restraint might displace internal growth as the normal and legitimate technique of business expansion, with unknowable consequences.

But these general principles do not dispose of the present case. C&S was absolutely restrained by state law from reaching the suburban market through the preferred process of internal expansion. De facto branching was the closest available substitute.[26] Just last Term, in a brief presented to this Court, the Justice Department told us that it was desirable and procompetitive for a bank to "[enter] de novo into areas foreclosed to branching by sponsoring the organization of an affiliate bank, and later acquiring the bank. This method of expansion is legal and a well-recognized practice used by large statewide banking organizations, and recognized by the federal banking authorities." [27] The Government acknowledged that such a sponsored bank could "be affiliated with its sponsor for purposes of correspondent relationships and other inter-bank services, including financial support," and that it could be "formed" by the parent bank's "officers, directors, or their associates" and could be "assisted" by the parent [26] This case does not require us to explore the conceivable antitrust problems raised by correspondent banking in all circumstances and in all its many forms. We deal here solely with the founding and maintenance of new de facto branch banks in the context of a state ban on de jure branching.

firm "until acquired and converted into a branch." [28] This is as good a curbstone description as any of precisely the relationships at issue in the present case.[29]

To characterize these relationships as an unreasonable restraint of trade is to forget that their whole purpose and effect were to defeat a restraint of trade. Georgia's antibranching law amounted to a compulsory market division. Accomplished through private agreement, market division is a per se offense under the Sherman Act:

> "[T]his Court has reiterated time and again that '[h]orizontal territorial limitations . . . are naked restraints of trade with no purpose except stifling of competition.'" United States v. Topco Associates, 405 U. S. 596, 608, quoting White Motor Co. v. United States, 372 U. S. 253, 263 (1963).

The obvious purpose and effect of a rigid antibranching law is to make the potential bank customers of suburban, small town, and rural areas a captive market for small unit banks.[30] C&S devised a strategy to cir-

[28] Id., at 16 and 17.

[29] The brief noted with approval an example where the sponsored bank had, according to state banking authorities, become a "satellite" of the parent bank. Id., at 16 n. 16.

[30] The banking business is, of course, riddled with state and federal regulatory barriers to entry. See United States v. Marine Bancorporation, supra, 418 U. S., at 628–629. But most of these barriers—e. g., chartering requirements—at least arguably serve the overriding public interest in maintaining customer confidence in the industry as a whole by assuring adequate financial stability and responsible management for all banks. Anti-branching laws, on the other hand, are now widely recognized as a simple device to protect outlying unit banks from the rigors of regional competition. See Report, President's Commission on Financial Structure and Regulation 59–63, 113 (1971); Note, Bank Charter, Branching, Holding Company and Merger Laws; Competition Frustrated, 71 Yale L. J. 502, 515–516 (1962). Smith & Greenspun, Structural Limitations on Bank Competition, 32 Law Contemp. Problems, 4, cumvent this statutory barrier. By providing new banking options to suburban Atlanta customers, while eliminating no existing options, the de facto branching program of C&S has plainly been procompetitive.

The Government suggests that a "conventional" correspondent relationship between C&S and the 5-percent banks would have been equally procompetitive and would have had the added virtue of facilitating competition among the 5-percent banks and between them and C&S National. This is mere speculation on the present record. Moreover, it is far from clear that a conventional correspondent relationship would have allowed C&S to put its full range of services into the suburban market which, in light of the antibranching law, was the very point of its policy and program. Putting to one side the total lack of realism in suggesting that C&S might have founded new banks that would have competed vigorously with it and with each other, cf. United States v. Penn-Olin Chem. Co., 378 U. S. 158, 169 (1964), the Government's argument wholly disregards C&S's ultimate goal of acquiring the new banks outright as soon as legally possible, a goal which the Government last year thought wholly proper. We hold that, in the face of the stringent state restrictions on branching, C&S's program of founding new de facto branches, and maintaining them as such, did not infringe § 1 of the Sherman Act.

B. The Clayton Act Claim

In the light of the previous discussion, disposition of the Clayton Act claim becomes relatively straight-

Rev. 611 (1973); Baker, State Branch Bank Barriers and Future Shock—Will the Walls Come Tumbling Down?, 91 Banking L. J. 119 (1974). See also United States v. Marine Bancorporation, supra, 418 U. S., at 162 n. 8.

forward. The issue under § 7 of the Clayton Act is whether the effect of the proposed acquisitions, approved by the FDIC, "may be substantially to lessen competition . . . in any line of commerce in any section of the country."

The Government established that C&S is the predominate banking institution in DeKalb County, Fulton County, north Fulton County, and the Atlanta area generally; that in these markets the commercial banking industry is quite highly concentrated in terms of market share statistics; and, of course, that the proposed acquisitions would increase C&S's nominal market shares.[31] The District Court did not decide whether the geographic markets proposed by the Government were the appropriate ones. But assuming arguendo that they were, the Government plainly made out a prima facie case of a violation of § 7 under several decisions of this Court. See United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, 374 U. S. 321, 362–366; United States v. Phillipsburg National Bank & Trust Co., 399 U. S. 350, 365–367; United States v. General Dynamics Corp., 415 U. S. 486, 497. It was thus incumbent upon C&S to show that the market share statistics gave an inaccurate account of the acquisitions' probable effects on competition. United States v. General Dynamics Corp., supra, 415 U. S., at 497–498; United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U. S. 602, 631. The District Court, like the FDIC before it, concluded that C&S had made the necessary showing that these proposed acquisitions would not "lessen" competition for the simple reason that under the correspondent associate program that had been continuously in effect, no real competition had developed or was likely to develop among the 5-percent banks, or between these and C&S National.

[31] See Appendix to this opinion.

As to present and past competition, the Government agrees there is and has been none. If this state of affairs were the result of violations of the Sherman Act, we agree with the Government that making the evil permanent through acquisition or merger would offend the Clayton Act. See Citizen Publishing Co. v. United States, 394 U. S. 131, 135. But we have already concluded that C&S's program of founding and maintaining new de facto branches in the face of Georgia's anti-branching law did not violate the Sherman Act, and the de facto branches which C&S proposes to acquire were all founded ab initio with C&S sponsorship. It thus indisputably follows that the proposed acquisitions will extinguish no present competitive conduct or relationships. See United States v. Trans Texas Bancorporation, 412 U. S. 946, affirming per curiam 1972 Trade Cases ¶ 74, 257 (WD Tex.).

As for future competition, neither the District Court nor the FDIC could find any realistic prospect that denial of these acquisitions would lead the defendant banks to compete against each other. The 5-percent banks theoretically could break their ties with C&S and its correspondent associate program, for these banks are each independently owned, but the record shows that none of the shareholders, directors, or officers of the 5-percent banks expressed any inclination to do so, and there was no evidence that the program has been other than beneficial and profitable for both C&S and the 5-percent banks.[32] The Clayton Act is concerned with [32] In the entire history of C&S's 5-percent program, only the Stone Mountain Bank terminated its relationship with C&S. of C&S banking methods. None of these factors exists with respect to the banks at issue in the present case.

It is true that C&S has recently been ordered by the state Banking Commissioner to trim back its percentage ownership of the suburban banks and to modify, in ways not yet fully clear, its "supervision" of those banks. See n. 11, supra. But the District Court considered this development and concluded that it would not lead to true competition among the defendant banks. The court explicitly found that the changes ordered would not affect the bonds of interbank consultation and cooperation which are at the heart of the correspondent associate program. 372 F. Supp., at 638, 643 & 643 n. 8.

APPENDIX

The District Court summarized the structure of various banking markets in the Atlanta area, and the statistical effects of the proposed acquisitions, in the following way. 372 F. Supp., at 629–632:

DeKalb County

Treating C&S National, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb as one banking organization, there are 19 commercial banking organizations operating offices in DeKalb County. In terms of total deposits and total individual, partnership and corporation ("IPC") demand deposits held by all banking offices located in DeKalb County, the top four banks, respectively, are C&S (offices of C&S National in DeKalb County, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb), First National Bank of Atlanta, Trust Company of Georgia, and Fulton National Bank. In terms of outstanding loans, the top four banks are C&S (offices of C&S National in DeKalb County, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb), Trust Company of Georgia, Tucker and Fulton National Bank. The shares of total deposits, total loans and total IPC demand deposits accounted for by the four largest banks are as follows:

Banks	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	Total Loans (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Top 2	38.3%	42.7%	34.8%
Top 3	51.8%	52.4%	47.3%
Top 4	62.9%	61.8%	58.2%

C&S (offices of C&S National in DeKalb County, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb) accounts for the following shares of total deposits, total loans and total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in DeKalb County.

Banks	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	Total Loans (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
C&S	24.1%	28.5%	20.1%

Chamblee, Park National and South DeKalb, all of whose banking offices are located in DeKalb County, account for the following shares of total deposits, total loans and total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in DeKalb County:

Banks	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	Total Loans (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Chamblee	5.7%	5.7%	5.9%
Park National.....	2.9%	1.5%	3.0%
South DeKalb.....	1.8%	2.5%	1.9%
	10.4%	9.7%	10.8%

Depending on the unit of measurement, Chamblee is the third or fourth largest bank headquartered in DeKalb County.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system (which would include offices of C&S National and South DeKalb) would account for 34.5% of the total deposits of all the banking offices located in DeKalb County, 38.2% of the total loans and 30.9% of the total IPC demand deposits. C&S would also be acquiring the third (or fourth) largest bank headquartered in DeKalb County.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the four largest banks would account for the following shares of the DeKalb County market:

Banks	Deposits	Total Loans	IPC Demand Deposits
Top 2 after mergers..	48.7%	52.4%	45.6%
Top 3 after mergers..	62.2%	62.1%	58.1%
Top 4 after mergers..	73.3%	71.5%	69.0%

Thus, if the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system's share of total deposits, for example, would increase from about 24% to 34%, or an increase of about 40%. The share of total deposits accounted for by the top 4 banks would increase from about 63% to 73%, while that of the top 2 and top 3 banks would increase from 38% to 49% and from 52% to 62%, respectively.

North Fulton County

There are nine commercial banks operating offices in North Fulton County. In terms of total deposits and total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in North Fulton County, the top 4 banks, respectively, are Sandy Springs, Roswell Bank, Fulton Exchange Bank and North Fulton. On June 30, 1970, however, there were only five banks operating offices in North Fulton County: the four banks just mentioned and Trust Company of Georgia Bank of Sandy Springs, which is now a branch of Trust Company of Georgia. The shares of total deposits and IPC demand deposits accounted for by the four largest banks are as follows:

Banks	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/70)	Total Deposits (6/30/70)
Top 2.....	57.8%	66.4%	64.0%
Top 3.....	70.1%	78.9%	80.2%
Top 4.....	80.3%	90.7%	91.9%

As of June 30, 1972, the North Springs Office of C&S East Point accounted for 1.7% of total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in North Fulton County.

As of June 30, 1972, Sandy Springs and North Fulton accounted for 36.4% and 10.2%, respectively, of total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in North Fulton County. As of June 30, 1970, they accounted for 34.4% and 11.7%, respectively, of total deposits held by all commercial banking offices located in North Fulton County.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system (which would include C&S East Point's North Springs Office, North Fulton and Sandy Springs) would account for 48.3% of the total IPC demand deposits held by all commercial banking offices located in North Fulton County and the four largest banks would account for the following shares of IPC demand deposits in North Fulton County:

Banks	IPC Demand Deposits
Top 2 after mergers	69.7%
Top 3 after mergers	82.0%
Top 4 after mergers	92.0%

Thus, if the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system's [33] share of total IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in North Fulton County would increase from 1.7% to 48.3%, and the C&S system's share in this area would be twice that of the second largest banking organization, the Roswell Bank. Two of the four largest banks in the area would become part of the Atlanta area's largest banking organization. In addition, the share of total IPC demand deposits accounted for by the top 4 banks would increase from 80.3% to 92.0%, while the shares of the top 2 and top 3 banks would increase from 57.8% to 69.7% and from 70.1% to 82.0%, respectively.

[33] These computations consider the 5-percent defendant banks as completely separate entities (rather than as constituting a part of the C&S system as actually is the case), and of course, do not relate to competition as such but rather to the assignment of statistical proportions to the various entities involved.

Fulton County

Treating C&S National and C&S East Point as one banking organization, there are 18 commercial banking organizations operating offices in Fulton County. In terms of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in Fulton County, the top 4 banks, respectively, are C&S (offices of C&S National in Fulton County and C&S East Point), First National Bank of Atlanta, Trust Company of Georgia and Fulton National Bank. The shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits accounted for by the four largest banks are as follows: [34]

Banks	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Top 2	63.0%	55.2%	61.3%
Top 3	78.8%	73.9%	78.1%
Top 4	89.4%	87.0%	88.8%

C&S (offices of C&S National in Fulton County and C&S East Point) accounts for the following shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices in Fulton County:

Bank	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
C&S	37.2%	30.8%	32.1%

[34] See n. 2, supra.

Sandy Springs and North Fulton, both of whose banking offices are located in Fulton County, account for the following shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in Fulton County:

Banks	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Sandy Springs.....	.7%	.8%	.9%
North Fulton.....	.3%	.3%	.3%
	1.0%	1.1%	1.2%

Depending on the unit of measurement, Sand Springs is the eighth or ninth largest banking organization in Fulton County.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system (which would include offices of C&S National in Fulton County, C&S East Point, Sandy Springs and North Fulton) would account for 38.2% of the total loans held by all banking offices in Fulton County, 31.9% of the total deposits and 33.3% of the total IPC demand deposits.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the four largest banks would account for the following shares in Fulton County:

Bank	Total Loans	Total Deposits	IPC Demand Deposits
Top 2 after mergers..	64.0%	56.3%	62.5%
Top 3 after mergers..	79.8%	75.0%	79.3%
Top 4 after mergers..	90.4%	88.1%	90.0%

Atlanta Area

Treating C&S National, C&S Emory, C&S DeKalb and C&S East Point as one banking organization, there are 31 commercial banking organizations operating offices in the Atlanta area, six of which operate offices in both Fulton and DeKalb Counties. In terms of total loans, deposits, and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in the Atlanta area, the top 4 banks, respectively, are C&S (offices of C&S National, C&S East Point, C&S Emory and C&S DeKalb), First National Bank of Atlanta, Trust Company of Georgia and Fulton National Bank. The shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits accounted for by the four largest banks are as follows:

Banks	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Top 2	60.5%	53.2%	58.0%
Top 3	76.2%	71.3%	74.3%
Top 4	86.7%	84.2%	85.0%

C&S (offices of C&S National, C&S Emory, C&S East Point and C&S DeKalb) accounts for the following shares of total loans, deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in the Atlanta area:

Bank	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
C&S	36.4%	30.0%	30.6%

Chamblee, Park National, South DeKalb, Sandy Springs and North Fulton account for the following shares of total loans deposits and IPC demand deposits held by all banking offices located in the Atlanta area:

Banks	Total Loans (12/31/71)	Total Deposits (12/31/71)	IPC Demand Deposits (6/30/72)
Chamblee	.5%	.6%	.8%
Park National	.1%	.3%	.4%
South DeKalb	.2%	.2%	.3%
Sandy Springs	.6%	.7%	.8%
North Fulton	.3%	.2%	.2%
	1.7%	2.0%	2.5%

If their deposits (as of 12/31/71) were combined ($71,142,252), these five banks would be the equivalent of the sixth largest banking organization in the Atlanta area. Sandy Springs and Chamblee are alone, the tenth and eleventh largest banking organizations in the Atlanta area, respectively.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the C&S system (which would include the offices of C&S National in the Atlanta area, C&S Emory, C&S DeKalb, C&S East Point, Chamblee, Park National, South DeKalb, Sandy Springs and North Fulton) would account for 38.2% of the total loans held by all banking offices located in the Atlanta area, 32.0% of the total deposits and 33.0% of the total IPC demand deposits. C&S would also be acquiring the tenth and eleventh largest banks in the Atlanta area.

If the proposed mergers were approved, the four largest banks would account for the following shares in the Atlanta area:

Banks	Total Loans	Total Deposits	IPC Demand Deposits
Top 2 after mergers..	62.2%	55.2%	60.5%
Top 3 after mergers..	77.9%	73.3%	76.8%
Top 4 after mergers..	88.4%	86.2%	87.5%

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

No. 73–1933

United States, Appellant, v. Citizens and Southern National Bank et al.	On Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Georgia.

[June 17, 1975]

MR. JUSTICE BRENNAN, with whom MR. JUSTICE DOUGLAS and MR. JUSTICE WHITE join, dissenting.

I agree that the District Court erred in holding that the correspondent associate programs are immune from Sherman Act scrutiny because they are subject to the "exclusive primary jurisdiction" of the Federal Reserve Board under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended. The District Court also erred, however, in holding that the United States did not prove the violations of § 1 of the Sherman Act and § 7 of the Clayton Act alleged, and I therefore dissent from the affirmance of its judgment.

The issues under the Clayton and Sherman Acts, while logically independent, are related; both present the question whether a large commercial bank, already possessing a substantial share of the Atlanta market, may lawfully acquire other banks, rather than expand internally. Three banks now control more than 75% of the commercial banking business in Atlanta. Today's decision assures that their dominions will soon be extended as arrangements they have made with independent banks to operate as "de facto branches" are solidified through merger. I cannot agree with today's decision that the Government is powerless to prevent this result.

I The Sherman Act

The "five percent" banks in this litigation entered into a relationship with C&S far exceeding that of "correspondent banking," the provision of check clearance, investment advice, personnel training or other specialized services in arms-length transactions.[1] From the very inception of these relationships, it was contemplated that the 5-percent banks would seek, and C&S would provide, advice and guidance with respect to virtually every business decision of significance. C&S provided advisory directors—treated by all parties as actual directors—made available operating manuals covering banking practices in minute detail,[2] and maintained a constant flow of bulletins whose contents ranged from admonitions about [1] Relationships labelled "correspondent banking" may call for careful scrutiny as the sale of specialized services by the corresponding bank shades into "consultation" by the correspondent on every business decision of significance. Correspondent banking, like other intra-industry interaction among firms or their top management, provides an opportunity both for the kind of education and sharing of expertise that ultimately enhances consumer welfare and for "understandings" that inhibit, if not foreclose, the rivalry that antitrust laws seek to promote. As one commentator on commercial banking practices has observed:

"communication, especially when it comes from those at the top of a hierarchy, tends to facilitate conflict resolution. Perhaps a great deal should not be made of this but competition is a form of conflict and, in the present context, conflict resolution is a form of restraint on competition."

Phillips, Competition, Confusion, and Commercial Banking, 19 J. Finance 32, 42 (1964).

Since the relationship of C&S to the 5-percent banks goes well beyond ordinary "correspondent banking," this case does not present an occasion for further examination of the lawfulness of these more limited interconnections among firms.

[2] The Consumer Credit Operating Bulletin (DX–311, E–1024) is illustrative. It explains what bank records should be established, the methods for arranging a repayment plan, and the procedures to be followed in perfecting a security interest. In addition, the manual sets forth C&S practice with respect to charges for late payments, extensions of repayment deadlines, and the notification of a borrower's employer about repayment delinquency.

the antitrust laws to exhortations to "get the rates [on loans] up." C&S, through its Branch Supervision Department, monitored the performance of the management of the 5-percent banks and was instrumental in having replaced those who did not measure up. These arrangements had the desired effect. The elaborate fabric of "consultations," of seeking "advice and guidance," eliminated the opportunity for rivalry among the defendant banks. The District Court found "no presently existing substantial competition between the 5-percent banks and C&S National or inter sese."

A

The Court concludes that antitrust scrutiny of the affiliation of three 5-percent banks is foreclosed by the grandfather provision of § 11 (d) of the Bank Holding Company Act, 12 U. S. C. § 1849 (d). That holding is plainly a distorted expansion of § 11 (d) beyond its language and purpose.

The concept of an amnesty for unchallenged structural arrangements in commercial banking first appeared in the 1966 Amendments to the Bank Merger Act, 80 Stat. 7. In those Amendments, Congress, responding in part to this Court's decisions in United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, 374 U. S. 321 (1963), and United States v. First National Bank & Trust Co. of Lexington, 376 U. S. 665 (1964), attempted to mesh antitrust considerations with review of proposed bank mergers by the appropriate regulatory agency. The resulting provisions, which mandate Justice Department participation in the regulatory approval process as well as consideration by the regulatory agencies of "competitive factors," and permit antitrust suit within 30 days of regulatory approval, appear today in the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, 12 U. S. C. § 1828. See United States v. First City National Bank of Houston, 386 U. S. 361 (1967); United States v. Third National Bank of Nashville, 390 U. S. 171 (1968). The 1966 Amendments also included a grandfather provision, 80 Stat. 10, that conferred immunity from antitrust challenge (except under § 2 of the Sherman Act) upon any "merger, consolidation, acquisition of assets, or assumption of liabilities" consumated before June 17, 1963, the date of the decision in Philadelphia National Bank.

A few months after enactment of the Bank Merger Act amendments, the "antitrust" provisions were written almost verbatim into the Bank Holding Company Act. Unlike their Merger Act counterparts, the 1966 Amendments to the Bank Holding Company Act were not principally addressed to integrating antitrust standards with the regulatory process, but rather to expanding the Federal Reserve Board's jurisdiction and regulatory powers. The antitrust provisions of the Holding Company Act amendments received little legislative attention; the brief reference to them in the legislative history indicates that their purpose was to "apply to bank holding company cases the same procedures as are now provided in bank merger cases . . . ."[3] Among the provisions so borrowed from the earlier Bank Merger Act Amendments was the grandfather provision, § 11 (d).

Because of congressional preoccupation with the regulatory features of the 1966 Amendments to the Bank Holding Company Act, interpretation of the antitrust provisions may involve as much an attribution of congressional intent as a discerment of it. This is particularly the case with respect to § 11 (d), which was transplanted from one regulatory statute to another with seemingly scant attention to the differences in the regulatory environment. Objections that grandfathering holding company acquisitions posed policy questions different from the retroactive immunization of mergers were quickly brushed aside,[4] and § 11 (d) was swept into law along with the other antitrust provisions. Thus, despite whatever dissimilarity of underlying policy considerations may have been exposed, Congress indicated that it considered the grandfather provisions in both statutes to advance substantially similar purposes. Accordingly, however difficult may be the discernment of the congressional intent expressed in § 11 (d), we must look for assistance to its counterpart in the Bank Merger Act, the only guidepost Congress has left us.

[3] As initially enacted by the House, the amendments contained no antitrust provisions. See generally H. R. Rep. No. 534, 89th Cong., 1st Sess. (1965). These were added later by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee and subsequently adopted by both Houses. See S. Rep. No. 1179, 89th Cong., 2d Sess., 10 (1969).

The grandfather provision of the Bank Merger Act amendments most assuredly did not provide sanctuary for then-unchallenged price-fixing, market division, or other cartel activity by banks. Congressional concern was much more narrowly directed. Philadelphia National Bank rejected a literal interpretation of § 7 of the Clayton Act that would have limited its application to stock acquisitions by banks, an interpretation that nevertheless enjoyed some acceptance prior to the decision. Congress was concerned about the difficulty of unscrambling pre-Philadelphia National Bank mergers undertaken in reliance upon the literal interpretation of § 7 the Court ultimately rejected, and accordingly immunized them from suit under that section.[5] But a provision barring suit under § 1 of the Sherman Act was also necessary to safeguard the same mergers because of our decision in Lexington Bank, supra. Thus although the resulting grandfather provision covered both the Clayton and Sherman Acts (except Sherman Act § 2), its purpose was to shield structural arrangements of the sort the Government challenged in Philadelphia National Bank and was continuing to challenge in the District Courts thereafter.[6]

Against the foregoing background, we confront the language of the counterpart in the Bank Holding Company Act. As enacted in 1966, § 11 (d) shielded an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in § 3 (a) of the Act." Section 3 (a) provided then, as today, that:

> "(a) It shall be unlawful, except with the prior approval of the Board, (1) for any action to be taken that causes any company to become a bank holding company; (2) for any action to be taken that causes a bank to become a subsidiary of a bank holding company; (3) for any bank holding company to acquire direct or indirect ownership or control of any voting shares of any bank if, after such acquisition, such company will directly or indirectly own or control more than 5 per centum of the voting shares of such bank; (4) for any bank holding company or subsidiary thereof, other than a bank, to acquire all or substanially all of the assets of a bank; or (5) for any bank holding company to merge or consolidate with any other bank holding company."[7]

Supp. 867 (SDNY 1965), cited in Hearings before a Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency on Amendments to the Bank Merger Act, 89th Cong., 1st Sess., 446, 463 (1965).

[7] Section 3 (a) had been in force since enactment of the Bank Section 3 (a) is thus the operative provision of the statute permitting the Federal Reserve Board to regulate the events therein described.

By "grandfathering" an "acquisition, merger, or consolidation of the kind described in § 3 (a)," Congress obviously exempted from antitrust challenge only the events for which Board approval would have been required. None of the transactions defined by § 3 (a), however, includes those features of the "correspondent associate" relationship that the Government is challenging under Sherman Act § 1 in this case. Clauses (4) and (5) of § 3 (a) refer, respectively, to an acquisition of assets and a merger of two holding companies. Clause (3) refers to ownership of voting stock by a holding company; the stock ownership by C&S is not, however, the salient feature of the affiliative relationship and indeed is not challenged in this case. Clauses (1) and (2) address the creation of a holding company-subsidiary relationship. The definitional provisions of § 2 (d) have undergone recent expansion, but in 1966 they designated a bank as a "subsidiary" if a holding company either (1) directly or indirectly owned or controlled 25% or more of its voting stock, or (2) controlled in any manner the election of a majority of its directors. These two conditions would often be satisfied simultaneously, and indeed shortly after enactment of the forerunner of this provision in 1956 it was suggested that the second condition was redundant. See Note, The Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, 9 Stan. L. Rev. 333, 337 and n. 59 (1957). Congress, however, was apparently concerned that stock interests could be so structured that a holding company could elect a majority of directors without satisfying the 25% ownership requirement.[8] Whether or not this fear was well-founded, it is clear that satisfaction of either condition required an arrangement whereby the holding company had the power to vote stock.

In establishing its "correspondent associates" C&S did not engage in the transactions described by § 3 (a) in 1966 and therefore sheltered by § 11 (d). Indeed, because of state law restrictions C&S could not resort to the methods described by § 3 (a) of the Holding Company Act and turned instead to more informal arrangements, including "understandings." While the functional equivalent of a holding company-subsidiary relationship could perhaps be created through informal affiliation, § 3 (a), at least until quite recently, has been triggered by the formality of control of voting stock. To be sure, § 2 (d) has always referred to a subsidiary as one whose stock is "directly or indirectly" owned or controlled or whose election of directors is controlled "in any manner" by the holding company.[9] But there has been no suggestion by Congress, nor by the Board, that this language would embrace the less formal arrangements by which the C&S banks operated in complete harmony with C&S. Indeed, the statutory clues suggest the contrary, that Congress was concerned with powers attached to stock, and that "indirect" ownership or control merely referred to their exercise derivatively, through an intermediary.[10]

101 Cong. Rec. 8028 (remarks of Rep. Patman). In the form initially adopted by the House, the Act would have defined as a subsidiary a bank over which another company was found by the Federal Reserve Board to "exercise a controlling influence." The Senate amendment substituted the provision ultimately enacted, the requirement of control of the election of directors. See S. Rep. No. 1095, 84th Cong., 1st Sess., 5 (1955).

[9] The reference to indirect ownership, though contained in § 2 (a) of the 1956 Act (defining holding company) was inadvertently omitted from § 2 (d). See 70 Stat. 134. The 1966 amendments corrected the omission. See S. Rep. No. 1179, 89th Cong., 2d Sess., 8 (1966).

In the 1970 amendments to the Holding Company Act, 80 Stat. 1760, Congress expanded the reach of § 3. The Act now defines "control" to include a relationship whereby a company "directly or indirectly exercises a controlling influence over the management and policies of the bank. . . ." § 2 (a)(2)(C), 12 U. S. C. § 1841 (a)(2)(C). Congressional preoccupation with stock is still evident since there is a statutory presumption that "any company which directly or indirectly owns, controls or has power to vote less than 5 per centum of any class of voting securities of a given bank or company does not have control over that bank or company." § 2 (a)(3).

---

[10] Section 2 (g) of the Act defined indirect control or ownership:

"For the purposes of this chapter—

"(1) shares owned or controlled by any subsidiary of a bank holding company shall be deemed to be indirecty owned or controlled by such bank holding company;

"(2) shares held or controlled directly or indirectly by trustees for the benefit of (A) a company, (B) the shareholders or members of a company, or (C) the employees (whether exclusively or not) of a company, shall be deemed to be controlled by such company; and

"(3) shares transferred after January 1, 1966, by any bank holding company (or by any company which, but for such transfer, would be a bank holding company) directly or indirectly to any transferee that it indebted to the transferor, or has one or more officers, directors, trustees, or beneficiaries in common with or subject to control by the transferor, shall be deemed to be indirectly owned or controlled by the transferor unless the Board, after opportunity for hearing, determines that the transferor is not in fact capable of controlling the transferee."

This provision was added by the 1966 amendments to adopt interpretations previously made by the Board. S. Rep. No. 1179, supra, at 8.

Nevertheless the Board has by regulation established a rebuttable presumption of control where a company > "enters into any agreement or understanding with a bank . . . such as a management contract, pursuant to which the company or any of its subsidiaries exercises significant influence with respect to general management or over all operations of the bank. . . ." 12 CFR § 225.2 (b)(3) (1974).

Arguably, the Board's interpretation would now bring within § 3 the affiliation of the 5-percent banks with C&S. But the Board's interpretation is based upon recent legislation expanding the reach of the Board's regulatory authority.[11] Since I do not suppose Congress intended in 1966 to immunize transactions of the kind it had not yet brought within § 3, the 1970 amendment is relevant only because it demonstrates the limited character of the transactions previously embraced by § 3 and "grandfathered" under § 11 (d).

The conclusion that Congress had traditionally not brought informal arrangements within § 3 (a) is reinforced by the provisions of § 4 (a)(2) of the Act, which forbid a bank holding company to > "engage in any business other than that of banking or of managing or controlling banks or of furnishing services to or performing services for any bank of which it owns or controls 25 per centum or more of the voting shares."

This provision was enacted in 1956, and as early as 1960 the Board by regulation interpreted "services" to include many of the functions C&S has performed for the 5-percent banks. Included in the Board's interpretation are "(1) establishment and supervision of loaning policies; (2) direction of sale or purchase of investment securities; (3) selection and training of officer personnel; (4) establishment and enforcement of operating policies; and (5) general supervision of overall policies and practices." 12 CFR § 225.113 (1974). The differentiation of these activities from "control or management" and their inclusion in § 4 of the Act rather than in § 3 vividly exposes the fallacy of today's holding invoking § 11 (d) to foreclose scrutiny of the "correspondent associate" relationship of three of the 5-percent banks. Since § 11 (d) shielded only the events then described in § 3 (a), the conclusion is compelled that all the 5-percent banks are properly before us on the Sherman Act counts.[12] Accordingly, I turn to the merits.

[11] Congress specifically noted the expansion. See S. Rep. No. 1084, 91st Cong., 2d Sess., 6 (1970); H. R. Rep. No. 1747, 91st Cong., 2d Sess., 12. See also Note, The Bank Holding Company Act Amendments of 1970, 39 Geo. Wash. L. Rev. 1200, 1213–1214 (1971).

The District Court found that there were no express agreements among the defendant banks to fix prices or divide markets that would call for application of the per se rule, United States v. Socony Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U. S. 150, United States v. Sealy, Inc., 388 U. S. 350, [12] My conclusion that the affiliative relationships are not within the terms of § 3 (a), at least prior to the 1970 amendment, is further supported by the scope and outcome of the 1968 investigation of C&S undertaken by the Federal Reserve Board staff. The investigation was convened specifically to inquire into a possible violation of § 3. The staff was principally concerned with the pattern of ownership of the stock of the 5-percent banks, especially by C&S officers and employees. Ultimately the staff found this acceptable, so long as C&S did not finance the purchases. There is no indication, however, that the staff concerned itself with communications between C&S and the 5-percent banks with respect to such matters as interest rates, loan repayment policies, or other terms of business.

but it also found that the effect of the association was to eliminate all competition among the banks involved.

The Court finds the restraints embodied in the "correspondent associate" relationship reasonable because of state law restrictions that blocked, for a time, the avenue of internal expansion by C&S. If the question before us were the lawfulness of these arrangements at their inception, this solution might be satisfactory. The question would be a close one, however, calling for a delicate balancing of the immediate benefits of expanded banking services against the more distant, but nevertheless real, danger of permitting the restraints necessary to circumvent de jure barriers to expansion to continue longer than the conditions that justified them. The inquiry would, of course, have to take into account the possibility that expansion would occur under less restrictive conditions. New entry by an unaffiliated bank [13] or entry with a more limited form of sponsorship—a period of initial assistance, followed by a withdrawal of the sponsor's influence, at least to a conventional correspondent relationship [14]—might have sufficed to provide the ex-not wholly supported by the record, since in his trial testimony

[13] There is little doubt that pent-up consumer demand for additional banks would sooner or later induce efforts to organize new ones. More questionable, however, is whether regulatory authorities would respond promptly to permit new entry. In general, regulatory policy has been thought to retard formation of new banking institutions. See Peltzman, Entry into Commercial Banking, 8 J. Law & Econ. 11 (1965).

[14] The record demonstrates that such a chain of events is possible. Citizens & Southern Bank of Stone Mountain, organized in 1957 with C&S assistance, functioned as a correspondent associate from 1959 until 1970. At that time it declined an offer of acquisition by C&S and became independent of the C&S system. Appellees have argued that Stone Mountain represents a unique case because a majority of voting stock remained in the hands of a single family not intimately tied to the C&S system. This contention is pansion cited here as a justification for incidental restraints. The judicial resources consumed by such an inquiry in any particular case would not be insubstantial, and the very difficulty of making such judgments has in many cases led us to prefer per se rules. United States v. Socony-Vacuum Co., 310 U. S. 150, 220–221 (1940); Northern Pacific R. Co. v. United States, 356 U. S. 1, 5 (1958); United States v. Sealy, Inc., 388 U. S. 350 (1967); United States v. Topco Assoc., 405 U. S. 596 (1972). See also United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, 374 U. S. 321, 362 (1963).

The issue in this case, however, is not whether the affiliation of the 5-percent banks was lawful at its inception, but whether it could lawfully continue, for the Government sought only an injunction. By the time the Government brought suit, Georgia law permitted C&S to branch freely in the Atlanta suburbs. Because the rule of reason requires us to assess the lawfulness of a restraint in light of all the circumstances, Chicago Board of Trade v. United States, 246 U. S. 231, 238, the lawfulness of the practices at their inception, even if assumed, could not be controlling, for changes in market conditions can deprive once-reasonable arrangements of their justification. United States v. Jerrold Electronics, 187 F. Supp. 545, 560–561, aff'd, 365 U. S. 567 (1961). See also United States v. E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., 353 U. S. 586, 596–598 (1957). The claimed desirability of the challenged arrangements as a response to now-repealed restrictions of Georgia law is therefore relevant only insofar as it may also be claimed that continuation of such arrangements undisturbed by the Sherman Act would be vital to their creation were Georgia to reinstate its restrictions in the future. Put another way, we need concern ourselves with the lawfulness of "de facto branches" as a response to state law restrictions only if appellees make a convincing showing that no bank would engage in "de facto branching" without a guarantee of perpetual noninterference from the antitrust laws.

Mr. Mills Lane, President of C&S from 1946 to 1970, referred to three other banks having a similar structure of ownership. (App. 378–379, referring to Pelham, Fayetteville, Hogansville). The example of Stone Mountain does, in any event, demonstrate that sponsorship can occur under conditions ultimately leading to independence of the sponsored institution.

Certainly it is open to C&S to argue that no rational banker would sponsor a de facto branch unless assured that the resulting relationships could continue in perpetuity. But this sort of argument has seldom carried the day in this Court, see United States v. Sealy, supra; United States v. Topco Assoc., supra, and I do not find it persuasive in this case. A bank hemmed in by state antibranching restrictions will presumably find it profitable to take a small stock interest in an independent bank, to offer assistance and thereby attempt to win consumer loyalty through an expanded use of its own name. C&S presumably found these arrangements profitable at their inception. The record does not show whether C&S actually charged the 5-percent banks for such assistance as site selection, economic surveys, equipment procurement, and other promotional services; there is no suggestion, however, that C&S provided these services at an ultimate loss, and presumably gains ultimately accrued to the provider. True, C&S hoped to cement the relationships through merger, but it is not clear that these expectations were essential to the initial undertaking. Indeed, C&S continued to provide assistance to certain banks as to which there was little prospect of ultimate acquisition by C&S. (App. 378–379.) Our concern, in any event, lies not with protecting the expectations of C&S but with avoiding disincentives to the provision of desirable services. Sponsorship will be profitable to a sponsor bank assuming that there is a demand for the services of the sponsored bank and that the sponsor can recoup in some fashion a return for its assistance. These conditions should be sufficient to induce a profit-seeking bank, chafing under antibranching restrictions, to sponsor a new entrant even if permanent arrangements are forbidden.

This case, therefore, does not present an occasion for consideration whether the restraints incident to "de facto branching" are lawful when undertaken in response to a prohibition of de jure branching, a position the Court says the Government took last Term in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U. S. 602 (1974). The restraints incident to the affiliation of the 5-percent banks with C&S must be examined in light of conditions prevailing at the time of suit, which include the ability of C&S to branch freely in the Atlanta suburbs.

The arrangements between C&S and the 5-percent banks resemble a "common brand" marketing agreement or a franchising arrangement in which the franchisor itself deals directly with consumers as well as providing entrepreneurial skill and other assistance to franchisees. Such combinations may, under certain circumstances, enhance competition. Common brand marketing may permit a group of small firms to exploit promotional economies and thereby compete with larger enterprises whose business spans several geographic submarkets. Franchising may facilitate entry by allowing an entering firm to save on promotional expenses and to purchase needed entrepreneurial assistance. Restraints invariably accompany these combinations for the purpose of promoting product uniformity, for some standardization of product is indispensible to the success of the scheme. Because notwithstanding accompanying restraints such combinations may on balance enhance competition, it would be a mistake to regard them as per se or even presumptively unlawful, and lower courts have not done so. See, e. g., United States v. Topco Associates, Inc., 319 F. Supp. 1031, 1038 (ND Ill. 1970), rev'd on other grounds 405 U. S. 596 (1972); Siegel v. Chicken Delight, Inc., 448 F. 2d 43 (CA9 1971); Susser v. Carvel Corp., 332 F. 2d 505 (CA2 1964). But the Sherman Act limits the scope of cooperation incident to such arrangements. The participants may not fix prices nor divide markets. United States v. Topco Associates, Inc., supra; United States v. Sealy, Inc., supra; United States v. Arnold Schwinn & Co., 388 U. S. 365 (1967). Such combinations, moreover, warrant careful scrutiny when their participants collectively possess a dominant share of a common market, as to which there are substantial barriers to entry, for these conditions enhance the profitability of price collusion among participants and thus may tempt them to standarize price as well as other product attributes.

Despite the acceptability generally of common brand or franchising arrangements, they pose particular difficulty in the commercial banking context. Many features of a commercial bank's services are set by regulation, thus inhibiting competition by restricting the number of product features that individual firms are free to vary. With interest rates on loans fixed by law, for example, competition is confined to such "non-price" features as collateral requirements or repayment policies. With competition thus already delimited, few additional restraints incident to a cooperative scheme can be tolerated before competition is extinguished entirely. Moreover, the entry barriers posed by regulation enhance the danger that incidental cooperation will be extended to abolish all rivalry. These considerations suggest that cooperative arrangements in commercial banking should be permitted only where their competitive benefits are clear, and where the combined market shares of the participants dispell the fear that price collusion will accompany them.

The situation here fails to satisfy the test. The combined shares of C&S and the 5-percent banks are substantial under any of the alternative definitions of the geographic market cited by the Court. Ante, pp. 35–42.[15] Furthermore, the cooperative arrangements involve not a group of small firms allied to challenge a larger rivals, United States v. Topco Associates, supra, but instead the dominant firm which thereby extends its hegemony. In a market so concentrated as is commercial banking in Atlanta, the most must be made of opportunity for rivalry among existing firms. Cf. United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, supra, at 372. The 5-percent banks are now substantial, thriving enterprises,[16] inhibited from competing with C&S only by the [15] The District Court made no finding as to the relevant geographic market, accepting the Government's contentions arguendo in deciding the case. The Court apparently does the same. A report prepared by the Government's expert witness concluded that while the Atlanta SMSA was too large to be considered an integral geographic market, the constituent counties of DeKalb and Fulton were "reasonable geographic areas within which it is appropriate to analyze the competitive effects of the proposed mergers." (E–83). This is an approximation, of course, since the same report revealed that a number of DeKalb residents use Fulton County banks, thus suggesting that in certain respects DeKalb and Fulton County banks compete for the same business. Accordingly, it appears that defining the geographic market to include both DeKalb and Fulton Counties would be justified under our cases. See United States v. Phillipsburg Bank, 399 U. S. 350 (1970); United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, supra.

"correspondent associate" relationship. I would hold that the Government is entitled to an injunction, specifically against the continued use by the 5-percent banks of the C&S name, the continued use of advisory directors furnished by C&S, and continued "consultations" between the management of the 5-percent banks and C&S, including the flow of memoranda for "advice and guidance."

II The Clayton Act

The Court concedes that under our prior decisions the Government has established a prima facie case under § 7. Ante, p. 32. But the Court affirms the District Court's determination that the acquisitions add nothing of anticompetitive significance to the pre-existing "correspondent associate" relationship. Since I have concluded that the relationship itself violates the Sherman Act, I also disagree with the Court's affirmance of the District Court on the Clayton Act issue. Since, in my view, appellees can no longer rely upon the affiliation to rebut the Government's prima facie case, I would remand to the District Court for consideration of the "convenience and needs" defense of 12 U. S. C. § 1828 (c)(5)(B). But I also disagree with the Court's conclusion that the acquisitions add nothing of significance to the existing arrangements, and I would therefore reverse even if I accepted the Court's disposition of the Sherman Act counts. I state briefly my reasons for so concluding.

North Fulton, Park National, and South DeKalb were smaller and more recenty organized, but all have experienced vigorous growth. The average annual rate of deposit growth for the two years preceding January 1, 1970, was 102% for North Fulton and 50% for Park National, in contrast to a national average rate for all commercial bank deposits during the same period of slightly more than 10%. South DeKalb, organized in late 1969, had more than doubled its deposits from $1.5 to $3 million during the first half of 1970. (App. E–422, E–546.)

If not acquired, the 5-percent banks have the power to break their ties with C&S and the likelihood that any would do so may be expected to increase as the demand for their services grows and as their managements acquire additional business experience. However risky these ventures may have been at their inception, the recent performance of the 5-percent banks attests to their present viability.[17] Because of continuing population growth of the Atlanta area, the banks may anticipate an expanding demand for their services. These circumstances might well induct the management of a 5-percent bank to assume a more independent posture, at least to shop around among other large Atlanta banks for more conventional "correspondent" services.[18]

Quite apart from what the managements of the 5-percent banks might do, it is most improbable that C&S would long be happy with existing arrangements if acquisition were enjoined. The record demonstrates the aggressive, expansionist performance of C&S, having increased its Atlanta offices from three in 1946 to more than 100 by the time of trial. It is quite inconceivable

[17] See n. 16, supra.

[18] Officers of both C&S and the 5-percent banks testified that they had not contemplated a severance of relations, but this testimony does not establish what would happen if the acquisitions were enjoined. Had the managements testified that they would not consider severence under any circumstances, such declarations of an intention to eschew a course dictated by economic self-interest would have to be viewed with skepticism. See United States v. Falstaff Brewing Co., 410 U. S. 523, 568–570 (1973) (concurring opinion).

Whether the 5-percent banks would have been formed at all had their principals expected the Clayton Act to bar ultimate acquisition by C&S is a different question. I am not troubled by it for essentially the same reasons that have led me to conclude above that enjoining continuation of correspondent associate relationships would not deter sponsorship of de facto branches under state law restrictions on de jure branching. See pp. 14–15, supra.

that such a firm would long be content to continue operations through de facto branches in which its interest was limited to 5%. The formation of de jure branches, ultimately in competition with former "correspondent associates," would be a plausible result.

The foregoing are not "ephemeral possibilities," Brown Shoe Co. v. United States, 370 U. S. 294, 323, that antitrust analysis should ignore. Section 7 was intended, as we have repeatedly said, to "arrest anticompetitive tendencies in their 'incipiency.'" United States v. Philadelphia National Bank, supra, at 362. In applying the § 7 standards, we are obliged to hold acquisitions unlawful if a reasonable likelihood of a substantial lessening of competition under future conditions is discernible. E. g., United States v. Continental Can Co., 378 U. S. 441, 458 (1964); FTC v. Procter & Gamble Co., 386 U. S. 568, 577 (1967); United States v. Falstaff Brewing Corp., 410 U. S. 526, 539 (1973) (concurring opinion). While inquiry as to future market conditions and performance inevitably involves speculation, fidelity to the congressional purpose requires us to resolve reasonable doubts in favor of the preservation of independent entities. This is perforce true where, as here, the market is highly concentrated and the acquiring firm is the dominant one.

My Brother WHITE reminded us in his dissent last Term in United States v. Marine Bancorporation, 418 U. S. 602, 653, that > "In the last analysis, one's view of this case, and the rule one devises for assessing whether this merger should be barred, turns on the policy of Clayton § 7 to bar mergers which may contribute to further concentration in the structure of American business. . . . The dangers of concentration are particularly acute in the banking business, since 'if the costs of banking services and credit are al> lowed to become excessive by the absence of competitive pressure, virtually all costs, in our credit economy, will be affected. . . .'" (Citations omitted.)

Today's decision permits C&S, the dominant commercial bank in Atlanta, further to entrench its position. Two other rivals, which together with C&S control more than 75% of the banking business in Atlanta, may now be expected to follow suit, acquiring their own "de facto branches." [19] I believe these developments exemplify the "further concentration in the structure of American business" that § 7 was designed to prevent. Accordingly, I would reverse the judgment of the District Court.

[19] The record indicates that at the time C&S applied for regulatory approval of the acquisitions, its two largest competitors, First National Bank of Atlanta and Trust Company of Georgia, had sought and in some cases had obtained, approval for similar acquisitions of affiliated banks. App. E–39.
